Please note:

Preserved lines, cliff railways and pier railways are NOT included. No reference is made to railways in Ireland, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man. Please see ‘Notes for the Fifth Edition’ for treatment of temporary closures.

This internet version (5.02) now includes all the material available to me: i.e. that in Version 5.01, later contributions by others, Newsletter material up to and including May 2020 and my own researches since. It does include some events in early 2020 but does not claim to include all events up to that point. As before, thanks are due to those who have sent information and to the British Newspaper Archive, source of so much of what has been found, and to Ted Cheers for organising the internet version.

Information on omissions and errors will be gratefully received.

The intention now is to provide sources from local newspapers for as many items as possible, even those presently taken from the most trustworthy sources, since these are now much more readily available to others and many of the sources cited are no longer easily found since the books involved are out of print.

RED type indicates changes since the first internet version, including a few that were lost in the course of preparing for the internet.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book has developed out of one privately published in 1996, covering only opening dates. The result of going public then was that contact was made with a large number of people, who have helped to make the present work much more accurate than it would otherwise be; very many additions and corrections have been made. Needless to say, the responsibility for any remaining errors and shortcomings lies with the compiler.

Pride of place has to go here to Bryan Wilson, who maintained a regular and most informative correspondence with me from 1996 until shortly before his death in 2007. Not only did he provide much original material and press references from his own researches and point out many secondary sources with which I was unfamiliar, but he also acted as a modern-day information clearing house, passing on items from others. Even more, his encouragement was the major factor in keeping me going on a project that several times was nearly abandoned as impossible.

Major thanks must also go, in historical order, to:-

The late C. R. Clinker, who published much along the lines of this work. Although this book sometimes follows a different approach from his, nevertheless a great debt remains. The original of this work was begun by adding his list of closed stations to those still in the timetable and without that as a basis it is unlikely that this would have had any existence.

The Railway Studies Library at Newton Abbot and its staff, particularly Don Steggles, who was librarian at the time most use was made of it. Its collection of Bradshaws provided a roughly yearly base for development.

The staff at the library of the National Railway Museum at York, especially Philip Atkins, who also answered by post a number of queries about items that had slipped through my net.

Mr M. Bell of the Bodleian Library kindly provided direct access to the Library’s almost complete collection of Bradshaws and enabled us to be built up than could possibly have been done in any other way. My thanks are also due to Mr. J. Slatter for his assistance at the stack.

G. Dow), Lancashire & Yorkshire (J. Marshall), South Eastern & Chatham and its constituents (A. Gray), London Brighton & South Coast (J. T. Howard Turner) and London & South Western (R. A. Marshall).

The late J Britton.

A. Brackenbury was kind enough to look at the earliest version and make many helpful suggestions and has made many later contributions, especially relating to excursions after stations had been closed for normal services.

The staff of the Somerset Local Studies Library at Taunton and the Reference Library at Bridgwater, whose facilities have been most frequently used.

Col M. Cobb kindly answered postal queries.

Dr J. V. Gough has provided access to his very detailed Midland records and helped solve a number of complex issues.

O. Smart of the RCHS supplied photocopies of many useful articles from the earlier issues of the Society’s publications.

D. Geldard provided much material from his own researches, and a massive amount about names on tickets from the collection of the late J Britton.

R. A. Cooke provided a great deal of information for later editions from his own researches in newspapers and company minute books, particularly on the general workings of the Great Western, Llanelly and Monmouthshire Railways, together with many references for station name-changes from RCH records for all areas.

R. Maund sent much information; this has covered all aspects and has been especially helpful for narrow-gauge lines (especially in Wales) and post-war excursions and the like, gleaned from working timetables and publicity at the National Archives. All references to Clinker’s papers at Brunel University were provided by him, as were many references supporting existing ones; the latter have not been used in order to save space.

P. Reynolds has provided much on Swansea and Llanelly areas, especially the Swansea & Mumbles.

The following individuals have either offered information and suggestions as a result of seeing earlier versions of the book or provided it via Bryan Wilson or others and their help is much appreciated: M. Addison, M. Back, D. Banks, S. Berry (much on South Wales). R. Bond (especially northern Lancashire), G. Borthwick (especially Motherwell area and Scottish working timetables), G. Boyes, Dr S. Bragg (North Eastern Railway), E. Bredee (Chester, Stockport, Lancashire and Welsh newspapers), Dr R. Brettle, Joe Brown, M. Bussell, D. M. Cattanach (much on North British), C. Chapman, J. M. Charters (see JNMC in sources, below), R. Coates, T. Cooper (especially Isle of Wight), L. Crowther, P. Deaves (Dawlish), P. Drake, J. Edgington, R. Forsythe, J. Fergusson (see @PJ in list of sources), J. Gilmour (much about Lancashire from local newspapers and company records, including material provided for him by J. Swift and Tony Graham). J. Glover, R. Green, M. Hale (especially on lesser South Wales companies), I. Hayes, Dr R. Hellyer, R. Herbert, N. J. Hill, P. Howat, C. Holden, M. H. Jack (Scottish matters), P. Jeffries, P. Kay, G. Kenworthy (from East Anglian newspapers), D. Kimber, Tony Kirby, N. Langridge, A. Lauder, D. M. E. Lindsay (Scottish matters), M. Lloyd, A. Maclean, Dr J. McGregor, J. Meir, D. Miller, I. Mitchell, C. E. Mountford, N. Ogilvie, C. Overtom, B. Pask, D. R. Pedley (especially about South West Scotland), Nigel Pepper (Whitebeck), B. Polley, M. Prescott, W. Robertson, A. J. Robertson,
J. W. P. Rowledge (particularly Neath & Brecon material), A. Rush, J. Savage, P. G. Scott, A. Simpson (NB matters), R. S (Stewart) Smith (much from Ordnance Survey maps), W. Smith, D. Stirling (much from Scottish Record Office about North British), David G. Thomas, P. D. Thomas, Dr J. Tolson, Dr D. Tunnicliffe, I. Umpleby (post-passenger use), E. Vaughan, G. Waite (OS information via Dr. J. V. Gough), Glyn Williams, A. Young and D. Yuill.

Various points have come from the Newsletters of the Railway Chronology Group of the Railway & Canal Historical Society (available at Newton Abbot) edited by Don Steggles and, latterly, by Ted Cheers.

Finally – and here we are back to historical order – my thanks go to the Railway & Canal Historical Society for agreeing to publish this work; to Grahame Boyes and John Gough for their initial help and encouragement; and to Stephen Bragg for much detailed sub-editorial work in removing errors, clarifying entries and achieving greater consistency of presentation, as well as providing preliminary help with the maps. Grahame Boyes spent much time over publication and marketing of the earliest editions.

For handling the design, typesetting and production of the last two editions my thanks must go to Malcolm Preskett; and for the excellent redrawn maps included at the end of this document, I must thank Richard Dean.

The compiler’s apologies go to any who have been inadvertently omitted. This is especially likely in the case of those whose works were read long before I had any intention of publishing one of my own. The notes I made then were not related to their sources in the way that more recent ones have been.

My thanks to Ted Cheers for the lengthy and exacting task of preparing this edition for the internet.

NOTES FOR FIFTH EDITION

The present compiler had intended to make the fourth edition the last but the large amounts of material since sent by others and the availability of so many local newspapers on the internet meant that much more exact information is possible in so many cases that a revised edition seems worthwhile. That said, this book cannot claim to be the final authority; there are still considerable gaps in knowledge, particularly in the history of the earliest lines. Some of these will probably be filled as more newspapers are available on-line and one day it may even happen that all the records at Kew will be available electronically. However, even then there will probably still be gaps.

Temporary closures. Until fairly recently it was normal practice to keep lines and stations open as far as possible during engineering work and to resume services as soon as practicable after accidents. In those circumstances the few exceptions where there were closures of any duration seem to deserve a mention in the record. However, it has now become the practice to close lines completely for engineering work and for lengthy periods following accidents – in the latter case sometimes including stations far removed from the accident. The result is that the continued inclusion of such cases would occupy an unjustifiably large proportion of the space available. The logical cut-off date for this change of approach would seem to be 1994, with the privatisation of Railtrack; though the London Underground was not then directly affected, the approach used there seems to owe much to the example set by the main system. Thus, from then on, only particularly lengthy closures for engineering work, and closures for such reasons as conversion to metro-type services, or destruction by fire of individual stations are now included.

CORRECTIONS

The Railway Chronology group in collaboration with the compiler intends to produce updates and corrections where such information with its relevant source has been provided and verified.

INTRODUCTION

The object is to show the outline history of all stations in England, Scotland and Wales, and to do so as accurately as the limitations of the evidence allow. The aim is to see matters as far as possible from the point of view of the traveller in times past, not, as so many railway histories do, from the companies’ standpoint. Thus the information given is what did happen, not what ‘officially’ happened. Therefore details are given not only for stations which appeared in the public timetable but also for those provided on the main system for e.g. the private use of a landowner, workmen only, or sporting events only. Inevitably, information about this second group is far more patchy. Those stations built but not opened (and mythical ones) are included because they sometimes appear in railway books and local histories as though they did exist and anyone looking in this book might otherwise be puzzled by their non-inclusion. It also includes all excursions and ticket platforms known to the compiler since it is not always clear from the evidence now available whether the former were fully detached from their parent stations and which of the latter were available for passenger use, particularly alighting. Some non-time-tabled services that operated detached from the main system are included in outline in Section 7, the object of which is to give a general idea of usage of railways and, where possible, to list books containing more about the topic. Sites visited only by railway enthusiasts’ specials are not included. Blackpool Tramways have now been moved to the Section on Metro Lines.

At many points arbitrary decisions have had to be taken over what should be included and what not. No definitions can be constructed that allow watertight distinctions to be made: some stations do not fit neatly into the categories of ‘public’ and ‘private’ mentioned in the first paragraph. Even the term ‘railway’ is impossible to define exactly. Generally, for the purpose of this work, a railway is a form of transport running on rails that has exclusive use of its route, as opposed to a tramway operating along public streets with other traffic. However, mongrel lines, such as that to Weymouth Quay did, and do make some use of public roads whilst mostly operating on dedicated track; they are included. Most ‘metre’ lines are in Section 6: even though they make much use of older routes the number of stops (more like those of bus services) makes separate treatment desirable. Section 7 contains various lines that are sometimes included in railway books but are not railways in the sense described here. In addition, operating practices have altered very much in the two centuries involved. As a result there are bound to be some what will regard as inconsistencies. Furthermore, the information has been compiled over many years and the author would be foolishly if he were to claim that his judgement has remained consistent for all of this. It should also be remembered that words were not always used in 1850 in the same way as 1950 and are used by different people at the same time. ‘New station’ was, and is, often used generally to mean new buildings on the same site, even by people within the railway industry; the phrase rarely matches the arbitrary definition laid down by some railway historians. ‘Engineer’ equalled anyone concerned with engines as far as the press of long ago was concerned: thus it could be applied to an engine driver or the man who worked the machinery on an inclined plane too steep for early steam engines to haul up the wagons on their own. ‘Short trains’ were local stopping trains, ‘luggage trains’ carried all sorts of goods and ‘breaks’ stopped trains. A ‘policeman’ might be a signalman or a level-crossing keeper.

It is hoped that this compilation will be of use and interest to a wide spectrum of readers, from those who just want the answers to those with a serious interest in railway history who might want to use it as a help for their own research. It is mainly for the latter that very full reference is made in Section 3 to the sources used; others will probably find the summary form of the explanation given at the start of Section 4 adequate for their needs.

Whilst reasonably reliable dates for closures have been available for many years, the same cannot be said about opening dates. For these much contradictory evidence is in print, including many errors copied from book to book down the years. Great difficulty was often found in compiling the present work because many writers do not give the source of their information and it was impossible to tell which of two (or more) rival dates was more likely to be correct. Whilst it cannot be claimed that this work has traced everything back to its source, at least it can be reasonably claimed that much has been done to eradicate errors and that the approach used has been designed to make it as easy as possible for others to see where further work is most likely to be needed. The basic rule for those setting out on their own researches must be: check as much as you can for yourself, including material presented here. Sources have been included in the body of the text rather than as footnotes, because the numbering involved in the latter method would in itself have added substantially to the acreage of the book and driven both the compiler and those wanting to use them to distraction.

Ideally, all dates should have been derived from contemporary sources such as railway company records and local newspapers; even given the extra help now available secondary sources still have to be used for many items. The organisation is designed to enable extra material and corrections to be fitted into any later edition that might be published. The type of material presented here is notoriously liable to misprints and copying errors. Each time it is rewritten, further errors are likely to creep in and old ones come back. The aim is to create a basic text that can be adapted rather than one that would need rewriting.

Finally, it should be stressed that the information presented here relates only to passenger use. Whilst some stations did open and close for goods on the same dates as they did for passengers, these were a rarity. Parcels traffic, which deserves more attention than it generally receives from railway historians for the role it played in e.g. enabling village shops to offer a much wider range of goods, was generally handled by passenger stations (but not most halts) since it was carried in passenger trains. Otherwise, the history of goods traffic can be a complicated matter. Some stations opened for goods long before, others long after, they opened for passengers; some only ever handled one or the other. It could happen that the first consignments of coal, general goods and livestock arrived at widely separated times. Closure could similarly occur by instalments. A further complication is that the Railway Clearing House, especially in the early years, tended to list in its Hand-books, and even show on its maps, separate passenger and goods stations in the same town as though they were a single combined station, even though they were on clearly different sites. Goods traffic is an aspect of railway history where much further research is needed. Clinker’s Register of Closed Passenger Stations and Goods Depots at least provides a start for those wishing to deal with this aspect for themselves.

OUTLINE HISTORY OF PASSENGER SERVICES

The railway system needs to be seen as something that evolved in response to the country’s needs, not as something that suddenly appeared, working in roughly the same ways as the present system. However, there were also many constants of railway travel: there is a sameness about passengers’ complaints down the years, whether made against early private enterprise, later nationalised or modern privatised railways. In the 1840s, letters to The Times repeatedly complained about, amongst other things, lack of punctuality, safety matters, overcrowding, lack of co-operation between companies, booking clerks’ ignorance of their line’s services, the reluctance of officials to take any notice of complaints and the tendency to put profit before other considerations. Floods disrupted railway services in the autumn of 1841; floods disrupted railway services in the autumn of 2000.

H Williams, in Railways in Wales, refers to the ‘70 heroes who clambered aboard without knowing if they were going to live to tell the tale’ in his description of the trial of Trevithick’s engine between Merthyr and Abercynon on 21 February 1804. Perhaps even those who rode on Trevithick’s circular railway near Euston in 1808 also have some remote claim to be regarded as early passengers.

The earliest railways, often called ‘tramways’ or ‘tramroads’, were short lengths of line designed to complement existing forms of traffic, particularly river- or canal-borne. A line would be laid, for example, from a coal-mine to a canal where the gradient made a direct canal link impracticable; full trucks would go down by gravity and horses would haul the empties back up. As time went on, lines became longer and, in the early nineteenth century experiments were made with moving steam-engines, though it took a quarter of a century of trial and error before fairly effective machines were developed. Whilst these early lines were intended for the carriage of minerals, in some cases, where the route was of use to others, the practice developed of allowing ‘passengers’ to travel on top of the loads or in empty trucks. Needless to say, little exact information about this practice exists; it was informal (perhaps depending on a small tip to the ‘driver’?) and these early lines were mostly in areas remote from the fashionable society of the time and thus resulted in little written evidence, usually only coming to public attention through the inquests resulting from those falling off. The practice was so common that companies had to advertise that they would take severe action against ‘passengers’ and those of their employees who allowed them to ride. One such was an advert from the Hetton Coal Company in Durham County Advertiser (24 May 1828) and the Stockton & Darlington had a similar one in the same paper on 27 April 1832. As the carriage of passengers became more organised, special accommodation was provided, either in cleaner carriages attached to goods trains or in special trains restricted to passengers. They still copied established practices, such as those used on toll roads.

The design of early railway carriages is itself a clear piece of evidence of the evolution from road to railway transport. Some companies allowed private individuals to put their own carriages on the line in return for payment of toll, others sold leases to private contractors, allowing them to run services: modern privatised franchises represent something of a return to a system abandoned in the 1830s and 1840s. Such services, usually still horse-drawn, were able to pick up and set down at any convenient point.

Even with the advent of company-provided and steam-hauled services, initial practice was somewhat informal. Several companies at first still set down and picked up virtually anywhere, even on some lines where ‘stations’ were listed. Stations as we know them were initially provided only at the main centres, perhaps even just at the termini; level crossings were favourite places for early stops. RGH Thomas’s description of practice on the early Liverpool & Manchester Railway would have been typical of that on many early lines: ‘Passengers wishing to alight told the guard when joining the train, and if any were to be taken up, the policeman [signalman and often level crossing keeper as well] signalled the driver to stop … There were no platforms or buildings apart from the gatekeeper’s cottage, and this served as a waiting room for passengers in cold or wet weather and at night.’ There was much experiment as companies sought to find the best (and most profitable) way of serving the traveller. Many early stations were cheaply built and easily abandoned if not profitable. The Lancaster & Preston Junction re-sited some of its ‘sentry-boxes’ very soon after opening. The Edinburgh & Glasgow classified some of its first stations as ‘temporary’ while it waited to see if enough people would use them to make them worth keeping. Whishaw, writing about 1840, classified stations as ‘first-class’ (only the faster trains stopped at these), ‘second-class’ and ‘stopping-places’, a practice followed by many railway companies. Timetables referred to some of their least important stops as ‘Road’, ‘Gate’ and ‘Gatehouse’ stations. ‘Lodge’, ‘request stop’, ‘signal stop’ and ‘halting place’ are also to be found in early timetables and the local press. Some companies, especially in Scotland, called their main stations ‘depots’ and their minor stops ‘offsets’.

Initially, following the practices of road travel, fares were quoted for ‘inside’ and ‘outside’ passengers. Soon this was replaced by numbered classes, ‘First’, ‘Second’ and so on – the number of classes provided varied from company to company. Other terms were also used. The Glasgow to Greenock service advertised fares for ‘stand-up’ carriages. After Gladstone’s Act of 1844, Parliamentary fares were introduced. These were designed to provide third-class passengers with a minimum standard of frequency, comfort and speed of travel, but they did not prevent companies from providing even cheaper services as well; excursions frequently still ran in open waggons, not always provided with seats. Gradually market forces took over and companies improved standards beyond the legal minimum as they realised that the cheapest seats provided the bulk of their revenue and the biggest potential for expansion.

Some passengers were carried by ‘mixed’ trains that included both passenger and goods wagons. Some companies advertised that passengers were carried by goods trains, especially overnight ones; presumably these were even cheaper and slower, perhaps not even including proper passenger carriages. The complication caused by these last is that evidence, e.g. from the Birmingham & Gloucester and the North British, shows that some places received their only passenger service in this way; since these services often only show up in vague footnote references or by the accidental survival of handbills, almost certainly some locations not listed in this book did have a passenger service of sorts by this means.

Some places were only served, at least for part of their existence, by trains (perhaps only one each way) on one or two days a week. These services were designed to take people to and from the nearest principal town on its market day(s). Many of them simply involved extra stops on passenger lines, and market-day trains were given extra time to cope with this. Others, however, ran on lines that normally only carried goods trains. In these cases the timetable only quoted the terminus, leaving one to guess what happened in between. Since times allowed were generous and the interruption to other traffic would not have been as serious as on passenger lines it may be that in some cases the 'stop anywhere' principle applied, particularly on the homeward journey. The most surprising thing, though, is that such services ever appeared in a national timetable – they could not have been much use to travellers from outside the area. The probable explanation is that the company's clerk copied the timetable without thinking about it and sent it off to the publishers who did likewise. One oddity is that these services show an opposite characteristic to routine ones: several are shown for lines in the North East, probably sparing with detail, while those provided by the Great Western have only been detected from the local press and company records. It is clear that some of these services have not yet come to light; it may well also be that those quoted had a longer life than the timetables suggest.

Casual ways were tolerable on short lines operating in isolation but would not do for trunk lines designed to link major centres with a fast and reliable service. Thus the Liverpool & Manchester listed 17 intermediate stops in 1831; the Great Western had 23 in nearly four times the distance when it opened throughout to Bristol in 1841. There were also great differences in the publicity given to services and stations. The Great Western gave full details of regular stops in national public timetables from the start, while many companies in the North East gave only an outline of their services, even in their own timetables and local handouts. Thus stations unrecorded so far almost certainly existed on the latter if not on the former. However, some unorthodox arrangements existed, even on major routes much later (see e.g. Milepost items, Pollicott in Section 4). In early March 1894 (before the West Highland line was open to the public), Lord Burton and his guests were taken in the contractor's saloon from Craigendoran to Spean Bridge. In June 1903, the Marquess of Breadalbane gained for his wife the privilege of travelling in the brake vans of North British goods trains between Crinanrigh and Bridge of Orchy in connection with their walks in the hills; she paid first-class fare and provided a written indemnity. See J. McGregor's book The West Highland Railway (John Donald, 2005), pages 221-2, and same author's article in History Scotland, March/April 2010.

One option open to early travellers was to hire their own train. This happened quite frequently until the motor-car gave freedom to travel at any time. From July to September 1842 the London & Greenwich table in Bradshaw carried a note saying that anyone wanting to return from Greenwich after the last train had left at 10 p.m. could engage a special on application to the inspectors on duty; the price of the train was fifty shillings plus one shilling (then the first-class fare to London) per passenger above fifty. Common usages included parties of the well-to do who wanted to go to race meetings and to cope with family crises. One actual case was revealed by The Times (16, 18 January 1851) in an accident report: on the 8th a Mr Hiviland urgently wished to go to Cambridge several hours before normal service began to attend his father's death-bed (his train hit a stray goods wagon at Ponders End, killing a railwayman). The report mentioned other examples of specials, including ones to Newmarket. In March 1868 the Stockton & Darlington was faced with a request from a Mr Hildyard that additional trains should be run to and from Stanhope. Since an earlier concession to his request had resulted in trains running with an average of 1½ passengers they declined but did offer to provide a special train on reasonable terms whenever he wanted one (RAIL 667/68).

A variant on this was provided by an advertisement put in The Times of 5 April 1852 by the Vale of Neath. They had provided covered first-class and open excursion carriages specially adapted for viewing 'the justly celebrated scenery of this valley and its tributaries' (principal waterfalls were listed). Parties taking at least twelve tickets could have an excursion carriage attached to an ordinary train or, on giving notice, a special train. The latter could be stopped at passengers' option. It is not clear whether the stop was just for a longer look at the scenery or whether it would have been long enough for a ramble – ordinary traffic would then have been infrequent.

The Kyle of Lochalsh line included 'ladder stops' between stations, so called because a ladder was put down to help passengers from the lineside; a photograph shows one such, 'of LMS vintage, between Achnasheen and Achnasheen' on page 15 of D Jenkinson's The Highland in LMS Days, Pendragon Partnership, 2004. Also see Whitrope Siding in Section 4.

There were also irregular stops. In The Story of Coniston, A. Cameron and E. Brown, published by authors, 2002. 'one of the authors' recalled being set down at Park Gate level crossing between Torver and Coniston. It is most unlikely that this example was unique, though such usage would probably have been confined to branch lines out of sight of higher authority.

The system grew naturally in the sense that those lines most needed and most likely to be profitable were built first and fairly rapidly linked together in a system that joined the main centres of population. Long-distance travelling often involved the use of several companies' lines but many of these were planned from the outset to complement one another – e.g. the London & Birmingham and the Grand Junction linked London to the Liverpool & Manchester, thus joining four of England's major centres. Parliament did not seek to lay down a strategic network, as happened in some continental countries (and even to some extent in the United States, with its generous land-grants to transcontinental lines) but the basic laws of economics meant that what initially developed was not far removed from what a planned network might have looked like. Indeed, leaving the job to individual companies got lines built faster, since it resulted in development from many points at once, though much effort was also wasted on promoting lines that were never built. Here it should be noted that the 'manias' bulking large in some accounts were upsurges in the promotion of lines; the actual building and opening of new ones proceeded at a steadier pace. However, Parliament did intervene extensively over the operation of lines: an endless stream of laws was passed on such matters as safety and fares as it sought to protect the individual against possible monopoly abuse.

Private enterprise did not always benefit the traveller. When Hudson gained control of two routes to Leeds, he closed one and sent all traffic by the longer route. The hapless shareholders of the Exeter & Crediton and would-be travellers in that neighbourhood stood helplessly by whilst their completed line lay unused owing to inter-company wrangling. When the opening date was at last announced, Trewman's had this to say: 'Two or three haymaking seasons have passed away, the crops of grass on the line were abundant and people began to speculate upon the probability of shareholders receiving a dividend by the sale of hay'. Railway officials concerned to boost 'their' company could be deliberately obstructive of the interests of the travelling public at stations served by more than one company or at junctions. There was an odd mixture of co-operation between companies at some points and virtual warfare at others.

Once the main outline had been laid down, further lines were added: as branches, as cross-country routes, and as lines competing for existing routes (e.g. between London and Birmingham) though it needs to be remembered that the competitive element often only affected the termini, intermediate places being served by only one of the lines as they took different routes between main cities. Whilst some of these provided much needed services, it has also to be said that some, particularly in the latter part of the nineteenth century, owed more to the Napoleonic aims of certain company chairmen than to the real needs of travellers and shareholders. Examples were lines such as the Great Central’s route to London, the competitive lines of the North British and Caledonian in Central Scotland and those of the South Eastern and the London, Chatham & Dover in the south-east. Whilst closure has wiped out most of the first two cited, the last mostly survive as vital commuter services; this is the result of later residential development which could not have been foreseen by those who built the lines.

There was a clear logic to the amalgamation of lines that contributed to a single route, and this happened almost from the start: in 1844 a group of lines centred on Derby united to form the Midland Railway, and in 1846 the London & North Western was formed by combining the Grand Junction (which had already absorbed the Liverpool & Manchester and several smaller lines), the Manchester & Birmingham, and the London & Birmingham. It could also provide a way of ending inter-company arguments: the South Eastern and London, Chatham & Dover Companies buried their differences by creating the South Eastern and Chatham Railway Companies Managing Committee, which effectively made one company of them, though legally they remained separate. Amalgamations were to continue right through to 1922, though Parliament was increasingly reluctant to authorise them. However, for a long time the number of companies in existence grew because new ones were being formed faster than old ones were being lost to amalgamation. Typically, a branch line would be locally promoted by those who expected to gain from it. While legally it was an independent company, usually the understanding from the outset was that it would be operated by whichever main company it joined. Occasionally such lines were independently run, but these were rarities. At a later stage such lines were usually absorbed, at a discount (most railways cost a lot more to build and were less profitable than their optimistic supporters estimated), by their big brothers. By the end of the century new openings were tailing off, so that amalgamations now tended to outweigh new creations. In Section 4, stations are generally attributed to the companies owning or operating them in 1922 or at their closure if this was earlier; reference is rarely made to the companies which had opened them. Exceptions are made for those absorbed a few years before Grouping and for the two parts of the South Eastern and Chatham (technically a Managing Company).

Almost from the outset there were also closures. At that stage, companies were in full charge of their affairs and could apply a swift axe to any line or station if they felt it was not paying its way. These were comparative rarities, though a few lines were so financially insecure that they were closed and re-opened several times or lurches on precarious hands in the hands of a receiver.

Another early development was the creation of special arrangements for workmen, who were provided with cheap travel on early morning and evening trains. Sometimes this was an obligation placed on railways by Parliament as a condition of allowing the demolition of housing in town and city centres; in other cases, the initiative seems to have come from employers. The facility could be provided at ordinary stations, or by means of special workmen-only stations which did not appear in the public timetable. Railway historians have probably made more of a distinction between ‘ordinary’ and ‘workmen’s’ stations than their users did. The most common workers’ stations were those provided for coal miners and, during the two World Wars, for munitions workers – many of whom were women. In both cases, there was a need to bring workers some distance to their pits and factories and no other means of transport was available. It should be noted that many miners’ stops, including those which preceded public stations, would have been on sidings off the running lines; in some cases they would have alighted directly onto the ground. A wide variety of other industries was also served. Workers were sometimes carried as ‘passengers’ to and from stations not used by the general public in such cases as herdsmen accompanying cattle and pigs or grooms with racehorses.

During the First World War all railways were taken temporarily into government management. This period also saw the first major batch of closures, mostly designed to free workers for the army. These were meant to be temporary but some of the stations involved never reopened. The benefits found from working the system as a whole were clear and logic might well have prevailed to maintain the railways as a single system. However, that change was too great for many to accept and the outcome was a compromise of sorts. The railways were reorganised into four big companies: Great Western, Southern, London & North Eastern, and London Midland & Scottish. This left an element of competition in services between major centres. Already the railways, which had had an effective monopoly of inland passenger traffic for much of the nineteenth century, had started to face competition over short distance inner-city routes from electric street-trams; now they were also faced with petrol-driven bus competition in rural areas at a time when the major ‘Industrial Revolution’ industries such as coal and steel were in difficulties, so that the cross-subsidisation between profitable goods and some unprofitable passenger services, which had previously occurred, now became more difficult. The outcome was that the new companies embarked on a wave of closures in the early 1930s, especially in cases where a big new company had inherited two lines which were to a large extent duplicates. There were still some new openings, but these were mostly designed to foster commuter traffic, particularly in the London area. The Great Western continued to open ‘Halts’ to try to beat off the competition but its example was only copied to a limited extent by others.

The Second World War again saw the network taken under government control. During this war the system was heavily worked and some parts were damaged by enemy action but the needs of the time meant that investment was minimal and that the system was simply patched to keep it going. According to The Railway Magazine of September & October 1942 (p 311): ‘For war workers more than 200 new halts and stations have been opened, but these cannot, of course be specified’. This both illustrates the scale of the operation and helps to explain why information about these stations is hard to find – clearly, not all of them have been included in this book. The railway companies’ history of their war contribution states that at one stage nearly 6,500 additional passenger trains per week were run for government factories; one factory at Chorley required 426 of these. This plus the need to move large numbers of troops to training camps, for leave, and to the ports for embarkation, meant that civilian traffic was severely curtailed. Afterwards there was no possibility of private investment making good the damage of the war years, especially given the post-war levels of taxation. Thus some form of continued government participation was inevitable, though the details might have been different. Nationalisation followed, effective from the start of 1948. It was still in some ways a partial measure: initially, an element of competition between the Regions into which the railways were divided remained and no serious attempt was made to integrate bus services, nationalised at the same time, with the railways. Although the theory was that politicians would not interfere in the determination of the railways, in practice the increasing losses incurred meant that they often did so; in any case, politicians tend, by a process of natural selection, to be compulsive meddlers. The result was re-organisation, re-re-organisation, and so on.

Immediately after this war, railways still had a near monopoly of travel over longer distances. This was eroded as private car ownership and long-distance coach services grew. Thus the railways faced mounting losses. A fuel crisis in 1947 led to another batch of ‘temporary closures’ some of which became permanent. A coal shortage early in 1951 resulted in another similar but smaller batch. Some attempt was made to fight the competition, e.g. by the electrification of some main line services, but many services were felt to be beyond redemption and from 1950 there was an accelerating number of closures. By now an elaborate system of public enquiry plus final ministerial approval had to be followed before closure could legally occur. Dr Beeching was brought in from industry to try to stem the losses; his Report, published in 1963, recommended further large-scale closures and tried to set out criteria for the future running of a profitable network. In practice, closures continued, but not according to a plan: lines were considered individually and survival or closure depended ultimately not only on the lack of profitability of a line but on such matters as who was Minister of Transport and how many marginal constituencies would be affected. The closures tailed off in the mid-1970s (the Alston branch, closed in 1976, being the last). The ‘system’ that has been left clearly lacks logic in that some areas still have lines with closely-packed stations while in others only the largest centres are still served.

Since then, the picture has been one of mild expansion. A number of stations and short stretches of line closed in the 1950s and 1960s have reopened; a few new ones have been added. The main developments have been the continued expansion of the London Underground and provision of ‘metro’ lines giving frequent services to closely-set stations in major urban areas. Much of the latter has depended on political considerations and the degree of local initiative applied; Scotland has been particularly favoured in this respect as far as ‘orthodox’ considerations are concerned.

Most recently, the railways were privatised in 1994. This represented the sharpest break in the railways’ history: evolution was abandoned, replaced by undiluted and contrived theory. Some improvements have been made but problems have resulted from the division of responsibility between various groups operating the ‘system’. The present writer felt, and still feels, that the vast sums spent on the legal and other non-productive aspects of this process, including the expenses incurred when franchises are renewed or revised, would have been far better spent on direct investment in the railways themselves. It would surely not have been beyond human ingenuity to have found a way of making private investment available by way of something akin to the debentures issued by public companies, whilst keeping the basic structure intact. No attempt is made here to follow the labyrinthine complications of the privatised system.

Comings and goings – some statistical comments

No exact statistical survey is worthwhile because of the difficulties of definition. Some stops listed in timetables were weekly-only market ones, perhaps just pick-up and drop-off points beside level crossings, and, over the years, many obvious stations were re-sited or replaced by others so what constituted a ‘new station’ is open to debate: for the second reason alone anyone seeking to balance the rough figures of openings and closures that follow is doomed to failure. Suffice it to say that at one time or another well over 9,000 clearly existed in their own right. In approximate terms 500 were open by the end of 1840. Thereafter additions by decades were, in the decades ending:

By the outbreak of war in 1914 another 1,000 had been added; from then until Grouping less than 100 completely new stations were provided; from 1923 to the start of the Second War about 500 more were opened; less than 50 joined them between 1939 and Nationalisation in 1948; from 1948 to the end of 1976 only 70 or so were added; since then over 400 have been opened, some on or near sites previously abandoned apparently for ever.

Closures represent even more of a problem because most of the early ones related to stations replaced by others or whose services were diverted to others nearby. Ignoring those types, half-a-dozen places had completely lost their services already by 1840. From then until 1880 50 or so were closed each decade. The last twenty years of the nineteenth century only saw about 30 closures but there was some acceleration in the next 14 years with about 70 going. The First War resulted in the ‘temporary’ closure of about 400, half of which did not reopen afterwards. Another 60 went before the end of 1923 but then losses accelerated. By 1939 more than another 900 had gone (400 in 1930-1 alone); the Second War accounted for 250. By the end of 1960 (before Dr. Beeching’s time, please note) 1,800 more had gone. The next ten years saw the end of another 2,000 (more than three-quarters in the period 1962-6). Since then the position has been much more stable: 70 were lost in the early 1970s and only 30 since.

In addition details are given of when stations were closed and reopened or moved from one site to another.

There are now about 3,000, including those on the London and Glasgow underground systems, the Docklands Light and Tyne and Wear Metro.

The book also includes about 800 sites used by trains but not shown in the public timetables. Some of these were for workers and would have dealt with more passengers in their lifetimes than many orthodox stations did; others were private, for the use of a particular family, or were only used for a single day to serve a special event.

In addition, brief coverage is given of more than 130 lines that provided various services of less orthodox natures.

SOURCES and INFORMATION

This section lists and describes the sources used, in order to aid understanding of the main text, to show the likely limits of accuracy, and to assist those who might wish to follow certain items more fully for themselves. The arrangement is that the primary sources used are first discussed, and then the information derived from them is described in more detail than is given at the beginning of Section 4. Finally, all sources are listed.

Ideally, everything should have been derived from, or checked against, primary sources but there is a limit to what one person, even given the help listed in the acknowledgements, can do with such a vast topic as this. Strictly, at least two first-hand sources known to be completely independent of each other should be used for each item but the nature and availability of the evidence is such that one is often lucky to find one fairly believable source, let alone two unimpeachable ones, so that in practice a mixture of primary and secondary sources has to be used. The sources quoted are the best available to the compiler at the time of writing. A basic underlying principle of the work has been that better sources were substituted as they became available.

CONTEMPORARY SOURCES

Railway Companies

Railway companies’ records, such as Board Minutes, should be the best starting point, but, remarkably, they often do not readily provide the answers, especially in the case of stations that were opened after the line on which they were situated: either the Minutes do not give the information at all or it is buried in the detailed records of some sub-committee and the volume of the records of some companies deposited at Kew is such that it would take months of research to find (or not find) one date. Even where the information is given, it should, if possible, be verified against another source, though some have tended to use railway material uncritically. The clerks and other officials who kept the records were as capable as other human beings of making copying and other errors, and of making up records to satisfy superiors interested only in seeing that spaces on the forms had been filled. Anyone thinking otherwise should remember that these employees were the ones whose carefree operating methods led to so many mishaps, fortunately mostly minor, in early railway operation. That said, it is obvious that the further one moves from the original time, the greater the possibility that some intermediary has created an error.

Official sources could be inaccurate. In 1926 a record of the routes, statutes, opening dates & other particulars of the Great Western Railway was prepared within that company as a sort of stocktaking exercise after the changes of 1922 and 1923, when a number of smaller companies were added to the GW; a reprint was published by Avon-Anglia in 1986. According to CR Clinker, the original was produced in a hurry; it certainly contained many errors.

Returns to Parliament

Parliament’s concern for the public interest meant railway companies were called upon to provide various pieces of information which were collated and published as ‘Returns’, which provided much information of use in compiling this work. An early example was a Select Committee of the House of Commons, which collected information about fares, passenger numbers and the like for a period from the start of 1838 to mid-1839. In 1840 the Board of Trade was given various regulatory and inquisitive powers; its publications were initially grandly entitled Report of the Officers of the Railway Department to the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade, but were much more prosaically titled as time went on. In 1846, owing to the amount of work resulting from new projects, this work was transferred to a new body of Railway Commissioners (whose reports were thus ascribed) but this did not result in any gains so in 1851 the Board of Trade took over again. In 1919 the relevant responsibilities were transferred to the Minister of Transport, whose reports were published under the heading of The Ministry of Transport. Here their returns are all treated as though they were part of the continuous sequence of records that they were in practice, They included such matters as the reports of inspections of new lines before opening, accidents, and statistical details of the companies’ operations. The last of these has provided most information for this book. The continuous sequence began with one for the second half of 1840. Initially, the returns covered half-yearly periods but in the 1860s the Board standardised on issues of figures for the complete calendar year, though some companies continued to provide information based on their own accounting years. At Kew, the returns are to be found in the series RAIL 1053/... The first few bound volumes contain some of all of the types of return mentioned earlier; the later ones used in connection with this book contain only statistical material. The return for the first half of 1841 is available in much less detail (in 1053/2) than for the other half-years thereabouts. That for the half-years between July 1845 and June 1847 has only so far been found at the House of Lords Record Office.

When a company opened its first stretch of line, the date of opening was often directly quoted; in other cases, this was done indirectly – a note would say ‘Return from [date X]’. Given the official nature of these returns, it should be possible to rely on this information as accurate. In the vast majority of cases where it has been possible to check against company minutes, press reports and the like, the dates do coincide. However, there are a few cases where the balance of the evidence suggests that the dates in the returns might be wrong. Perhaps a company’s clerk misunderstood what was wanted or sent the wrong date (perhaps for formal rather than public opening); perhaps copying or printing errors occurred at the receiving end. Where a modern source gives one date, the return another, and no means has been found for determining which is more likely to be right, the modern source has been used for the date given in the body of the work and a note added in Section 5. It should be said that the further checking against other contemporary sources has been taken, the more frequently it has been found that the dates provided in these reports were the correct ones.
The Press

The local press is an obvious source for verification and generally a useful selection of papers is available on microfilm in the Local Studies or Reference sections of major libraries. More recently the British Newspaper Archive (available on the internet) has become an invaluable source. However, there are inevitably gaps and new openings did not always make the news, especially once railways had lost some of their novelty value. Sometimes companies did what one might think would have been standard practice for commercial organisations seeking extra custom and inserted advertisements for their new line or station but this happened more rarely over time.

One trap is that sometimes one has to rest content with a statement like: ‘On Monday next the line from X to Y will open’. Confirmation that it did open is not always given and there were sometimes last-minute delays owing to failed inspections and the like; since the date of the source is always quoted here, it will be evident which statements were before and which after the event. Even where it is said that a line did open on a specific date, it is not a guarantee of accuracy; especially with short items it is impossible to be sure that the news was first-hand. The Great Western advertised the opening of its extension to Wootton Bassett Road for 16 December 1840 but actually opened it on the 17th. At least two local papers duly announced that it had opened on the 16th. Papers sometimes referred to partly built or intended stations as if they already existed. There are also problems in interpreting ‘Wednesday last’ (if a Friday publication, did they mean two days ago or nine? – news was collected and published in a more leisurely fashion then). Similarly, does ‘yesterday’ relate to the day the item was written or to the newspaper’s publishing day?

When dealing with local papers one often cannot be sure of the source. Was it one of the paper’s own staff? Was it some local correspondent? Was it copied from another paper? The identical wording often found in reports makes it obvious that the last was a standard practice and the dating was not always amended so that ‘last week’ was really two weeks ago. Usually it is possible to work out which were nearest to the event (geographically as well as in time) but, especially with very early events, there may be cases where the copies of the paper originating the story have not survived or are not presently available.

Papers also varied in their ‘locality’. At one stage, some claimed to cover large areas: one such was The Hampshire Chronicle, Southampton Courier and General Advertiser for the South & West of England, circulating throughout the Isle of Wight and the Counties of Hampshire, Sussex, Surrey, Berkshire, Wiltshire, Dorset and Somerset. Over time, papers became more localised in their coverage and many new ones came into existence. The Hampshire paper quoted above increasingly concentrated on events in and around Winchester; Andover was an example of a town gaining a paper of its own later.

Much has come from The Times, which is an accessible national source containing much relevant information. However, it was not infallible. Indeed, there is more possibility of error than with local papers when it dealt with events far from London. Prior to 1914 three sorts of information have been derived from it:

Firstly: Notices of opening placed by the railway companies in the form of advertisements. These have been treated as a first-class source though even here it needs to be remembered that there were sometimes last-minute hitches. There were also very occasional instances of a service beginning before the advertised date.

Secondly: Items concerning companies’ half-yearly meetings, which usually came in series. The first would mention the dividend likely to be paid (of prime interest to the shareholders of the day but of no use for this book). A few days later would come a summary of the half-yearly report; many at one time gave information about new openings in the previous six months. Finally would come an item on the shareholders’ meeting. At first the report was repeated (and in at least one case a different opening date quoted) but soon the policy was to refer readers back to what had already appeared in the paper and to concentrate on the meeting. This rarely included anything used here, though a new opening fixed for a date soon after the meeting might be mentioned by the Chairman. Dates given in these reports and at these meetings have been accepted unless there is very clear evidence to the contrary.

Thirdly: News items, at one time appearing in a regular column of ‘Railway Intelligence’. These were a mixed bunch. Some appear to have been produced by the paper’s own journalists, some by ‘Special Correspondents’, some copied from regional papers. Others look as if they were contributed by locals sending in material on their own area or by railway companies anxious to publicise their services. The remarkable thing is that the last were sporadic rather than routine offerings; whether this should be put down simply to poor public relations or regarded as the result of the arrogance of monopolists is an arguable question; it might be added that little concern this has changed since. The compiler suspects that many of these items were provided, in outline at least, by outsiders and then handed to a journalist to put into final form. Thus there was the possibility that they could have become garbled in transmission since, even with items apparently reliably dated, some peculiar geography was included. The policy adopted has been to quote The Times alone where secondary sources agree with it: few authors seem to have used it when writing their books and thus it usually provides an independent check on what is in print, though there is always the possibility of common, and inaccurate, ancestry of information. However, discrepancies have been found. Where it has been possible to resolve these by reference to e.g. local press items, the unhelpful conclusion is that sometimes The Times is right and the ‘accepted’ sources wrong, but in other cases the reverse. Items from The Times known from other sources to be wrong have been ignored. Some give the impression of being clearly authentic and have been preferred. That leaves those where it is simply the word of a possibly second-hand item in The Times against that of a historian who claims to have written his book wholly or partly from primary sources. Here, if there is some possibility that The Times is right, the date given in Section 4 is taken from the secondary source and a note of the Times version added.

In all cases the most fertile early period for information from The Times was from the late 1840s to the early 1860s. Thereafter diminishing amounts of information were available. Understandably, the London area and the major trunk lines received the fullest coverage. However, as with the local press, what was included and what overlooked is often beyond logical explanation – what impelled those concerned to put an opening notice for the Dornoch Light Railway in The Times?

After 1918 there was a marked revival of interest. Items were now essentially of two types. One sort consisted of very brief items to the effect that station or line x would open or close on date y; these appear to have been based on company handouts (still erratically provided). The other was made up of reports, nearly all covering events in the London area, apparently provided by the paper’s own journalists. Both types have been accepted as reliable.
Railway Guides

As lines opened, the fashion rapidly developed of publishing guides for travellers on the new lines; often the phrase ‘Iron Road Book’ or something similar was worked into the title. These normally gave a brief history of the undertaking, not usually very exactly dated, plus a description of the line, scenery and places of interest to be seen along the way. Time- and fare-tables were also included. They help to establish which stations existed at the start but they are not a foolproof source. The authors generally claimed to be writing from personal inspection but this was not always true (see the entry on 1839 June 10 in Section 5). Revised versions were commonly issued without exact dating or any mechanism for showing what changes had been made, so that the stations listed in the description no longer tallied with those in the timetable.

The disadvantage for the traveller was that these guides mostly only covered one route (though often the London, Birmingham, Manchester and Liverpool services provided by complementary companies were bound together). Also, he would not want to buy a complete new book whenever times were revised. Freeling’s Guide (early 1841 version) to the London & Birmingham and related lines did include a wide variety of tables but they are so clearly of different dates that some must have been out of date before publication and there was an obvious need for specialist timetable publications.

Timetables

Timetables are the fall-back source. It must be emphasised that there is an element of approximation about dates found from them.

In reality the most useful timetables should be those issued by the companies themselves. However, at first these were issued in the single-sheet form so that few have survived, at any rate in the continuous runs needed to establish first and last dates accurately. The Railway Times of 18 September 1847 reported that the LNW had outgrown the usual form and was now issued as a pamphlet, which gave a better chance of survival. Other large companies increasingly used this form but many small ones never justified more than a single sheet, often a small one. Also the large number of companies in existence meant that the evidence was produced in very scattered form. Even company timetables could err: the Liverpool & Manchester timetable for March 1831 included a railway service to Bolton while the local press makes it clear that this service had not yet begun. Only later, with the larger amalgamated companies, are these tables commonly available at Kew, and even then there are gaps; furthermore, to achieve the national coverage attempted in this book, impossibly large numbers would have had to be consulted. Regional timetables such as Murray’s for Scotland or Reid’s for the north east were issued from an early stage, but these are difficult to track down. Thus national timetables have to be the main source.

These seem to have developed naturally from the Guides once the opening of the London & Birmingham in September 1838 made this a worthwhile undertaking. Needless to say, at first they only covered some of the lines then operating and concentrated on those that were connected with one another. The earliest known were produced by James Drake of Birmingham in about August 1838 and Joseph Bridgen in February 1839. They were soon eclipsed by George Bradshaw of Manchester. (See letter by Canon Fellows in The Sunday Mercury, 25 September 1938 and G Royle Smith, The History of Bradshaw ...’, Blacklock, 1939.)

Bradshaw’s early dominance in this field was kept until 1961, when economics rather than competition caused publication to be handed over to British Rail. His first timetable was probably a local one for Manchester published in 1838 but the earliest timetable of which copies are known today was issued 19 October 1839, in a form that soon became entitled Bradshaw’s Companion. From the start of 1840, the theory was that a timetable, then hard-covered, about 5 inches by ¾ inches, would be bought at the start of the year. Soon after Bradshaw began the practice of issuing a monthly penny sheet of tables which could be bought, cut up and the relevant pieces pasted in as corrections or additions; these often contained tables that did not include all the stations listed in the book versions. The publisher also sold versions with the corrections made in the text as the year went by, but just left the year date at the front. Needless to say, these present all sorts of problems with dating; thus before December 1841 dates from these are usually quoted as e.g. ‘about June 1840’. The monthly sheets were dated but only one of these from before 1842 is available at Kew. The books also included maps of parts of the system (rarely accurately revised), gradient diagrams (to help the traveller understand the slow speed at some points?) and information about cab fares in the main cities.

Starting in December 1841 Bradshaw issued his monthly Guide, paper covered, clearly priced and designed to be thrown away once out of date. The page size was twice that of the Companion. Only one map was included, a large fold-out at the front. To begin with, the various parts of the country were shown in turn, but he soon standardised on a national map (of very limited use for historical purposes). For a while, the Companion continued to be published as well; double pages from it made up single pages in the Guide. However, there was no real need now for the Companion and this faded out after a few years. The Guide became the accepted standard national timetable. Dates derived from Bradshaw are ascribed to ‘Brad’. Others are indicated as ‘company’s ft’, ‘press ft’, etc. Where the date has been derived from a secondary source, it will be shown as in that work: this will usually be ‘ft’. In most cases Bradshaw is likely to have been the timetabled used.

Using should be warned that for a long time a cheaper, abridged version of the Guide was issued alongside the main one. Scotland was particularly roughly treated in this, as indeed it had been in the early years of the other time-tables mentioned.

There were competitors. Robinson and Tuck produced works along the lines of Bradshaw’s Companion, though they retained some of the features of the earliest road-books mentioned – diagrams showing places of interest along the route were sometimes included. Not enough of these rivals have been seen to make any judgements on relative reliability possible. There were differences, but these seem mainly to have consisted in the amounts of detail provided: one would list all the stations on one line but not another while a rival would provide the reverse. The likeliest explanation for Bradshaw’s victory over his rivals lies in the convenience provided by the monthly throw-away format. Other factors might have been his greater coverage of steamer services and inclusion of revenue-earning advertisements (in themselves sometimes providing interesting insights into Victorian life); he also omitted the irrelevant material that others included.

Rivals continued to appear, often with a layout designed to make their tables easier to interpret. One such was Topham’s Patented Railway Timetables. The full range of its issues is not known but it certainly appeared at least from May 1848 to March 1850 inclusive. Its approach was to list stations just once, on the left-hand side of the page; the times of down trains had to be read down the page and the up ones; at first one set were printed in red to help distinguish them but later the distinction had to be made from bold and normal type. Topham was not the inventor of such an arrangement: the Grand Junction used a form of it in its opening notice and Tuck included such a table. The latter’s was much easier to follow since the names were printed in the middle of the page, with up trains on one side and down on the other. Initially Topham looked a promising competitor since his standards of printing were higher and full detail was given for a number of lines that Bradshaw only covered in outline. By 1850, however, Topham had clearly lost the battle: many lines were not included, others were not up to date and organisation had become chaotic. In fairness, it should be pointed out that this was relatively the most hectic period in British railway history, at least as far as the numbers of new stations are concerned. There were considerable differences between the two, even before Topham had clearly lost the plot. As far as opening dates are concerned, Topham’s tables are used if they provide earlier evidence. The differences (often random in nature) can be illustrated from the Chester & Holyhead line:

Chester – Bangor opened 1 May 1848. Both included the line in the May volume, with the same intermediate stations: Queen’s Ferry; Flint; Holywell; Mostyn; Prestatyn; Rhyl; Abergale; Conway; Aber. These agree with the tt included in Parry’s 1848 Guide to the line.

Llanfair – Holyhead opened 1 August 1848; both included this in August, without any intermediate stations.

As far as closures are concerned (there were few anyway), the earlier is again used. The assumption has been made that where a line continued to be shown, as the Morningside line was in Topham’s for several months after Bradshaw had declared ‘service suspended’, it was the result of failure to keep the tables up to date.

A later rival was The Intelligible Railway Guide, certainly in existence in 1858 and 1859. It divided tables into many small sections. It looked tidier and easier to read but also resulted in a bulkier volume. Occasional reference is also made to the ABC Timetable and a few local ones, but these are of very limited use for the purpose in hand.

To begin with, there was much variation in the way information was presented. This was because the companies themselves had their own ways and publishers seem to have copied their presentations, which is clear evidence that for the most part, give or take a misprint here and there, the companies must take most of the blame for any shortcomings in the timetables. It was, after all, in publishers’ commercial interest to be as accurate as possible. For some lines full details were given, complete with all intermediate stops and train times at them. Others only had an outline showing times at the termini and major points in between, with other stations listed in fare tables or in notes. When these were put in a continuous line, separated just with commas, this could present difficulties of interpretation since a station with a double name might look like two (Holytown & Bellshill was shown as Holytown, Bellshill). Yet others provided no information whatsoever about intermediate stops. Some companies’ tables appeared very late (the Blyth & Tyne not until 1852).

From about 1850 until Grouping, timetables were normally issued as effective from the first day of the month. Bradshaw normally just put the month on the cover. However, increasingly there were exceptions. The LNWR’s own company timetable for May 1875 has a note on its cover that the services would not come into effect until Monday 3rd Bradshaw June 1890 carried a warning that services would not start until Monday 2nd, though that did not stop the LSW from opening its independent line to Plymouth on Sunday 1st. Increasingly, especially in summer, changes might be deferred or brought forward a day or two, in order to coincide with a Monday, but this happened erratically and was not always done by all companies in the month concerned. The July 1914 issue of Bradshaw was a traveller’s nightmare: the cover warned that not all services would start on the 1st. The marginal notes inside show that the GW, LNW and North Staffs started their new services on Sunday 12th and the Great Central and Cheshire Lines from Monday 13th (except for services noted to start on the 1st, 4th or 5th). The rest were presumed to start on the 1st.

After Grouping, practice remained mixed. Some new timetables were still introduced on the first of the month, regardless of the day of the week. Summer timetables normally ran from about the beginning of the second week in July to the end of the third week in September. These tts are dated in Section 4 by their starting date and tt is added afterwards to emphasise that, although exact dates are given, they are timetable dates and that a station given as opening e.g. 9 July 1934 tt would not necessarily have opened on that date. There were other variations: in 1938, the sixth month’s issue was just ‘June’, though it is clear that services in it commenced on 30 May. Some short periods apparently went missing: one issue in 1944 is dated May 1 – 21, the next June.

Whilst there was an increasing tendency for timetables to run from Monday to Sunday, inclusive, the Southern Railway, which had few contacts with the other companies and was geographically compact, ran its new services from the Sunday preceding; there had been some tendency for its constituent companies to do this before Grouping. Thus Sunnymeads opened 10 July 1927 with a traveller’s warning that services would not start until Monday 2nd. The marginal notes inside show that the GW, LNW and North Staffs started their new services from the Sunday preceding.

Whilst there was an increasing tendency for timetables to run from Monday to Sunday, inclusive, the Southern Railway, which had few contacts with the other companies and was geographically compact, ran its new services from the Sunday preceding; there had been some tendency for its constituent companies to do this before Grouping. Thus Sunnymeads opened 10 July 1927 with the new SR tt, whilst the appropriate Bradshaw is dated 11 July 1927. A note on the cover of ABC tt July 1927 says: ‘This Timetable operates from Monday July 11th, except Sunday services on the Southern Railway, which commence July 10th’. This practice even occurred at other times: the January 1930 ABC tt (mostly effective from the 1st) included a note on the opening from South Merton to Sutton to the effect that it started on the 5th.

In their last years all except the Great Western handed the job of timetable production over to Bradshaw; their own names appeared on the cover but Bradshaw’s part was indicated inside. This practice continued after Nationalisation except that the Scottish Region used Murray. Soon the various Regions published their own (some from 1950, others from 1955), using a larger format (5 7/8 inches by 9 inches), which was also used by Bradshaw from June 1955.

From 1961 to 2007, the timetables of British Rail and its component regions have been treated as the standard. At first issues were regional, all starting on a Monday. In 1974 the first comprehensive British Rail timetable was issued. Generally, issues have been made twice a year, starting May/June and September/October. The 29 May 1994 tt saw a switch to starting new timetables on Sundays. That starting 11 December 2005 was the first to follow EU orders. The issue of Sunday 20 May 2007 to Saturday 8 December 2007 (inclusive) was the last official issue. The Middleton Press has stepped in with its Rail Times, first issue from 9 December 2007; with no known prior publicity HM Stationery Office also provided a replacement. Two versions now exist although the official one ceased because it was claimed there was inadequate demand for it. More recently fragmented versions have been provided by some franchises.

Timetables were also printed in many local newspapers but provision was erratic. Tables could appear regularly for years and then be abruptly discontinued. These are cited where appropriate. There are a number of instances where part of a notice was altered in a local paper, leaving the heading as it was. How far such alterations could be used to date the event concerned is open to question. Was the change a prompt response to new information from the railway company, or a catching-up exercise? In such cases the evidence seen is presented without any attempt at judging.

Railway Clearing House

The Clearing House was established to deal with the consequences of a ‘system’ run by many companies. It helped make it possible for passengers to book for a journey that involved travel over several companies’ lines (e.g. Plymouth to Edinburgh) and be issued with one ticket for the whole trip. It allocated the revenues from such journeys between the companies concerned. To help railwaymen, it issued various publications. For fuller details of its workings, see P Bagwell, The Railway Clearing House in the British Economy, 1842-1922, Allen & Unwin, 1968.

Its publications evolved from private enterprise to official status. At first staff members issued their own. The start was provided in 1851 by Zachary Macaulay, one of its clerks, who published a Station Map of the Railways in Great Britain and a List of all Stations on the Railways of Great Britain alphabetically arranged. Later came the best known, John Airey: D Garnett, in the Brunel publication listed below, wrote: ‘It has never been explained how Airey ran a flourishing private enterprise, using official information, from his employers’ address and in their time’. Gradually publication was taken over by the Clearing House itself. Whilst its works were aimed at railwaymen, most were also sold to the general public.

One series of publications was of national maps, with lines coloured according to companies, all stations supposedly listed. Later, Airey added more detailed maps of separate areas, showing distances between stations and junctions. He also continued the Junction Diagrams – very detailed plans of locations where two or more companies came together: the originator of these is not known.

Revised versions of all were issued from time to time; annual supplements to the Junction Diagrams were issued between full revisions. Although it was claimed in advertisements and on the published maps that they were based on information derived from the companies and were regularly revised, there were many inaccuracies, especially in the early issues, and revision sometimes failed by a wide margin to keep pace with the changes that were occurring. All ceased with Nationalisation, except for a map of Scotland published in 1960.

Only a few examples of these maps are available in modern reprints. The only ones in the original format are the 1918 Map of the West of England, published by David & Charles, the only one of a promised ‘series’ to be produced; the 1914 Junction Diagrams (Jan Allan) and 1915 Junction Diagrams (David & Charles). For other versions see the section on Atlases at the end of the Sources section. For more information, see Railway Maps and the Railway Clearing House, a series of articles published by Brunel University in 1986.

Another series came to be known in short as the Station Hand-books (hyphen not always included). Originally published by Airey, they became ‘Official’ when the Clearing House took over. The earliest give no indication of whether the names listed belonged to a passenger station, goods station, siding, physical junction or whatever. From 1877 this was remedied and a series of columns showed what sorts of traffic were handled. These books were revised from time to time; between editions cumulative supplements were issued annually. Despite the claims about the books being kept up to date, outworn information could remain for years – Seven Stones went out of use during the First War but was still shown as a passenger station in 1938.

Both these books and the Junction Diagrams provide dating traps. In the Diagrams book revised diagrams usually replaced the out-of-date ones in the appropriate place but the date at the front was not altered: the 1888 book at Kew actually dates from 1892. However, in the Hand-books the supplement was bound in at the back and the date given at the front is that of the latest information included: the Handbook at Kew dated 1879 is actually an 1877 issue with a cumulative appendix for 1878 and 1879 bound in at the back; what has been described as the 1900 edition was in fact 1895 plus appendices. After about 1900 the Clearing House seems to have abandoned this practice, keeping appendices separate (but still cumulative). The 1904 Hand-book was reprinted in 1970 by David & Charles, with an introduction by CR Clinker, the dating in which needs to be corrected in accordance with what has been said above. Note that the 1938 book was the first to include Halts; even then some were omitted, to be included in later appendices. The one exception so far seen was Balgreen Halt, included in the appendix for 1936. However, earlier books had continued to include stops which had been reduced to Halt status without including ‘Halt’ in their names. Thus only the 1938 and 1956 books are of any use in determining which stops were Halts. ‘Platforms’ were always included.

Some use has been made of another series of Clearing House publications, the Distance Books, particularly the supplements, which listed (and usually dated) new stations, closures, and replacements. The latter were issued to staff in pamphlet form so their survival has been a matter of rather erratic chance. In this respect, the compiler has been particularly fortunate in the amount of help received from Tony Cooke.

Shareholders’ Manuals

Tuck from 1841 and Bradshaw from 1848 published information aimed at shareholders. As with timetables, the latter publisher soon monopolised the field. These books gave some idea of the companies’ legal powers and financial standing, listed their directors and so on. Sometimes a line’s opening date was given amongst all this. In addition, a list of the previous year’s openings was included at the back, though these lists were far from complete. Unfortunately, the same date did not always appear in both places. These have been used by many works in print and some are cited here. However, they are not the most reliable source in existence and many errors in print seem to have originated there, so they are only used if nothing else is available. Modern reprints exist of Tuck, 8th edition, 1847 (Dragonwheel, 2003) and Bradshaw’s Manuals of 1869 (David & Charles, 1969), complete with sections on European and Imperial railways and 1923 (Peter Kay, Teignmouth, 1999), British data only, canals included.

Magazines

Use has been made of a number of publications devoted to railway matters. These have been treated as somewhere between primary and secondary sources. They deal with events as they occur. However, much they include seems to have been provided by readers sending in what they regard as interesting information, rather than from the investigations of their own staff, and this material has tended to be printed uncritically. It has also to be said that those designed for a wide audience have been less likely to correct errors than the more specialised works produced by enthusiasts’ groups and societies.

SECONDARY SOURCES

Much has had, of necessity, to be taken from works already in print. As far as possible, those used are works limited to a particular company, line or area; Clinker’s Register is the chief exception. A few items have come from local histories which include a little about railways among the general history of the area involved.

References are generally limited to one, though more than one is available for many stations. Where a book is cited, the choice usually depends on the order in which secondary sources were consulted for the purpose of checking this book, rather than any preference for one over another. In some cases correspondents provided the citations used. ‘(Corr)’ after a source, means that the date was corrected by the author (or reviser) of the book quoted e.g. in an appendix, supplement, or notes provided in a later volume.

Although all books listed below were used in the compilation of the list, duplication of information means that not all will be quoted; in many instances, a book in this list was originally taken as the source but a primary source has since been substituted. It should be recognised that it is much easier to find a date in a primary source if someone has already told you where to look – even if the original information was a few days adrift. Where a book was only used to provide one or two references it has often been quoted in full in the appropriate place and is thus not listed here as well.

COMBINED LIST OF SOURCES

Names of individual contributors and places where newspapers were consulted have been removed from the Combined List of Sources because many of the newspapers concerned have now been cited by more than one person and there has been much local reorganisation as a fashion for ‘Heritage Centres’ has taken over from local libraries and record offices. Furthermore, the British Library has closed the Newspaper Library at Colindale and all now have to be seen at the main library; much has now been found from the internet British Newspaper Archive, Welsh Newspapers and Edinburgh Libraries. Anyone seeking to see local newspapers is advised to contact their local library for information.

The alphabetical order of the abbreviations is used, following the ‘nothing before something principle’; ‘&’ is treated as ‘and’, with assumed gaps either side of it. Thus the A & B type of entry will appear at or near the beginning of the appropriate letter.

Some of the newspapers quoted altered their names over time; variations are generally mentioned only briefly or are ignored completely. The aim has been to describe sources in sufficient detail to make it possible for others to identify them; thus in many cases, not just newspapers, an abbreviated form has been used.

Also note that the British Newspaper Archive (trying to give continuity to its offerings as names changed?) sometimes gives a name in its search facility that is different from that at the top of the papers shown: the Daily Gazette for Middlesbrough etc was, in 1870, the Evening Gazette and this is by no means the only example found.

Ex & Plym = Exeter & Plymouth Gazette.
Exeter = The Exeter Flying Post – later Trewnman’s.
Express & E = The Express & Echo [evening paper] (Exeter).
First = G Dow, The First Railway Across the Border, LNER, 1946.
Freening = A Freetling, author of a number of Guides on early railways published by Whitaker & Co. These consisted of descriptions of lines concerned plus timetables. They are difficult to date since the books were frequently reissued with minor revisions of contents but not of date on title page.
Fur = Furness Railway 130, Cumbrian Railways Association, 1996.
Galloway = The Galloway News.
GC dates = RAIL 1005/273. This contains two lists of GC openings, including ancestors and joint lines. One is a printed chronology dated January 1909; second a typescript version, somewhat expanded and continued to 1915. They appear to have been compiled within the company but no sources are cited; very few discrepancies have been noted where contemporary items are available for checking. Closure dates appear to have been quoted last day of use; they have been accepted as verifying those given in the book in the ‘official’ style. In addition to those given this reference, ‘GC dates- line’ could have been added to many items presently source GC.

GSW = Chronology of The Glasgow & South Western Railway, Stephenson Locomotive Society, 1950.

GW = ET MacDermot, revised CR Clinker, History of The Great Western Railway, Ian Allan, 2 vols, 1989 reprint. This mostly provides only line dates.

GW ac = circulars issued from GW accountant’s office (information supplied by D Geldard).

GW H = CR Clinker, Great Western Railway: A Register of Hals and Platforms, 1903-1979: Avon-Anglia, 1979. Since this is the more recent work, dates from this list have usually been preferred to those from CI-29, above, in the few cases where there are discrepancies.

GW ir = Great Western internal records.

GW Mag = Great Western Railway Magazine, fair number of copies at Newton Abbot.

Hamilton = The Hamilton Advertiser.

Hants Adv = The Hampshire Advertiser.

Hants Teleg = The Hampshire Telegraph.

Haddington, Macmerry and Gifford Branch Lines = Airey and, later, by the Railway Clearing House (see paragraphs on RCH, earlier in this Section); 1862-1956 editions used.

Hants Adv = The Hampshire Advertiser.

Hayling Island Railway, RG Harman, Branch Line Hand-books No 18, undated – about 1964?.

hb = (Official) Hand-book of Stations... (varying additions over the years); published by Airey and, later, by the Railway Clearing House (see paragraphs on RCH, earlier in this Section); 1862-1956 editions used.

hba = Appendix to hb. The main hand-books and these amendments were often issued at some mid-year point. The dates should only be regarded as a very general guide. 1863 on seen, but many gaps in set at Kew. The only dates given from these generally come from cases where the appendix gave an exact date. Usually it just said ‘closed’, ‘now called ...’, or something similarly vague.

Only in rare cases have such instances been cited; they were sometimes years in arrears with such information.

hbl = amendment leaflet to hb, with date or number. Numbering normally began again at ‘1’ after issue of revised book. These were issued far more frequently than the amendment books, their contents being consolidated into (usually) roughly yearly amendment books.

Henshaw = A Henshaw, GNR in the East Midlands, volume 4, RCTS.

Herathap = Railway & Commercial Journal (LNW half-yearly material from J Gough); ZPER series 3 at Kew; 1836-38 at Newton Abbot; (title varied over the years).

Hereford J = The Hereford Journal.

Hertford = The Hertford Mercury.

High = K Fenwick, Highland Railway Station Locations and Dates, Highland Railway Society, revised, 1995.

High Maps = RA Cook, Great North of Scotland and Highland Railway Historical Maps, RCHS, 1977.

HMRS = Journal of Historical Model Railway Society.
LNW dates = London & North Western Railway: Opening dates of sections and lines, with authority for the same (RAIL 1005/260).
This was compiled, retrospectively, by/for the company’s audit office. Many entries have abbreviations alongside which show sources (contemporary LNW records), but others, especially before about 1860, do not. It is clear that many early stations were given the line date and distinctions between goods/passenger and formal/public openings were not always made. Consequently this has only been used where a source is cited or where nothing better is available; in the latter case ‘no authority’ is added. Where PCC is added it refers to an extract from a Passenger Commercial Circular added to the book.
LNW Officers = books containing minutes of LNW Officers’ Committee (RAIL 410/585 and following). At one time these also contained information about other companies’ activities likely to affect LNW. Where two minute numbers are given, reason is usually that first gave timetable, including this station, ready for when line should open, and second gave opening date, without station detail. Some of references used are of ‘will open first of next month’ variety; since there were also plenty of references to delays owing to inspection problems and the like, it seems safe to use these where there was no later contradiction.
LNW Record = Record of Opening and Closing Dates; L&NW Railway (last entry 1915); continued by London, Midland & Scottish Railway from 1931 (RAIL 1005/289). ‘Book re-written from Old Book (collapsed) 1938’. The original started in 1869, with events originally entered as they occurred, sourced to company documents. Entries were continued into the 1950 s. A few incongruous items, such as the closure of the WCP, were included, clearly from official information. Some pre-1869 items were later added (none used here). A few do not agree with, for example, company notices in The Times; these discrepancies were probably the result of copying errors and no reference is made to them here.
Macclesfield = Macclesfield Courier & Herald.

Merlin = The Monmouthshire Merlin.
Metro = Manchester Metro News.
MGN Circ = Bulletin of the Group set up to research into MGN history.
Mid = JV Gough, The Midland Railway – A Chronology, RCHS, 1989. Items sourced to (Mid) are ones that Dr Gough, who has kindly provided the compiler with his sources, has validated from the local press and company documents, including timetables and working timetables and supplements which explicitly state that station X will be opened/closed/renamed on such a date.
Where the information has been inferred from a timetable, it is ‘co t/wt (Mid)’; after Grouping this will refer to LMS timetables. After Nationalisation the reference will simply be ‘tt (Mid)’, unless Bradshaw is involved. Mid is also used for material not in the published book but supplied directly to the compiler by Dr Gough.
Mid/GW Officers = material from the minutes of the conferences held to deal with matters concerning the lines run Jointly by the Midland and Great Western Companies.
Mining = The Mining Journal.
Mon min = material from minutes of Monmouthshire Railway & Canal Company. generous provision of sketch-maps, of the many private railways built mostly to serve coal mines; emphasis obviously on industrial matters but information is given about known passenger services.

RAIL. 1005/265 = job lot dealing with opening dates of lines eventually part of LMS which seems to have been prepared in answer to questions from HG Lewin; only used where it gives company minutes or engineers’ reports as source. The first 770 odd deal with individual companies; higher numbers more general information.

Ramsey = J Rhodes, Branch Lines to Ramsey, Oakwood, 1986.

Reading = The Reading Mercury,

RCG = list of station openings, closures and renamings compiled in the 1950s from the Minutes of the Railway Clearing House ‘Goods Managers’ and Superintendents’ Conferences. At Kew catalogued as RAIL. 1005/280 for openings and closures, RAIL. 1005/282 for renamings. Manuscript list, photocopies available at York and Newton Abbot. ‘RCG ref’ means exact date is given. ‘RCG ref’ means a more general reference; some entries look like a catching up exercise (stations which other records show to have opened individually are here given in one batch); in any case, such entries were only made in January, April, July and October. Whilst it is a useful record, it has to be said that some of the dates given do not tally with information from local sources.

Finally, mention has to be made of RVJ Butt’s Directory of Railway Stations, Patrick Stephens, 1995 (when part of the Haynes Group). This has many basic faults. No means are provided for dealing with the vagaries of early contractors’ services; the author seemed to be unaware of the lack of evidence for the earliest services of many lines and simply assigned the line opening date to all stations, when the reality is that many opened later. Overall, the errors, omissions and other inadequacies run into the thousands. It should be added that his work covered ground not covered here, on Ireland, preservation lines and the like; comparison with Johnson’s Atlas & Gazetteer of the Railways of Ireland, Midland Publishing, 1997 and Ireland, JWP Rowledge, Atlantic Publishing, 1995 (issued as volume 16 of the D&C Regional History series) suggests even less accuracy there. Butt’s book was used at an early stage to check dates given here and some corrections were made after reference to other sources; nothing, for obvious reasons, has been directly derived from it.
ATLASES

By far the best to use in conjunction with this work is Col M Cobb’s, The Railways of Great Britain, A Historical Atlas, Ian Allan, 2003; except for a very few instances it includes all the regular stations listed in this book, shown on an outline of the one-inch Ordnance Survey. However, its lavish nature means that its availability might be limited though a second, revised, edition has since been published (dated 2006 but issued in 2007) and a third edition appeared in 2015; on balance it seems best to keep references in this book to the Pre-Grouping Atlas (see below).

Ian Allan have published a series of atlases showing the system as it was at various times: 1881 (from Macaulay’s Station Map, with Airley’s Railway Junction Diagrams of the same time); 1904 (reprint in book form of the Railway Clearing House map for that year); 1922 (Pre-Grouping Atlas, based on Clearing House maps), 6th edition, revised and enlarged 1923 (showing system at Grouping, plus Junction Diagrams); 1947; 1955; 1965; 1967. Complete Atlas of Railway Station Names, compiled by Tony Dewick, 2002 (here the tedious continued use of the same scale means that some areas are very difficult, even impossible, to disentangle); Atlas of Train Operating Companies, 2000; Rail Atlas, 1890 (Tony Dewick), 2005; Railway Atlas, Then and Now (comparison of system 1923 and 2012), P. Smith & K. Turner, 2012; Rail Atlas 1939 – 1945, P. Walker (2014). Sectional Maps of Britain’s Railways were also published in a larger format for January 1982, Winter 1984/5 and January 1989. They have also produced, in book form: a reprint of Clearing House map of London of 1935; and London Railway Atlas (covering whole history) by J Brown, 3rd edition, 2012; same author has created Birmingham & West Midlands Railway Atlas, 2016. Their The Beeching Era, 2013, details changes and proposed closures following the Beeching Report. They began a series designed to bring together all the factual material about railways in a particular area. The first two to be issued cover Norfolk & Suffolk and Kent & Sussex. Unfortunately in the first one there are very many discrepancies between the information given in the historical and map sections and that in the index and gazetteer; the second has fewer errors of this sort but is far from perfect. More recent is Atlas of the Southern Railway, R. Harman & G. Nichols, 2017. Crecy Publishing Ltd have since taken over their titles and in 2018 added Atlas of Railway Station Closures: maps on larger Ian Allan format, photographs and index giving exact dates of closures of all entries.

What was assumed to be the first of a series is: A Mackintosh (editor), As They Were, Book I, Southern England, Offington Press, 2002. This is a reproduction of 1 inch OS maps, designed to show railway system as it was in 1950s. This volume covers the area south of line from Bristol to London.

RA Cooke, Atlas of the Great Western Railway, Wild Swan, revised edition 1997. This is centred on 1947 but does show stations closed before that time and added since; it covers the Great Western in its widest sense, including 1922-3 amalgamations. It is very accurate and detailed and it is unfortunate that no comparable works have been produced for other companies. He is also producing a very detailed series of Track Diagrams for GW and BR WR.

Midland Railway System Maps (The Distance Diagrams) have been reprinted in 6 volumes, including an index and gradient diagrams, by the Cumbrian Railways Association (vol 1) and P Kay (rest). They show the Midland Railway in great detail just before Grouping.

Table of Distances for the London, Brighton & South Coast Railway, January 1901, was reprinted by Ian Allan, no date given for reprint.

A very detailed National Series of Waterway, Tramway and Railway Atlases, photocopied and frequently revised was produced by G L Crowther of 224 South Meadow Lane, Preston, PR1 8JP. The various sections possess their own indexes but there is no overall national index.

North Eastern Railway Atlas 1922, S Bragg, Industriallogical Associates, dated 2005, gives a very detailed picture of the North Eastern in its last independent year. An earlier work, North Eastern Lines and Stations, compiled by S Bragg & E Scarlett, North Eastern Railway Association, 1999, is essentially a list showing the lines and stations of the North Eastern at the end of 1922; some diagrams are also included.

RCRH published Historical Maps for these companies: Lancashire & Yorkshire (2nd edition 1976), Great North of Scotland and Highland (1977) and North Eastern (revised edition 1991); compiled by R. A. Cook (last with K. Hoole).

DME Lindsay’s Registers of Stations Routes and Lines of the Glasgow & South Western (G&SWR Association, 2002) and North British (NBR Study Group, 2006) contain diagrams showing companies’ routes.

Mapseeker Archive Publishing have issued a reprint (2012) of Bradshaw’s New Railway Map ... 1852 and have included with it reprints of a number of town plans of that time.

Opening dates

The dates quoted are intended to be those when the station was first used by the ordinary fare-paying public, even if only a reduced (e.g. afternoon only) service ran that first day. Often there were also earlier ceremonial (‘formal’) occasions, when directors, chosen friends and local dignitaries travelled over the line. Quite a lot of these formal events are quoted in print as the public dates since contemporaries often cited only these. Indeed, this is one of the constants of railway history: Bradshaw’s Shareholders’ Manual, newspapers of all eras, and secondary sources, have all done this. Even today magazines devoted to railway matters often still fail to clarify the full significance of the dates they give. Many such errors have been corrected but some will have survived, especially in areas reliant on secondary sources.

Sunday dates can cause problems. Some Sunday opening dates have been copied from book to book down the years for stations, that as far as is known, never had a Sunday service. This has mostly, but not exclusively, occurred in cases where a first of the month was a Sunday. Some have been found and corrected; again, others probably still lurk. More difficult are cases where the station did have a Sunday service. Initially, there was much Victorian heart-searching, especially in Scotland, about Sunday train services so there would have been a reluctance to open lines on the Sabbath, with the accompanying celebrations. The policy followed has been to quote ‘accepted’ dates up to 1850, adding a note to the effect that it was a Sunday. After 1850, no comment has been added. The vast majority of stations affected were opened on the first day of a month and were additions to existing lines so that operationally it would have made sense to open them with the new timetable rather than wait a day. Primary evidence can be quoted in support of some of these openings. Some were perhaps held back but rather than add to a lot of notes likely to turn out eventually to be unnecessary, it seems best to leave alone for the moment.

Whilst normally preference has been given to primary evidence, an exception was originally made in the coverage of the Highland and Great North of Scotland Railways. The Societies devoted to the study of the histories of these companies have published lists where sources have been given for all items, the overwhelming majority of them from the local press. However, the vast range of newspapers now available from the British Newspaper Archive and the limited availability of the Societies’ publications make it now preferable to make press references the desirable ones.

If the source is described as e.g. (Mid; T 3 May- line) it means that the Midland Chronology gives the exact date for the station whilst The Times only covered the line opening; this approach has been used on the basis that as far as possible contemporary sources should be used; if these are incomplete, modern ones should be used to fill the gaps. T/ Derby Mercury means that the information comes from the former, which acknowledged the latter as its source.

Where a newspaper report is given as the source it means that the item has been seen by the compiler or was provided by someone who knew it would be used in this book, and whose name is included in the Acknowledgements. Where a secondary source quotes a press report of an opening, the source given is the book. Only where the sense demands reference to the paper, is full acknowledgement is given. However, where a book includes a facsimile of an opening timetable or press advertisement of opening, is cited as, e.g.: ‘co n (= company’s opening notice shown in) book’s name’.

As far as timetables are concerned, if a station is shown as ‘first in Brad May 1856’, it means that the April 1856 issue has also been seen and that the station was not present then. Occasionally a range of dates is given. If a station is shown as ‘May/June/July 1856’, it means that April has been seen and the station was absent; the May and June issues (or the relevant pages) were missing from the set used and the station was there in July.

However, more than 10,000 pieces of information have been either derived from, or checked against, Bradshaw. Though much has been double (or even triple) checked, it is highly unlikely that no errors or omissions have occurred. Furthermore, Bradshaw itself was dependent on companies sending up-to-date information in time for it to be included in the next issue. From common references in the book itself it is clear that this often did not happen. There are cases where other sources show that a new line or station was opened several months or even years before it appeared there. There are also examples where it looks suspiciously as though revisions were made at intervals in a sort of catching-up exercise; changes such as the addition of an extra station or two coincide with alterations in the layout of tables and reorganisation of pagination rather more often than one would expect. These suspicious items were particularly prevalent during the hectic period of openings in the late 1840s. It is impossible to be sure whether Bradshaw or the railway companies were responsible – the writer suspects that both played a part.

Closing dates

The modern accepted convention is to quote as the closure date the first day a service should have run but did not do so. Nowadays the timetables start on a Sunday, so a quoted closure date will mean that the last train ran on the preceding Saturday (or perhaps Friday). However, from Nationalisation until recently the quoted date will normally have been a Monday and the last train will have run the preceding Friday, Saturday or Sunday but it was not always as simple as this. It seems to this compiler that it would have been preferable and more logical always to quote the date of the last train but the ‘accepted’ way is followed, partly because it is the one used by officialdom and partly because so much in print uses it that confusion would be caused by departing from it. Apart from some exceptions explained later, the dates used here are always those for the actual closure, calculated in accordance with the convention mentioned. Some stations were initially ‘temporarily closed’ but never reopened; usually they were ‘officially’ closed years later. No mention is made of these later official dates since a station officially open but with no trains calling is of no use to anyone. It should be pointed out that Returns usually operated on the principle of inclusive dates, so its closing dates were last days of use.

It would seem that, at first, stations were closed on any date and at any stage of the month. As the system grew, companies developed the practice of making most changes on the first of the month with a new timetable. The earlier paragraphs on ‘Timetables’ have explained how variable practice could be in this respect.

Many existing secondary sources (and perhaps even the Railway Clearing House) seem at times to have been confused by all this. Some attempt has been made here to unravel the tangle, but further work is needed. However, it should be stressed that normally only a matter of a day or two is involved.

THE INFORMATION OBTAINED

After Nationalisation, the standard practice for all regions was to make changes on Mondays and to issue a standard form of closure notice. The fairly recent change to Sunday starts for new timetables could in the future create problems of the sort explained later.

Various snags arise from the accepted way of dating closures. For a start, it is clear from examination of the evidence that it has not in reality always been followed and that some of the dates copied down the years were actually the last days of use; others seem to have been arrived at by adding one to a known last day of use, which gave the correct answer if the latter was a Saturday but created an absurdity if it was a Saturday since it resulted in a Sunday closure date for a line or station without a Sunday service (though there were circumstances in which this did certainly ‘officially’ happen as a result of Southern practice between the Wars).

There are indications that the early nineteenth century usage of terms was not the same as today’s (see the entry on 1844 December 1 in Section V). The Railway Gazette, which has tended to be regarded as a semi-official source, probably contributed to the confusion. It is clear from analysis of lists it produced in the 1930s that it used a mixture of last days of use and official closure dates. The Times and the local press sometimes did quote the notices issued by the companies themselves but often only made brief mentions of closures. These can leave one wondering whether they meant the last day trains ran, or the official closure date, and thus fail to resolve the issue. Modern magazines devoted to railways are also sometimes at fault.

Another difficulty arises where closures were made with the introduction of a new timetable on the first of a month. Provided the first fell between Monday and Friday inclusive, there is no problem since the last train will clearly have run in accordance with the principles set out. Where it occurred on a Saturday or Sunday ambiguity can arise. If the first was a Saturday, did the company really close it then (i.e. last train on Friday) or was it a last day of use that historians have failed to correct to a Monday closure date? Sundays pose that problem, plus another one if the station concerned had no Sunday service. Where historians have spotted this type of closure they seem often to have resolved it by quoting the Monday (the 2nd) as the closure date. This compiler wonders whether in fact companies and their clerks were as finicky as this; he suspects that at least some of the time, especially before 1914, they simply quoted the date of the start of the new timetable as the closure date, regardless of niceties. Later, they do seem to have followed ‘standard’ practice. This problem is compounded by the fact that over time, the starting dates of new timetables were more frequently deferred or brought forward a day or two, so that the changes were made on a Monday. This was not done with any consistency; sometimes it was only done by a few companies. Thus dates like ‘2nd’ or ‘31st’ of a month should be regarded as suspect until the full story can be substantiated from reliable primary sources.

Throughout, where a station closed on a Monday, no comment is made. Closures on other days have the day of the week in brackets after them, so that e.g. (Tuesday) means that theoretically the last train should have run on a Monday. In the interests of consistency, Sunday dates have been given to all Southern services that are likely candidates. Ideally, information about whether there was a Sunday service or not should also be given. However, to do that from scratch would have taken a long time and required either a lot more space or the use of more symbols which, given the complexity of the information already included, might well have confused rather than enlightened the reader.

Some of the references used in support of the dates given are of the ‘last day’ kind, as long as they clearly support that date in accordance with the principles set out here. Ambiguous references are not used.

In cases where a station was served only on one or two days of the week, the date is given ‘last day’, thus avoiding some at least of the absurdities arising from the accepted practice.

In some cases, two sources are given; this normally occurs where the more immediate source gave notice well in advance and it thus seems desirable to give another source which confirms that it did actually close on the date given – there were cases where stays of execution were granted. Entries derived from timetables are shown: ‘Last in Brad …’. If seen by the compiler but ‘closed …’ it from elsewhere, since that is the way the sources used showed these (and the compiler usually has no means of knowing what timetable the source quoted used). This phrasing ‘last in Brad …’ is also used in cases where a station later re-opened; it would be a waste of space to put ‘last in the tt for the time being’ or some such entry each time. Theoretically such stations would have had a closure date that was the first of the following month, unless they closed part way through a month. ‘Last trains …’ covers those which remained in the timetable, without trains, after they had presumably been closed.

The same qualifications need to be added as for opening dates; there is a strong possibility that in some cases the service had ceased some time before it was omitted from Bradshaw.

Short-term omission from the timetable

Some stations were omitted from timetables for a few months only. These are shown: ‘last in Brad …; back …’. Without corroborative evidence it is impossible to say whether they actually closed for a short time or remained open but were not included in the timetable because some clerk (almost certainly the railway company’s, not the timetable publisher’s) felt them not important enough for inclusion or wanted to save space.

Some companies, e.g. the Maryport & Carlisle, provided skeleton tables for some months, fully detailed ones for others. In such instances the fact that some stations went missing for a while is ignored.

Change of site

Where a station was removed to a new site, the information is given, as far as possible treating the new site as a continuation of the old station. Sometimes this is not possible since the new site was given a different name; cross-references are then given. In any case, the distinction between a re-sited station and a new one is one of the many grey areas of the subject. Sometimes the reader will find: ‘New station …’; this is where the source used does not make it clear (the information might not be available anyway) whether the station was rebuilt on the same site or a different one. This aspect is one where there is the heaviest dependence on Clinker, who regarded a station as re-sited if the new location was more than 10 chains from the old. The local press was generally indifferent to such matters and timetables are rarely of any use for this purpose (they often gave distances but these were unreliable approximations). The vast majority of modern books simply copy Clinker, though in this book a station has been regarded as re-sited if it is clear from the local press that contemporaries saw it in this way.
Many of the renaming items included here, as in most books about railways, are, and are likely always to be, mongrel items since the information comes from a mixture of sources whose reasons for giving it were different so that the same version would have not been in use in all the relevant places at the same time: e.g. in some cases to inform professional railwaymen, in others to help passengers. Following Nationalisation, the Railway Executive seems to have taken the initiative in bringing some sort of order to this question, sometimes making ‘official’ use of names already in use by e.g. Bradshaw.

The first point to note is that the spelling of place-names was only fully standardised in the period under consideration as the needs of the Royal Mail and other bodies made it desirable. Thus BRIDGEWATER and BRIDGWATER happily co-existed for much of the C19. STALY BRIDGE, STALEY BRIDGE, STALYBRIDGE and STALEYBRIDGE all appeared in timetables; the LNW even managed to use three of these in different tables of the same issue. In addition, the way locals pronounced a name was not always the same as the way it was shown in the Ordnance Survey maps and the atlases of the time (which often disagreed amongst themselves) so this could lead to variations. The early companies’ minute books frequently included different names for the same station, especially if it was one intended to serve an area that included several villages: the Stockton & Darlington was one such. Local newspapers made their own contributions to the mixture. Railwaymen did not always use the most recent names: they had more important matters on their minds.

In the early days it seems that railway companies simply used the name of the place to be served as the one to be used for their station, sometimes giving an indication of its site: the Liverpool & Manchester did the latter in the verbiage that accompanied its earliest timetables while the tables themselves simply used the two place names. As more stations came into existence and older ones were replaced by more convenient ones additions were made to the names in press notices and timetables; at first these were probably intended to be seen as helpful additions rather than official names (see the introductory remarks at the start of the entries for these two cities in Section 4). In time such additions did achieve official sanction and notices were issued by companies to their staff and placed in their timetables that X would now be called X Z Street or A would be called B.

No tidy arrangement is available in many cases and one has to fall back on other sources. One would expect the most useful to be the timetables issued to the public by the companies themselves but, as the example above shows, they do not provide a magic answer. Early working timetables issued to their staff cannot be regarded as definitive evidence: their staff would know where their stations were without needing extra information. National timetables take us a step further from the original source: the problem here is that it is now impossible to determine what, if any, alterations they made to help travellers decide which of two or more stations in a town was the one needed. Even when clear evidence exists to show when a company intended a station’s name to be changed it was sometimes a while before the timetables caught up; this was especially true when the practice of issuing only two new versions a year was adopted.

The Railway Clearing House should have provided definitive answers but its information was often out of date and there seem to have been copying errors as it was passed from place to place. Its publications often showed as still in existence stations that had closed years before, never mind keeping up with changed names.

If anyone still needs convincing of the complexity of the task of establishing names and an explanation of why this book takes refuge in inexact references, this final example, provided by sampling, might clinch matters. It concerns what is now Bristol Temple Meads. In the 1860s all sources seen just had Bristol. There was only one site, though a complex one. Passengers were left to work out for themselves whether they needed the Great Western station, the Bristol & Exeter or the through platform. Occasionally tables did specify ‘the GW station’ but for services which only a traveller totally ignorant of local geography would have attempted to catch from the Bristol & Exeter; no help was given in those vital cases where it was needed. In 1871 and 1887 Bradshaw had Bristol Temple Mead in both GW and Midland tables, but in 1876 and 1878 it was Bristol Temple Street. In 1902 the timetable issued by the GW itself had Bristol Temple Meads but that issued by the Midland in 1903 still showed Bristol Temple Mead.

The Clearing House hand-books for 1890 and 1895 called it Bristol Joint Passenger Station; the appendix for 1896/9 showed Temple Meads for passengers and confined Temple Meads to the GW goods station only; the 1938 book is the same; at some time between then and an amendment leaflet dated September 1939 the passenger station had become Bristol Temple Meads Joint. The Junction Diagrams added Temple Meads about 1900, apparently, but not certainly, to the whole station. Though not strictly relevant here, it might be added that while for a long time no reference to Temple Meads appeared under ‘Bristol’ in the Hand-books, by 1890 there was an entry under ‘T’, with the explanation that it was the same as Bristol Goods: GW-Mid.

Finally, it remains to outline the policy followed here. Exact dates for changes have been given in cases where there is evidence from explicit company or equivalent post-nationalisation sources; in such cases no mention is usually made of any later use of the old name elsewhere. While experience suggests that use of Bradshaw dates is generally a good guide, within a month or two, to the opening and closing of stations, it is of far more limited use when it comes to defining exact station names or the dates when these changed. Thus dates derived from there are quoted year-only and the same treatment has been given to those where others have quoted one derived from a timetable. In the most shambolic cases no attempt is made to date variations. They are merely listed, perhaps with a date giving an idea of when sanity prevailed. Mention made that the version appeared in a company timetable or some other source in a particular year does not mean that was the only time it appeared: it is simply an example of its use. The ‘X for Y’ type of name is usually only given full treatment if it was clearly the company’s intention that it should be treated thus; others of this sort have been placed at the end of their entries to avoid disruption of the flow of basic information and to make it easier for those with no interest in this aspect to ignore it.
Name changes ascribed to ‘Brad 1955’ occurred with the change of format, 13 June 1955. How far these were actual changes made then, and how far this was a tidying-up operation including changes that should have been made earlier, is not known – the latter would seem more likely.

Technically names shown here as ‘X & Y’ should be shown ‘X and Y’ but the use of ‘&’ as a shorthand was common in official documents and has been very widely used in secondary works; it also avoids ambiguity since it clearly shows that one station is involved while the use of ‘and’ runs the risk of one becoming two if the information is copied to another document. The same considerations apply to many company names also.

More exact treatment has been possible for stations on the Midland Railway because John Gough kindly supplied the writer with a full version of his sources, thus enabling him to specify the type of timetable involved.

The names of Welsh and Scottish stations are restricted to versions found in English timetables.
Stations are listed in alphabetical order by place name. Thus:

- HAY & X
- HAY PARK
- HAY-ON-WYE
- HAYMARKET

Please not that many names (e.g., Queens Ferry/Queensferry) appeared in both one- and two-word forms in railway sources at different times.

Suburban stations are listed under their own names. The name under which full details are given is normally the present name if it is still open or its name at closure. If a town or city has, or had, two or more stations where the place name is/was the first word of the station name (e.g., BATH SPA; BATH GREEN PARK), entries are preceded by an underlined heading, giving the place’s name. Where the place’s name is/was the second word, it is normally treated thus: SOUTH CROYDON is under ‘S’, with cross-reference under ‘C’. Exceptions have been made for a few places where the complications make it seem sensible to put all its stations in one place; cross-references are provided for those where readers might initially look in the wrong place. Cross-references are also provided for alternative names where these are significantly different but not for minor differences of the ‘BATH GW see BATH SPA’ type, nor for cases where a name has appeared as both one and two words. Where ‘HALT’, ‘SIDING’ or ‘PLATFORM’ was part of a name, it is not included in the heading, but is mentioned in the text. Commas or brackets that were part of the name are usually omitted to avoid confusion; similarly, the possessive apostrophe is normally omitted. In both cases practice has been very variable both over time and region (St. James being a leading victim). After a town or station name has been given once, initial letters only are used, unless ambiguity might result.

The organisation of entries is flexible, allowing each entry to be given in the way that seems most suitable. The components are explained below, but do not always appear in the order given.

Stations of the same name in different areas are generally distinguished by ‘near ….’ after the name; counties are only used if they actually formed part of the name (according to RCH sources or the body of a tt, not the index). This approach is used to avoid the need for alteration when local government boundaries are changed.

Company name – shown […]. Normally, the company quoted is the one that operated the station at the end of 1922, or at closure if this was earlier. Following the usual custom, no reference is made to companies that were still legally independent but had their trains operated by another company. Stations not owned by a railway company (e.g., those provided by the government for munitions workers) are similarly ascribed to the company operating the service to and from then. Stations opened from 1923 to 1947 are ascribed to the company responsible for opening them. No reference is given for stations opened since nationalisation, unless they were opened by the London Underground or some other organisation not subject to British Railways. Exceptions have been made for operating companies that only lost their independence late, including all of those involved in amalgamations that were preliminaries to the main grouping. The London, Tilbury & Southend is shown, though by 1922 it was part of the Midland. The handling of the south east is more complicated. The South Eastern (SE) and the London, Chatham & Dover (LCD) in 1899 created the South Eastern & Chatham Railway Companies Managing Committee (SEC) to run their lines operationally as one, though they were still legally separate. Here SE and LCD are used for stations opened before the ‘merger’ and SEC for later ones. Stations now part of the London Underground are given their present line names; if they were opened by a ‘surface’ railway, that is also mentioned. Abbreviations (list below) are used where frequent reference has to be made to a company; where only occasional mention is needed the name is given in full. Names are sometimes given in a simpler form than their full legal ones, especially where it was normal in the nineteenth century to do this. Reference is made occasionally to unusual arrangements, such as the partitioning of the City of Glasgow Union between North British and Glasgow & South Western in 1896.

Opening date. The date given is that when fare-paying passengers were first carried on a train shown in the ordinary public timetable. Non-timetable and occasional stations and services are treated as seems most appropriate to their circumstances and the evidence available. The nature of the evidence is such that even for public stations this has to be expressed in different ways:

- If the entry is simply ‘op …’ it means that the source quoted in brackets immediately after gives believable evidence that the station really did open that day.
- If it is ‘op 1 May 1850 (source – line)’, it means that the quoted source only supplies the line date and not details of intermediate stations. However, the station is in the first timetable seen for the line, after and within a month or two of its opening. The vast majority of stations so shown will have opened on the date given.
- With some early stations, the entry will be e.g.: ‘line op … in early Freeing’, which means that it was included in a very early description of the line. Again, the vast majority of these will have opened with their lines.
‘Line op 1 May 1850, nd (= no detail), August 1851’ means either that no timetable prior to August 1851 has been seen or that the timetables seen did not give full details until then, so that one cannot be sure whether the station opened with the line or at some time up to and including the date given after ‘nd’. Where other evidence has later come to light in cases like this, it has shown that most did open with the line. An awkward category is where short branches or additional stretches of line were opened and initially the timetable gave just the terminus of the new stretch, adding one intermediate station a few months later. These cases are far more difficult to judge than those where several stations were included with the line and only one added later. Another problem sometimes arose when a new branch was opened, joining the main line at a point away from existing stations so that a new junction station had to be built. Sometimes this was not shown at first, though it is clear from working arrangements that something had to exist at the junction.

‘First in Brad June 1851’ or something similar means it is reasonably certain that it opened after its line and this is the best available evidence for dating its appearance. It must be emphasised that this will be an approximation; whilst many stations did open on the first of the month in which they were first included, others did not appear in Brad for several months after opening and a few were not included for years – or ever – presumably because the companies did not think them worth a mention. Far more rarely, stations were put in early.

‘First trains May 1850’ means previously included in the timetable without any trains shown calling.

Closing date. The date given, following accepted practice, is that of the first day when services would normally have run but did not. In the vast majority of cases, this will have been a Monday, with the last train running the previous Friday, Saturday, or Sunday. If there was a big gap between the date of the last train and the official closure, the entry will be: ‘Last train ….;’ no reference will be made to the official date.

Where the date was not a Monday, the day of the week is quoted in brackets after the date; this is done to highlight issues fully explained in Section 3. The commonest use after 1922 is (Sunday), for stations on the Southern Railway, which normally began its new timetables on Sundays. Days of the week are not given when a closed station was immediately replaced by another.

In most cases an exact date is available but a few dates have had to be derived from timetables. These are shown: ‘Last in tt ….’ or similarly. It should again be borne in mind that these are approximations and that some stations remained in the timetable after closure. ‘Inertia?’ is included where there is a suspicion that there might have been a delay in removing the station. ‘Last trains …’ means that the station was included in later timetable(s) but no trains were shown calling.

Intermediate closures and re-openings are shown; the same principles apply to these as to first openings and final closures. Where timetables have had to be quoted, it is: ‘Last in tt ….; back in tt ….’ Especially early on, it is unsafe to assume that a station closed just because it was omitted from the timetable for a few months; other evidence is needed to be certain. Where the closure was clearly intended to be temporary (as was the case with many stations closed in 1917 as a war-time economy measure), or was a short one, the phrasing will be ‘clo…; reop (= re-opened).’ or a variant based on timetables. If the closure was clearly intended to be permanent, or the intention is not known and the gap a long one, the uses are listed (a), (b), etc. This is an area where many differences of opinion will be found on the question of what should and should not be included. Here, deliberate closures for engineering works and closures resulting from major structural failures are included up to 1994 whilst those resulting from strikes, accidents and short-term flooding are generally not.

Changes of site are mentioned, with details if known. As far as possible, where a station on a new site immediately replaced another, the replacement is normally treated as a continuation of that replaced, not as a new station. Where the replacement carried, or was later given, a different name, it is normally shown as a separate station. This method is followed regardless of distance between sites.

Name variations are shown. No attempt is made to lay down the law over what was ‘official’ and what not since the evidence seen suggests that usage was often variable amongst railwaymen themselves, perhaps depending on the circumstances in which a name had to be quoted. Practice seems to have become more exact over time, especially after the reorganisations of the twentieth century.

If part of the entry is ‘CENTRAL added …’ it means the station opened as X and was renamed X CENTRAL on the date or in the year quoted. For reasons explained in Section 3, dating is often confined to a year-only basis or ‘in the early years’ or ‘aot’ used.

If a name variation is quoted as ‘hb’ or ‘tt’, it means that it was certainly in that source at some stage; it does not necessarily mean that this was the only place it appeared.

The name used for stations still open is that shown in tables in the body of the Rail Times. Different versions will sometimes be found – e.g. on station name-boards or tickets.

Other detail felt to be of interest is included, e.g.: if it was a station served only by market trains for all or part of its existence; if it had any use as a private station prior to, or after, its public existence); if it was a HALT, SIDING or PLATFORM; if it was at one time a request station of some sort, though it is likely than some halts not shown as request stops were in fact such – halts were often simply listed in footnotes, without any details about times and the like. Formal openings and pre-opening excursions are included if there was fairly wide public use. Where dated excursions are included they should usually be regarded as examples rather than as part of a complete history; sometimes the entry is just ‘later excursions’ and no attempt is made to date final use of a station since this would have been occasional and erratic and survival of the information depends on chance.

‘P’ is mostly used in cases where the only evidence is an entry in a Railway Clearing House Hand-book; this will mostly concern stations without a public timetabled service (often excursion stations). From 1877 the Hand-books had a series of columns showing the facilities available at the main locations. The inclusion of ‘P’ meant that passenger and/or parcel facilities should have been available. However, there were misprints and it was only in 1904 that stations handling only parcels (as well as goods and/or livestock) were differentiated from those catering for passengers also, so that in the earlier books, ‘P’ might have meant ‘parcels’, not ‘passengers’.

Map location – shown […]. One possibility would have been to give Ordnance Survey six-figure references for all; however, finding these would have taken at least as long again as did the collection of the information presented here and, anyway, such references are no use to someone trying to find a station on a map not provided with the Ordnance Survey grid, or without access to a full set. Readers are initially referred to the atlases listed below, chosen because they are normally in print.

For stations still open see SK Baker’s Rail Atlas of Great Britain & Ireland, OPC/Ian Allan. For stations open about 1914 see British Railways Pre-Grouping Atlas & Gazetteer published by Ian Allan. Though the atlas is dated 1922, in practice the vast majority of stations closed during and just after the First World War were still included.

Provided that a station is shown on one (or both) of the atlases mentioned by name in the previous two paragraphs, no reference to its location is given here. Where a station is not so shown, either because it closed before 1922, or both opened and closed after 1922, the location is explained, if possible, by reference to stations on the 1922 map: e.g. Yeo Mill is shown {East Anstey – Bishops Nympton} – i.e. it is between those two stations (which are in the Ian Allan Atlas). The reference stations may be shown with abbreviated names. Please remember to use the station’s name in 1922 when seeking to find by this method. Where this is not possible, the reference will be {see map […]} and the station will be found on the appropriate map in Section 8. If U is used as a source, a six-figure OS reference will often be found there for the station concerned.

A fuller list of atlases is provided near the end of Section 3. Even though, between them, they show nearly all the stations included in this book, the number of atlases involved, and the difficulties likely to be met in trying to find copies of some of them, make it seem unreasonable to expect the reader to hunt for and through all of them. At the same time, the policy followed does provide a major saving of space.

GENERAL ABBREVIATIONS

* = see note later in the entry.

 after a date = see the note of that date in Section 5, where notes are in chronological order and may include material about the station and/or line’s later history. Sources given there are not repeated in individual station entries.

aot = at one time. Used where reliable exact dates have not been found.

co ½ = information issued in a company half-yearly report or at a meeting following it.

co n = notice issued by the operating company, usually as a newspaper advertisement. Where a book or magazine article is cited, it means that the opening notice was reproduced in it. After 1948 the ‘company’ will be BR.

co tt = timetable issued by the company operating the line.

hb = Railway Clearing House Station Hand-book.

hba = Appendix to Railway Clearing House Station Hand-book.

HL = High Level

LL = Low Level

used to distinguish between two stations, usually close together, in the same town or between two, perhaps separately run, parts of one station.

nd = no detail – see explanation under Opening Dates, first line on page 33.

tt = timetable; please see earlier section for more exact information. not given unless they are different from those of the opening date.

Since the material used has been accumulated over many years, much of it before there was any thought of publication, it has been found impossible to trace some of the sources. Where an opening date is involved, some attempt has been made to justify the date given, so the reference is: date (?; first in tt …).

Where information is given such as disappeared from tt Month A Year X / Month B Year Y, it should be interpreted to mean ‘was still present A, was no longer present B, nothing seen in between’.
ABBREVIATIONS OF RAILWAY COMPANIES’ NAMES

In most cases, the word ‘Railway’ needs to be added to the name given. The exceptions are those where ‘Line’, ‘Tramway’ or ‘Committee’ are given in the titles. For the most part, the abbreviations used are those given in Clinker’s Register, since many readers will already be familiar with these. The main differences concern railways such as the Lynton & Barnstaple, where ‘Lynton’ still saves space but is more readily recognisable than ‘LB’. Where companies are shown ‘A/B’, it means that the station in question was in some way jointly owned by A and B; separate listings for the various combinations are not given (there is a large number of them). Where ‘A; B’ is shown, it means that the two companies operated the station’s services at different times. For more details on companies, see Companies or A Warren’s book listed at the end of Section 2; the former gives more information, the latter is restricted to the legal framework but is more accurate. For more on the complexities of joint ownership see the papers on this topic by various contributors in the RCHS Railway Chronology Group Newsletters, numbers 15 to 19.

problems of interpretation as 'omnibus', which see. Bradshaw intermittently, others did not. The possibility existed for all to be unofficial joining or leaving points, though often few people lived passengers might be expected, officially at least, to walk the inclines. Some of these stops appeared in the timetables, often the help of stationary engines, which meant a stop at top and bottom to attach and detach haulage cables. Glossary

Coach in the early days could cause the same problems of interpretation as ‘omnibus’, which see.

Depot was sometimes used in the early days for ‘station’, especially in Scotland.

Down trains are those from London; up trains towards. Cross-country lines need individual listing. As far as possible, the terms are avoided here – ‘northbound’, ‘towards x’ being used instead.

Exchange station. In theory, a station provided only for changing between main and branch line trains. Passengers could not be booked to or from such stations. Often there was no official public access. However, the possibility of local ‘arrangements’ should not be ruled out.

Excursion Platform / Station. At some places extra long platforms were provided so that large numbers could join and alight from lengthy excursion trains of the period; these usually had separate entrances as an extra means of avoiding delays to other travellers. They were usually shown in companies’ notices as if part of the main station even though in some cases they were some distance away; locals often used them as reference points in adverts as though they were separate.

Flag station – see Signal station.

Formal openings: A common practice was to have a ceremonial opening. Most were held the day before the public opening though some were well before, the same day as, or several days after, the public one. Generally these are ignored – apart from anything else they sometimes applied to the line rather than individual stations.

Halt: simple stopping place, usually unstaffed, with basic provision of platform and, perhaps, minimal shelter. Originally spelled ‘Halte’ – the idea was copied from the continent. Company usage varied and was both erratic and inconsistent. Some (e.g. LNW) had halts but did not always call them that (Bradshaw often did). In the mid-1920s ‘halt’ was removed from the names of many ex-Lancashire & Yorkshire stops, but they seem still to have been (mostly, if not all) treated as halts; the 8 July 1935 it had a note on the page containing the St Helens to Ormskirk service that certain trains did not stop at the halts but no ‘halts’ appeared in the tables or other notes. Halts, whether named as such or not, were frequently relegated to footnotes. The term was used from soon after 1900, when such stops were added to serve places not warranting the cost of proper stations; later the aim was to counter road competition. Many were simply extra stops on existing services but in some areas several were opened at close intervals and a special ‘Rail Motor’ service was laid on for them. Further complications are explained in notes on ‘1904’ and ‘1905’. In later years cost-cutting meant that many stations became unstaffed. At first the Western Region generally added ‘Halt’ in the timetable but the North Eastern and Scottish did not. Thus RM, February 1960, said most stops on the Hornsea and Withernsea branches had been reduced to unstaffed halts but the timetable only included a symbol to show they were unstaffed; some on the Ballater line received similar treatment later 1960. Later in the 1960s ‘Halt’ was generally dropped from names. Oddly the handful that kept the title longest were in Scotland. Overall, usage appears to have been less precise than some writers have claimed.

Incline was used to describe a stretch of line with a steep gradient. At first trains often had to be worked up and down such lines with the help of stationary engines, which meant a stop at top and bottom to attach and detach haulage cables. For safety reasons, passengers might be expected, officially at least, to walk the inclines. Some of these stops appeared in the timetables, often intermittently, others did not. The possibility existed for all to be unofficial joining or leaving points, though often few people lived nearby. Over time the inclines were replaced by more gently graded deviation lines, or ceased to cause operating problems as locomotive power increased.

Inspection. From 1840 the Board of Trade (or its replacement) had to be notified before a line could be opened to passengers and an Inspector (for a long time always a Royal Engineers officer) was sent to check on many aspects of safety. At first the report was advisory but the law was soon altered to allow officialdom to refuse opening if he recommended this. Any major faults found had to be rectified and the line re-inspected before it could open, though with lesser faults the authorities might be content with a written promise from the company to put the defects right. Failure to satisfy the Inspector frequently caused delays in opening. At first these requirements did not apply to stations opened after the line, but the law was later extended to include them. Sometimes ways around the law were found (see Section 5, ‘1844’).

Narrow gauge was used initially to mean what would now be called ‘standard’ gauge, as opposed to Brunel’s ‘broad’ gauge. In this work, ‘standard’ is used for 4 foot 8½ inch gauge, ‘narrow’ for lesser gauges.

Offset was used on some early Scottish railways in the way that ‘Halt’ was used later.

Omnibus was used in two ways in the early timetables, sometimes even in the same table. One referred to road services provided in connection with trains. The other equalled ‘horse-drawn railway carriage’.

Passenger duty. Taxes were levied on private coaches and public stagecoaches, so it was inevitable that railways would also become liable. The tax was modified from time to time but not abolished until 1929. In the early years the fact that a particular railway company paid this tax is sometimes the only evidence available to show that passengers were carried.

‘Platform as part of a name: used for stops that ranked between stations and halts (which see, above). Usually one or two staff were available and parcels might be handled but accommodation was still very basic.

‘Siding as part of a name: Generally ‘siding’ equalled some sort of provision for goods. Some came to be granted passenger services, often of the one or two days a week variety; the ‘facilities’ would have been minimal – perhaps just platforms beside the running lines.

Signal station (alias Request station, Flag station). Trains only stopped (and in some cases still do stop) at some stations when there were (and are) passengers to be picked up or set down. The usual arrangement is that anyone wanting to alight informs the guard, when joining the train or at the ordinary station immediately before the request stop, and that signals are used to halt trains when anyone needs to be picked up. Here, such stations are shown ‘at request’; the qualification for this reference is that for at least part of a station’s life its entire week-day service was provided this way. No attempt is made to date the period when they were request stops. To begin with, the majority of these were to be found on lines belonging (or later belonging) to the GE and the GN. Later they were mostly in the remoter parts of Wales or the Highlands and on lesser companies’ lines.

Temporary start. Sometimes when railways were being built a length of line would be opened to a spot beside a main road where there was no intention of providing a permanent station. Road coaches would be laid on to take passengers to the next major town. This was usually done when a structure such as a tunnel or viaduct had to be completed before the next stretch could be opened and a lengthy delay in opening the already-built section would otherwise have occurred. Later such stations might be provided briefly if a line was cut by e.g. a tunnel collapse or by a dispute between companies over the use of a junction or station.

Ticket platform. At one time it was common practice to stop trains at a special platform just before major stations, especially termini, so that tickets could be collected or checked. Some appeared in the timetables, usually as places where people could alight only. Less often, they were sited just after main stations and, even more rarely, available as joining points. Some developed into full stations.

Temporary platform: seems to have been used in several ways; most commonly either to mean something provided just for one event, or a facility always present but only used occasionally (e.g. Queen’s Station Edinburgh, Powderham). It was even used of what was officially Bott Lane Halt in the Nelson Leader, 15 January 1932; there its primitive condition would seem to have given some justification for this.

Up trains: towards London; see also ‘Down trains’, above.

Workmen’s services. On some lines cheap travel for workmen and women was provided on early morning and evening trains, either via special or normal services. The practice had its origins in the demolition of inner city residential areas to make room for lines and stations. The intention was that displaced workers would be compensated by cheap travel to and from their new, more distant, homes. In reality it did not work quite like that. The services mainly benefited skilled workers with secure jobs. The unskilled casual labourers, likely to be the main victims of the demolition, had to stay in the centres to be near whatever casual work was going, at whatever time it was offered, and, in any case, would not have been able to afford even the ‘low’ workmen’s fares.

Length: 22 yards = 1 chain
1760 yards or 80 chains = 1 mile.

Money: 12d (pence) = 1s or 1/- (shilling)

ANDOVERS福德

ANDOVERS福德 [GW] op 1 June 1881 (Bristol Merc 2nd). Though MSWJ trains ran through here from 1891, it was not included in MSWJ tables in Brad until October 1904; since an extra minute was then added to timings of trains stopping there, it would seem to have been an addition then rather than something previously happening but not included in tt (e.g. exchange only use). Clo 15 October 1962 (Birmingham Daily Post 10th). In MSWJ tables was A JUNCTION from start; J added GW tables in Brad and GW co its later; dropped from Brad 1960, though this had been only station for here since 1927.

A & DOWNSWELL [MSWJ] op 1 August 1891 (Chelt Exam 29 July) as D; renamed 1 October 1892 (hbl 27th); clo 1 April 1927 (Friday) (co n Gloucester Citizen 25 March).

ANERLEY

ANERLEY BRIDGE [London & Croydon] op 5 June 1839 (co n T 6th); Co n e.g. Morning Advertiser 10 June 1839: ‘after Wednesday next, 12th June [details of alteration to times]; and after that day the trains will not stop, either upwards or downwards, at the Penge or Anerley stations.’ Later usage would be clo 13 June 1839.

ANERLEY [LBSC] probably op 1 July 1839: co n dated thus Morning Advertiser 6th. Trains now stop at Anerley Station (Penge Wood), nearest to Westow Hill, Norwood, West Wickham, Beckenham and Bromley. Visitors to the Beulah Spa, the Park Hotel, and to the Cemetery, Norwood, will find that the most pleasant way is by the Anerley Station.’

Possible that second entry represented reopening of earlier station with tag designed to appeal to more potential travellers but more likely to represent new station. Both were missing from later June tts (e.g. one dated 20th in ibid 28th) and gap between two would have allowed whatever primitive facilities then passed for a station to be moved from one site to another (descriptions, admittedly only very brief, in various papers of several pre-public opening directors’, experimental and shareholders’ trips only mentioned stations at New Cross, Sydenham and Jolly Sailor).

Suggested sites (based on Stanford’s Library Atlas of London, 1854, nearest sufficiently detailed to hand): first at the southern end of station shown there, alongside bridge; second at the northern end of one shown. The Croydon company clearly wanted to develop Anerley (and Beulah Spa) as entertainment and recreational centres in the way that Crystal Palace developed soon after, killing off the others in the process. Co notice (Morning Advertiser 1 May 1840) said that booths selling refreshments, etc, had been set up in the beautiful wood adjoining the station and offering a welcome to picnic parties and anglers (to fish in canal bordering the gardens). Later there were adverts for concerts there. By 1854 had rebuilding resulted in present station occupying ground covered by both?

London Evening Standard 19 April 1865: on Good Friday (14th) porter killed, allegedly while trying to take hold of door of one on carriages when on ticket platform. Only reference seen; Anerley station probably being used as ticket platform for Croydon.

East London service added 23 May 1910.

ANGARRACK [West Cornwall] op 11 March 1852 with rebuilt line (co n R Cornwall Gac: 12th). Last in Brad October 1853; still in tt

Western Courier (Plymouth paper) 3 May 1854, last detailed tt seen there but relevant its there were not given specific dates; all were headed “Trains will run at the following Times until further notice . . .” and no change in timings noted since February 1853, suggesting that this was inertia; Gwinear Road (which see) had not been added and latter seems to have been replacement for here.

ANGEL [Nor] op 17 November 1901 (T 16th); see 1922; still open.

ANGLING CLUB COTTAGE [NB] (non-tt): Earliest evidence so far seen (likely to be well after opening) is in Southern Reporter 19 June 1879 (copied from Times of 10th). This details history of Edinburgh Club founded in 1847 which originally used “Betsy’s Cottage” for overnight or longer stays, two or three miles below present home in “The Nest” (alias “Robin’s Nest”), to which they moved some 20 years before. Trains ran past back of house and stopped by request. Still in LNE sectional appendix November 1947, when trains only stopped when told by station-masters at Clunneysford and Thornclee either side of this PLATFORM; passengers were to be set down told station-masters, those to be picked up had to give prior warning; members of Edinburgh Angling Club could get special tickets to/from here; non-members had to pay to/from station beyond/before.

NB wtt March 1897 refers to ‘opening’ (= first use for this purpose? – or passengers just dropped on ground previously) of temporary platform at THE NEST for workmen, one train each way stopping Mondays to Saturdays to set down and pick up workmen, who were to be accommodated in carriages next to rear Guard’s Van, tickets to be collected on “Going Journey” at Galashiels.

ANSTRUTHER (a) original terminus op 1 September 1863 (Scotsman 2nd) >
ANSTRUTHER (b) through station on line to Boarhills op 1 September 1883 (Glasgow Morning Journal 5th); clo 6 September 1965 (Aberdeen Press 20 August). Was A NEW (hb). Became A for CELLARDYKE Brad 1933/4 and thus to 1963/4 tt.

Tt and account of opening in Fifeshire Journal 6 September show that both stations were in use together for some months; turning facilities were not immediately available at new one. Brad September 1883 shows the Anstruther & St Andrews trains running through Anstruther to Pittenweem, which the local paper called the junction station (it was thus for passengers wanting to go west); in this table new shown as Anstruther & St Andrews Company station, old as NB station in separate table. Through running begun in December and old station closed; probably last used 27 December 1883 (discontinued ‘yesterday’ – East of Fife Record 28th – see R Maund, Chron January 2010).

Ticket Platform: first reference seen was in Montrose. Arbroath 1 November 1867 – uncooperative passengers on 24 October 1867 but clearly in use earlier. Replaced 1868: about a dozen years ago present ticket platform was erected at the Dens, opposite Shanks and Sons’ Ironworks and in use ever since; now see new in course of construction on south side of Stobcross Bridge alongside Wellgate Works; more convenient, especially if passengers allowed to leave once tickets collected (Dundee Courier24 March 1868), New now in use: understand intended to construct another at St Vigeans, cause all up trains to halt, and take for passengers on south (ibid 10 April 1868) [nothing found to confirm that latter was provided]. Certainly public use of new platform: letter from correspondent in Arbroath (Dundee Advertiser 27 April 1885) – suggested gateway into Stobcross Lane so that the great number who take the liberty of leaving the train have safe and convenient access to street; that via Wellgate not. Item about scattered nature of railway facilities at Arbroath included sketch plan; includes station beside Keptie Street and Wellgate ticket platform beside Orchard Street (Dundee Evening Post 28 January 1903). BALBECHLIE [DPA; Cal] (map 9)
Line op 16 December 1831 (Newtyle; see 1831 B); stops at B FOOT and B TOP (of incline). Once tt coverage became regular, B FOOT was last in Brad March 1853; back July 1854, Fridays only; last July 1855; however, the needs of incline haulage meant that trains would always have had to stop there. B TOP clo 16 October 1860, when incline bypassed by deviation (co n Dundee ... Advertiser 16th).
By August 1855 some sort of station existed here (at top?) – adverts (e.g. ibid 10th) said building materials could be delivered there.
The Fridays only references in Brad might have been result of misunderstanding: Co notices in Dundee papers said that a Friday train would not carry passengers for B Foot (implying that others would) but a special train would be provided for this and a couple of other stations (extra traffic for market day?)
From 22 to 26 July 1854 the incline was closed to all traffic for repairs to the engine houses. Local passengers had to walk the incline, those going via Newtyle were sent by the Scottish Midland line (co n Dundee Advertiser 21st).

BALLOCH [DB] Line op 15 July 1850. Initially Brad just showed BALLOCH, as did Murray April 1852. First specific reference to B PIER in Brad was September 1858 (present by 1 August 1858 co tt), but it was early regular practice not to give town and pier stations separately. Scottish Railway Gazette, describing line at opening said passengers would be carried onto pier and could step straight onto steamers – it did not mention any ‘town’ station – oversight? – or that a later addition? Since line was originally primarily for steamer services, would there have been any point in ‘town’ station until line connected to main system in 1858? Ticket (JB), perhaps pre-1858, exists for B-WHARF. ‘Town’ station became B CENTRAL 30 June 1952 (CI) but still B Station in wtt 30 June 1952; re-sited 24 April 1988, just short of original, to avoid level crossing (BLN 60/7); renamed B 15 May 1989; still open. PIER mostly summer use only; clo 29 September 1986 (RM October – last train Sunday, 28th).

BALLOCH [High] – see 1957.

B JUNCTION [GW]: 18 September 1850 a booking office at Pie Corner for the Rhumney Road traffic was ordered (several re-inspections were necessary before line sanctioned for opening); it op 23 December 1850, as RHYMNEY JUNCTION. 17 June 1858 ordered that at completion of deviation works at Pie Corner, the present booking office should be removed to new platform (Mon min). OS maps show Pye Corner beside Bassaleg stations – it is shown in Cobb, but partly obscured by an overprint; this was where the Rumney Tramroad (later owned by Brecon & Merthyr) joined the Monmouthshire’s line. MT6/17/94 deals with inspection on 25 November 1858 of deviation and new junctions at Pye Corner. Total length of new line 49 chains; included new station building and two substantial masonry bridges, eliminating four level crossings. Tracing included shows new station approximately alongside east of original. No date for change to new station can be given since the new stretches of line had been brought into use piecemeal and all were already in use before the inspection. This was strictly illegal but the inspector accepted that this was unavoidable, given need to keep traffic going, and recommended approval of opening. Renamed B J 1858 t; became B 1878/81 (Brad); clo 1 January 1917 (GW notice dated 22 December 1916), reop 3 March 1919 (GW circ 2653); back to B J 1 July 1924 (GW circular 18 June); clo 30 April 1962 (T 6 April). BATH

B GREEN PARK [Mid] op 4 August 1860 (Bath Chron 5*/); G P added 18 June 1951 (Operating Circ 55, 31 May); clo 7 March 1966 (Shepton 11*/). Was B QUEENS SQUARE (Brad, and SR t August 1939 – but latter printed by Brad); Brad added this in SD Jt table soon after opening to Bath, in Mid table 1882/3, dropped 1942/3. * = Bath Chron describes station that was unfinished (normal) but clearly intended to be permanent; item 28 April 1870 is mainly about new goods station that would open 2 May but mentions extensions to platforms (one of 240 feet) then under way; thus 5 May 1870 is probably better interpreted as date when extensions were completed, rather than a re-siting. (For more detail see CG Maggs, The Mangotsfield to Bath Line, Oakwood, 2005.) Ticket platforms here – (a) see WESTON BATH, below,

(b) on Somerset & Dorset line from opening 20 July 1874, about a mile from Bath, some 200 feet long (Bath Chronicle 23*/).

Closed? Photograph of site, near Faulkland Road. Durley Park (ibid 24 August 1935.).

B SPA [GW] op 31 August 1840 (Bristol Stand 3*/); SPA added 1949/50 Brad; still open. B MANVERS STREET 1883 to 1904/5 (Brad).

(Non-tt) temporary platform outside Sidney Gardens so that Loyal Address could be presented to Duke and Duchess of Connaught on 20 July 1881; came by ordinary train, their carriage detached at station and backed to Gardens, on London side of it (Western Daily Press 21*/). Modern spelling Sydney Gardens. Same or nearby used again for Duchess of Albany when she came to open the new Queen’s (massage) Bath at the Spa 13 June 1889 (Western Daily Press 14*/).

BATH ROAD [NSWJ] op 8 April 1909 (L); clo 1 January 1917 (T 22 December 1916); ‘HALT’ – see 1905; (Hammersmith & Chiswick branch).

BATHHAMPTON [GW] op 2 February 1857 (co ½ Wiltshire Independent 12*/); clo 3 October 1966 (WD Press 3*/).

BATHFORD [GW] op 18 March 1929 (Bath Chron 16*/); HALT; clo 4 January 1965 (RM February); (Box – Bathampton).

BATHGATE

BATHGATE op 24 March 1986 (RM May); on site of 1849 station when that was just ‘Bathgate’. 1896 station, a terminus, replaced 18 October 2010* by through station 400 metres east, for use on the opening of the line to Airdrie, 12 December 2010 (The Scotsman 19 October, 13 December); still open.

* = last used Saturday 16*, untimetabled Sunday service did not run as line then diverted (Network Rail Handbill – also confirmed above).

B LOWER [NB] op 1 March 1856 (co n Falkirk Herald), without BoT approval; soon closed – probably by 13 March, when BoT appointed inspector (MT 12/2), though advertisement for service still in paper of that date (inertia?), certainly by 20 March (date of co minute ‘has closed’). Reop 7 July 1856 (SRO BR/MNK/12), Clo 1 May 1930 (Thursday) (co n Scotsman 7 April). In co wts B MONKLAND at first; LOWER added after January but before April 1870 co tt.

B UPPER [NB] 12 November 1849 (Rtn); see 1851 November 29; when the line from Airdrie opened 11 August 1862 it used existing station with reversal; replaced by through station 1 June 1871 (R Maund Chron July 2011); clo 9 January 1956 (RM February). B EdG in co wts at first; UPPER added after January but before April 1870 co tt.

BATLEY [map 55].

BATLEY [GN] op 1 November 1864 (co n Leeds Times 29 October); clo 7 September 1964 (Cl). Chickenley Heath line platform here was referred to as LOWER BATLEY at clo (Whittle).

BATLEY [LNW] op 18 September 1848 (co n Leeds Intelligencer 16* – line, in description of intended formal trip 31 July Leeds Mercury 29*/); still open.

Also see UPPER BATLEY.

BATLEY CARR [GN] op 12 April 1880 (both GN vol II p 118 and LNW Officers 20652 say line between Batley and Dewsbury was opened now, in one piece, not in two sections, as given by D&C 8); clo 6 March 1950 (Cl).

BATTERSBY [NE]: logically op 1 April 1868 as junction for line opened via (Great) Ayton (NE maps); initially tt apparently gives Ingleby as connection point; first certain tt ref, as INGLEBURY JUNCTION, is Brad January 1869. Ayton line table; not added Whiby line table until June 1874; renamed B JUNCTION 30 September 1878 (Cl; RCG ref October), B 1 May 1893 (Cl); still open.

BATTERSEA [WL] op 2 March 1863 (LSW: co n T 4th); clo 14 September 1940 (wtt supp).

B PARK [LBSC] (a) op 1 October 1860 (co n T 1st) as B; PARK added 1 July 1862 (Cl); at times B P & STEAMBOAT PIER (L); clo 1 November 1870 (Tuesday) (Cl). February 1863 Brad – LCD using, with note that their trains called for passengers to/from Railway Pier by river steamboats which ran at frequent intervals. After closure 1870 was kept as booking-point for steamboat passengers, who presumably had to walk along bridge to Grosvenor Road (M Searle, Chron. Juli 2004).

B PARK [LBSC] (b) op 1 May 1867 (L) as YORK ROAD; became Y R & B P 1 November 1870 (L), B P & Y R 1 January 1877 (RCG); B P 1 June 1885 (L; RCG ref July); still open.

BEALINGS [GE] op 1 June 1859 (Ipswich Journal 4th); clo 17 September 1856 (RM September).

BEAM BRIDGE [BE] op 1 May 1843 (Taunton 3rd), temporary terminus between Wellington and Whiteball Tunnel, providing connection with road service to Exeter pending completion of tunnel. Removed from it when line extended 1 May 1844.

‘Accepted version’ is that was passenger only. However, GW minutes (RAIL 250/120 on) show it was used for goods and continued to be so after that closure, at least until early 1847 and was served by 9.30 a.m. ex Paddington and 2 p.m. ex Exeter, which included passenger carriages. However, it is unlikely that, officially at least, passengers could still use it. It was included in table of charges for goods traffic (27 February 1845) but (-) in column used for 3rd class passenger fares, which were included with this table.

BEAMISH [NE] op 1 February 1894 (Sunderland Daily Echo 1st); clo 21 September 1953 (RM October).

BEANACRE [GW] op 30 October 1905 (Wiltshire Times Saturday 28 October – will be opened on Monday); HALT; clo 7 February 1955 (Cl). Hb 1938: BEACARE; corrected 1941a.

BEARLEY [GW] op 10 October 1860 (Northampton Mercury 1st); became HALT 21 June 1965, HALT dropped 6 May 1968 (Cl); still open.

BEAR Park [NE] op 1 June 1883 (Sunderland Daily Echo 31 May) as ALDIN GRANGE; renamed 11 May 1927 (hhb July); clo 1 May 1939 (Cl); used for miners’ galas until 1954 or later (U). According to Brad was A G for B prior to renaming.

BEARDSDEN [NB] op 20 April 1863 (see Milngavie); still open.

BEASDALE [NB] op 1 April 1901 (Scotsman 2 April 1901 – private station for Mr. Nicholson of Arisaig House); op to public 6 September 1965 (U); aot request; still open.

In hh 1904, no indication was private; 1946 May hba shown ‘closed’ – use not continuous? NB wtt alterations for 6 February 1922 have note (probably regular fixture) that any train could be stopped at written request of Sir Arthur Nicholson of Arisaig or his manager or factor; requests could be made to person in charge at Beasdale Platform or station-masters at Lochailort or Arisaig – in first case had to telegraph to one of others.
BEATTOCK [Cal.]
BEATTOCK op 10 September 1847 (co n T 7th, where was B BRIDGE); clo 3 January 1972 (RM March).

BEAULI ST [LSW]
BEAULI ST road (a) line on 1 June 1847 (Salisbury 5th line); this shown, with trains, in Brad July 1847, first time line included and was mentioned in description of accident on 17 August 1847 (Globe 23rd) but no guarantee that trains were calling there; however, according to Fawley (no source given) it op 9 August 1847. Since company had not wanted station here (forced by Commissioners of Woods & Forests), might well have been delay – note reluctance at Southampton Blechydny; not mentioned in description of journey over line (T 17 May) – but not the only omission. Clo 1 March 1860 (Sherborne Mercury 28 February).

BEAULI ST ROAD (b) op 1 March 1895 (RCG; co n Hampshire Advertiser 26 October); same site; still open.

B JUNCTION 1859/60 to 1865/7

BECKHOLE(S) [NE] Spelling varied, apparently randomly rather than altering at particular times; BECK HOLE(S) also seen.

BECKHOLE(S) (a) on stretch of Whitby & Pickering op 26 May 1836, though NE pp 270-1 says by 18 July 1835 people could charter own ‘excursion trains’ (horse-drawn) to here from Whitby; not found in any public tt nor shown on Macaulay’s maps of time, though trains had to stop here for incline haulage but Beckhole was listed as a station in adverts for excursions of Grosmont Mechanics’ Institute Tuesday 15 July 1862 (Whitby Gazette 15th) and Wednesday 15 July 1863 (ibid 11th); The Examiner (7 September 1867) said that tourists would see ruins of a railway station at Beckholes. BECK HOLE(S) listed 1862 hb; 1866a ‘closed’, no later entry. Incline replaced 1 July 1865 (NE); See 1835 B.

BECKHOLE(S) (b) op 1 July 1908 as BECKHOLE (RAIL 527/191) but in Brad as BECKHOLES, terminus of summer only railmotor service, on remnant of earlier incline line, so probably at same site as (a) or near, clo end of summer 1914 (CI).

BECKINGHAM [GN/GE] op 15 July 1867 (GN/GE; GN co ½ T 19 August- line); clo 2 November 1959 (RM December).

BECKTON
BECKTON [GE] op 18 March 1874 (L); clo 9 September 1940 (last train 7th) (LNE letter Cl pap), though still appeared in its until December (last).

Earlier Gas Co workmen’s service (non-tt) began 17 March 1873; according to hb, where added ‘P’ 1874/5a, B GAS WORKS was separate station, on extension from public one; still in hb 1895, not 1904. No support elsewhere – others (e.g. L) say workers used GE station and trains. Section on extension workers’ tickets in GE co tt 4 October 1914 suggests ordinary station used then.

B ST JOHNS [LNW] op 18 November 1846; ST J added 2 June 1924 (Rly Gaz 23 May); re-sited 1 August 1862 (Cl); re-sited again 250 yards north 14 May 1984 as B ST J HALT (BR leaflet A 1200(a)4/84); still open.

* = from 8 May 1857 until opened own station 1 February 1859 Mid used LNW’s here.

Ticket platform: in course of trial of an engine driver following fatal accident on 12 March one of witnesses said ‘just opposite the carriage stop (the ticket platform against the carriage shed)’ in the course of his evidence (Bedfordshire Mercury 31 July 1875). Dates?

Non-tt:

7 and 8 October 1858 (other times also?) one train each way to/from Bletchley stopped about a mile short of LNW station for benefit of race-goers; no facilities – passengers left ‘to stride, straddle and leap’ from carriage steps to rails and cross track (letter 1922 July 31). Two temporary stations for BEDFORD AGRICULTURAL SHOW, 13 to 17 July 1874, inclusive {notices T 9th}. Map in The Engineer, 3 July 1874 shows sites. LNW immediately west of point where Mid cossed over LNW line (Kempston & Elstow here later); Mid about 1,500 yards south-west of crossing point.

BEDFORD LEIGH – see LEIGH.

BEDHAMPTON [LBSC] op Sunday 1 April 1906 (Hampshire Telegraph 24 March) as HALT; renamed 5 May 1969 (SR App); still open.

BEDLAY [MK]: line op 10 December 1849 (MK), station with line but only Wednesday and Saturday service; closed at the end of the month; [Map 16]. In co n Glasgow Herald 7 December 1849 as ‘BELDAY’. See 1844 December 26 for other services that went through this area and might have stopped here.

BEDLINGTON [NE] op 3 August 1850 (BT); clo 2 November 1964 (RM January 1965). B JUNCTION 1860 to 1865/6 (Brad). Various adverts (e.g. for sale at Bedlington Ironworks, Newcastle Courant 11 May 1855) refer to the ‘Sleckburn station’, presumed to be this one.

BEDLINOG [Taff Bargoed Joint]

BEDLINOG op 1 February 1876 (S Wales 2nd – see note, Dowlais Cae Harris); clo 15 June 1964 (RM August).

B COLLIERY JUNCTION (non-tt) miners; 1897 to 1915 (U) and 1938 (U) to 1955 at least (shown still in 13 June 1955 wti); [Bedlinog – Nantyffyn].

BEDMINSTER [GW]: This area has a complex history:

The first railway structure here was an excursion platform to serve Bristol, whose entry see for details.

It was joined by a ticket platform before 13 April 1870 when co ½, Weston-s-M Gazette said one had been erected, presumably to replace the one at Bristol – perhaps 1 August 1869 (see note at end of entry). Site was near Richmond Terrace, where gardens so pleased season ticket holders that they subscribed to prize for best cultivated garden in year ending 1 October 1874 (Western Daily Press 9 October 1873). Excursion traffic began to use this Whit-Monday, 29 May 1871 (‘on and after Whit Monday’ would be used for this, co n Western Daily Press 25th), replacing old platform at Pylle Hill. Same notice said that full use for ordinary traffic would begin on 1 June. Adsverts often referred to this simply as ‘The new Bristol excursion station’. This information apparently contradicted by refusal to improve facilities when GW took over: GW claimed that was originally built as ticket platform but locals had been allowed for a lengthened time to alight here; passengers were now booked to Bristol and Clifton from here [there was a through service Weston-s-M to Clifton] (Bristol Daily Post 7 November 1877). This suggests limited service but Brad November 1871 shows trains both ways.

It was re-sited 27 May 1884 (GW Bristol Diary, Western Daily Press Wednesday 28 May 1884). According to the Western Daily Press, 1 April 1884, which said new station was nearly complete, it was a little above the ticket platform and lower down than original excursion station and the approach was from Windmill Hill side; the old ticket platform would be connected to the up station, making it longest platform on GW [did they do this?] and the approach from Frazer Street and old light of steps to Mill Lane would be done away with. Bristol Mercury 27th said Whit-Monday and -Tuesday excursions to Weston and Clevedon would still start from the old one {just that year or always?}. Last excursion use not known. Still open for normal service.

Note: North Devon Journal 13 January 1921 gave history of man from this area who had just retired as stationmaster here after 52 years railway service. Said up ticket platform Mill Lane opened 1 August 1869 with first Bedminster (down) station, close to where Victoria Board School stood in 1921; present station opened 1 May 1886. Copied from Western Daily Press; original not seen. Not in accord with contemporary evidence seen, though name, Alford, is correct.

BEDWAS [BM] op 14 June 1865 (co n Newport 17th); clo 31 December 1962 (T 31th).
BEDWELLTY PITS [LNW]; line op 19 June 1865; first in Brad July 1861, however in use earlier. LMS S Wales p 85 shows working 1 for 1 February 1866*; this has passenger service for B LOWER both ways and miners’ service from B UPPER to Tredegar. Originally in hb as BODEM, later BEDWELLTY, then B P; became HALT 1836 (Brad); clo 13 June 1960 (RM July).

* = advert in Merthyr Telegraph (12th) for Blackwood Artillery Corps Monster Picnic and Gala at Woodfield Park (Blackwood) on 14 May 1866 includes NEW PITS as next stop from Tredegar on rail service included; presumed to be this one. Still same in similar for May 1867 event (ibid 1868).

Note that IA Atlas includes Bedwellty Pits on page 8 but has ‘Pochin Pits’ on p. 48.

BEECHBURN [S&D; NE]; {map 30}.

BEECHBURN’s history cannot be separated from that of HOWDEN with any certainty. Line op early 1844, probably initially market service only, full use 1845 (see 1843, reference to Crook). Earliest station mention so far found of HOWDEN is in an advert Durham Chronicle, 15 March 1844. In minutes of 14 February 1845 it seems to have been regarded as station, but without facilities (soon remedied). In co tt September 1847, trains calling both ways. Never in Brad. Clo by 20 December 1847 when plans for converting waiting-room into a tenement agreed (RAIL 667/52).

Topham May 1848 (earliest of series seen) has BEECHBURN, no Howden; BEECHBURN had replaced Howden in next co tt seen (June 1848) and was first in Brad July 1848, as addition to stations previously shown. All three tables showed service towards Bishop Auckland only. Minutes show that cabin from Shildon was ordered to be moved to Beechburn to serve as a waiting-room and that station was still incomplete in January 1849, but a station incomplete a year or two after opening was not unusual on the S&D. Seems to have been erratic use of names. A minor collision near ‘Howden station’ on 21 October 1848 was reported to Railway Commissioners and on 14 August 1855 improvements to HOWDEN station were authorised, suggesting it had re-opened, but S&D use of names was so casual that they probably meant Beechburn, though a brief reopening of original station cannot be ruled out entirely. There were clearly worries about safety owing to gradient hereabouts – its steepness was reason given when S&D twice refused later to re-open Howden. OS map (see D&C reprint) shows two stations in this area, one just north of Howden at Beechburn Colliery, the other just south.

Minutes of 25 November 1868 say had agreed to reopen Howden; BEECHBURN’s service became two way April or May 1869. NE notice RAIL 1021/43 dated 16 April 1869 shows that new station opened 8 March 1869 as HOWDEN and would be renamed BEECHBURN ‘henceforth’. Thus it would seem that original stop was southern one, Howden; replaced by northern, Beechburn, late 1847. In 1869 Howden was reopened and name ‘Beechburn’ transferred to it. BEECHBURN clo 8 March 1965 (RM April). B for HOWDEN-LE-WEAR in LNE tt 1933 and thus Brad and BR tts to closure.

BENTHAM [North Western; Mid]

 dialed HIGH B/HIGH/HIGHER op 2 May 1850, as terminus for time being. Inspection report dated 29 May 1850 (Rm), prior to line opening through (would happen 1 June 1850 – T 3rd), shows HIGH B as already in existence; distance given, 4 miles 15 chains to Clapham also fits HIGH B better than Low B. Still open as B.

LOW B was on stretch opened 2 May 1850 but it is not known whether station existed then, perhaps for market only use. Earliest known appearance, in a special tt for Saturday Lancaster market service, was in Lancaster 1 June 1850, in addition to tt for daily service: LOW B was shown there as well as B HIGH. This tt was last included in paper of 21 September 1850. However, market service might have continued since LOW B (as well as HIGH B) was in Brad, full service November 1851; last shown July 1853; company records show that it was closed by 4 August 1853 (Mid).

Brad just showed B at first. After July 1853 for a while it had LOW B in one direction, HIGH B in the other, before settling for HIGH; eventually HIGH dropped and then just B (1 May 1876 co tt, Mid).

B CHURCH [EU] first in Brad October 1853; on Hadleigh branch; intended as alternative station for Bentley, ready for when this would be bypassed by spur taking branch northwards; diversion scheme was dropped and station closed (or was entry in tt premature and station never provided?) – Hadleigh says unable to substantiate existence from minutes). According to tt trains stopped for passengers who had tickets for 8 miles and over (i.e. journey that involved travel over main line); this ruled out local use to Hadleigh, though this was far closer to village than station on main line. Most call it B C CROSSING but not so Brad, where it was last included December 1853.

BESCOTT [LNW] B BRIDGE op 4 July 1837 (T 6th), on GJ main line. Shown as WALSSALL by 19 October 1839 (Brad), W BESCOTT B in Freeing 1841. When South Staffs line opened to Walsall proper, 1 November 1847, this station reverted to B/B BRIDGE but still confusion – note in new table: ‘To prevent mistakes, parties ought to ask for South Staffordshire tickets to the town of Walsall’. Last in 1841
1833/1908; renamed B S by Sir Stanley Matthews 16 August 1990 (M Halle); still open. Main line trains did not at first use B J – Neele implies that both stations briefly existed together, separate services. B J first shown in main line table August 1850 tt, when it replaced B Bridge. Support is given by a letter in Birmingham Journal 3 August 1850 complaining that LNW had said that from 1 August B Bridge would be closed and trains stop at B Junction instead; writer claimed it was inconvenient because there was only access by walking along the line or by footpath.

BIRCHWOOD op 6 October 1980 (Rly Obs December); still open.

BIRDBROOK [CVH] Line through here opened 11 May 1863 (see HAVERTHILL [CVH]) but no station then provided. On 17 June Board agreed to provide a temporary station at WHITTLE while they worked out the best place for one to serve the district between Yeldham and Haverhill.
No date has been found for opening of this; ‘Whitley’ never appeared in _Brad_. 19 August they accepted request of deputation of locals to build station to serve New England, to be called BIRDBROOK (both N E and B appeared in later minutes). Again, no exact date has been found for its opening (and thus closure of Whitley); first seen in tt for 1 September 1863 in _Halstead Gazette_ (Oakwood book on line), not in June tt of paper (first _Brad_ October 1863), though it may be that earliest appearance(s) really applied to a still-in-use Whitley (decision made in August would make September opening of permanent unlikely). At 22 October 1863 and several successive board meetings they discussed provision of extra banking for Birdbrook; this _might_ indicate that station was unfinished, but the dilatory way in which matter was deferred from meeting to meeting makes it more likely that they were concerned with improvement to an existing station – as was almost standard for the time, the line had opened with various bits of work still to be done (Haverhill station was ‘temporary’). The Directors’ Report (given at board meeting of 18 February 1864) is first certain confirmation that station had been provided (RAIL 128/1, 2). Macaulay’s map of 1863 shows a station called RIDGWELL; 1865 map shows Birdbrook. _Bury & Norwich Post_, 19 May, confirmed line opening on 11th and said there was a temporary station at RIDGEWELL.

BIRKDALE BIRKDALE [LY] by 24 July 1848; B PARK 1854 tt to 1865 tt (CI); still open. Site of first station not known for certain but road crossing next north of Gilberts Crossing likeliest. 13 November 1848 Board discussed closing this and Hightown because of poor takings. Minutes 26 December suggest they had moved station to Gilbert’s Crossing (on later Peel Lane) about a month previously; nothing said about Hightown but new site for Birkdale would have been within easy reach of potential custom from former. 3 August 1852 orders were given to open ‘forthwith’ the new [third] station at Birkdale, on present site, west to north. It is not clear whether it was an immediate replacement or whether there was a gap. If Hightown did close, nothing so far found about reopening. (RAIL 372 series).

HAMILTON SQUARE [Mersey]: used 20 January 1886 when Prince of Wales and his party stopped here during journey through when he opened the Mersey Tunnel (_March Cour 23°_); public op 1 February 1886 ( _Liverpool 2nd_ ); additional lower level platform added 9 May 1977 on burrowing junction line, to allow trains to West Kirby and New Brighton to avoid flat crossing; still open. Was BIRKENHEAD H S in its until 1955/6 and thus some tickets ( _Pask_).

Hovlake & Birkenhead Rail & Tramway company owned street tramway from DOCKS to Woodside Ferry, sold to Birkenhead Tramways in October 1879 ( _Companies_). This appeared in _Brad_ after May 1872, before/with January 1874 to August 1878/January 1879; some journeys were noted as ‘express’, with no intermediate stops; even after sale, times to/from ferry continued to be included in main table (in such a way that made Docks look like through railway station).

_Hb_ 1877 gave EGERTON DOCK ‘P’ under letter ‘E’ but not in its entry under Birkenhead – assumed error.

Mid used L&B from 17 August 1841. C S added to name in it 1852 (Cl). LNW Officers 10205 and 10344 show that for Birmingham Onian Fair in 1873 LNW trains to/from south would use it but difficulties meant New Street used instead.

LNW excursion platform shown on J Brown’s Birmingham Atlas; previously used for fish; first used Good Friday 3 April 1874; last used Easter Monday 3 April 1893 (see R Maund, Chon May 2020). Inspection report (17 August 1841) on connection of Midland line to this said that ticket platform existed 400 yards before connection and suggested it should be moved to the other side of junction; L & B said would do it (Mid). Nothing else known.

For regular services both Curzon Street stations replaced by >

B NEW STREET [LNW/Mid]: temporary platform at western end for Stour Valley trains from Wolverhampton op 1 July 1852 (T 2nd); full station op 1 June 1854 when LNW (included both GJ and L&B) services diverted there; N S added to name November 1852 St (W Mid); Mid services followed on 1 July 1854* and CURZON STREET then closed. At NEW STREET, the Midland op their own side 8 February 1885 and station made Joint 1 April 1897. Still open.

* = during June 1854, Mid passengers wanting to go to on-ex-GJ line were taken by omnibus from Curzon Street to New Street.

Ticket platform here from full opening: Wolverhampton Chronicle Wednesday 7 June 1854 (opened Thursday last) included complaint that arrived at ticket platform at about ten minutes before five in the afternoon, being shunted backwards and forwards through tunnel to two different platforms and on fourth trip through tunnel being sent on the old line, passing Curzon Street at twenty minutes to seven. Banbury Street in report of embezzlement in Birmingham Daily Post 23 March 1860. Ordinary use: young woman apparently looking out for friends who were on train from Bristol killed when she stepped too close to edge (e.g. Tewkesbury Register 8 March 1884) and witness in murder case stated she had alighted here (Birmingham Daily Post 28 March 1885). Letter of protest that had been closed as alighting point since start of July (ibid 21 July 1885); item and co n ibid 29 June, said closed 1 July except for 8 local trains from Leamington branch; tickets from most trains from Coventry would be collected at Stechford and Midland tickets at Camp Hill. Complete closure of Banbury Street?

Also ticket platform on other side of New Street: advert for house in Barker Road, Sand Pits near Stour Valley ticket station (e.g. Aris 26 June 1854). South of first Edgbaston; Parker Street on later map seen. Nothing else known.

Later use for excursion trains, e.g.: Mr Gardner ran cheap trips from here to Chatsworth (item Birmingham Journal 31 May 1851, no date for actual excursion) and to Sheffield 23 June 1851 (ibid 21st); company used for return journey of excursionists Easter Monday 12 April 1852 (co n Sheffield Independent 3rd); same 23 and 26 June 1854 (co n e.g. Leeds 10th) – last seen.

B LAWLEY STREET Ticket platform (more than one site?): Warwick Advertiser 26 October 1844: on 20th trainee railway engineer got on an engine, with its driver to go from Camp Hill, tried to jump down onto ticket platform here, since it was convenient for his office, but fell and badly mutilated. Assume it was an engine going from original terminus to new one, rather than one pulling a public train. Birmingham Daily Post 21 May 1862 mentioned Lawley Street ticket platform, train from Burton. Passenger train from Derby and goods from Curzon Street collided here 10 June 1864 (Birmingham Journal 11th). According to Leicester Journal (9 January 1874) passengers were allowed to alight here. Exact dates unknown. Would certainly have closed before/with closure of Granville Street.

BISHOP AUCKLAND [map 31] (S&D; NE)

Original terminus at SOUTH CHURCH (S&D) op 19 April 1842 (RAIL 667/13). Minutes of 22 April show that trains on first day were steam-hauled but that on 20th they changed to horse-power; since horses found it difficult to judge their footing in the dark of tunnel, they ordered return to steam-haulage. Only on that day did they give orders for the building of a temporary coach station. On 4 November 1842 they agreed to alterations, suggesting that they saw it as a long-term station >

Line extended to permanent BISHOP AUCKLAND 30 January 1843 (see 1843) >
S C stayed open for a while – coach connection from here to Rainton maintained. Closed by 18 October 1844, when orders were given to convert station into railwayman’s cottages and reading room. A logical closure date would have been 19 June 1844, when opening of line from the north to Darlington would have made coach connection redundant (see entry on RAINTON); however, no confirmatory evidence seen. S C still shown on OS map about 1855 (now in converted state?).

Railway, Oakwood, 1973, p 60). Surviving goods later B BOLTON ROAD.

Line on to Clitheroe op 22 June 1850 and resulted in dispute between East Lancashire and Bolton, Blackburn, Clitheroe & West Yorkshire (then owners of new stretch) companies concerning payment for use of shared line through 1846 station; by 29 July (from start?) according to the Railway Commissioners’ Report on dispute latter’s trains were going through main station without stopping, to the inconvenience of locals and were picking up and setting down local passengers beyond junction at Daisy Field (presumably origin of station there) in order to avoid paying toll for them. Item on settlement of dispute (Preston Chronicle 14 September 1850) listed main conditions: passengers could be booked to and from Clitheroe from the Daisy Field station, those from Preston wanting to go to Clitheroe must be ‘landed’ at Darwen Street station (which would have involved extra platform since map with Commissioners’ Report shows station on line from Bolton only), and those from Bolton line wanting to go to East Lancs station must go via latter’s station; this seems to be an enlargement of Commissioners’ decision, which merely made it permissible for passengers on either line to use either station and made no mention of Daisy Field. Excursion Platform here by 25 July 1891 (Burnley Gazette – advert from Hall Road, opposite this). Preston Herald Saturday 20 October 1900 – on 1 October Central station closed and trains diverted to excursion platform so that improvements could be carried out; sufficient progress so back to normal on Monday. Manchester Evening News 14 January 1901 – four commodious excursion platforms are being constructed, each about 200 yards long, extending up to Chapel Street Bridge. Preston Herald Wed 19 February 1902 – excursion platform in use again this week owing to work between Central & S Shore. Used in Second War – mentions Lancashire Evening Post 9 July 1942 (Wakes Week excursionists) and 24 July 1943; apparently out of use ibid 8 July 1944; back in use Manchester Evening News 21 May 1945; always long queues owing to ‘rationing’ of seats. Last use?

* = paper’s report of the day deals with the formal opening and free trips for the public on this date, which would suggest some justification for giving 30th as opening date, assuming that trains did run on that date? Or even delayed until 1 May, with new tt? However, the official LY list of Acts, etc., compiled 1920 gives 29 April.

Excursion Platform here by 13 August 1870 (Preston Herald– advert for shop and house in Railway Street – directly opposite this). Letter Yorkshtoke Post ... 6 September 1883. Talbot Road excursion platform is literally a platform and nothing more: no cover, considerable distance from station. Todmorden & Distric News 21 September 1934 – new B NORTH Queen St excursion platform 785 ft long. Now effectively all one station? Lancashire Evening Post 3 July 1953 – B NORTH two excursion platforms renewed & resurfaced to deal with traffic for Royal Agricultural Show starting 7th; total length nearly 1.400 feet. Last use?

Perhaps suffered an early short-term loss of service: Northampton Mercury, Saturday 19 January 1839 said that trains ‘would commence stopping’ at the present temporary station on Monday next (21st); earlier press references (e.g. ibid 3 November 1838) had said that it would be given a first-class station to replace the original, described as little more than a wooden shed and a tremendous flight of wooden steps but the January paper referred to difficulties encountered in finding a suitable site.

After re-siting was briefly GAYTON on OS map.

BLITSWORTH [SMJ] clo 1 May 1866; clo 7 April 1952 (Cl). Originally hb treated as one station; according to hba May 1948 this was ‘closed’ – had trains been diverted to LNW station or was this error?

Bow London; {map 108}

Bow (EC) op 14 September 1840 (evidence of accident that date apparently partly caused by opening of new station and first mention found co n of alterations from that date (Morning Chronicle 8th); still open 15 November 1840 when mentioned in report of an accident (T 17th); probably closed 1 December 1840 – decision to close immediately was taken on 25 November by EC Board. Probably just east of later Victoria Park & Bow interchange. See P. Kay, (LRR 94).

* = slight conflicts between journalist’s version in T and official statement issued by EC and N&E, also included in T 17th. Former says train did not stop at Bow, but did stop just beyond to set down passenger and then stopped again to pick up passenger running after it; latter said first stop was in station; in any event, it suggests somewhat flexible operating practices. (Light engine belonging to N&E ran into back of EC train in middle of all of this).

[BE] op own station, adjoining, but at right angles in 1845 (reported nearly complete about August 1845, GW); through platform also added then.
Main part became Joint GW/Mid 19 June 1865 (BE also partner later). Rebuilt as one, completed 1 January 1878. T STREET/MEAD/MEADS added in different sources at different times; see Section 3, The Information, Names for fuller treatment.
Original terminal portion clo 6 September 1935 (Cl). Through plat still open.
Bristol Mercury (21 February 1890) said excursion platform opposite the Midland departure platform (i.e. at Temple Meads) was in future also to be used for Clifton Down trains; in this case it would seem that it was in the main station.
Separate Ticket Platforms:
Mid existed by 4 December 1858 (Gloucestershire Chronicle item on ticket fraud). Western Daily Press 9 March 1872: describing plans for new joint station; Midland line will join GW near ticket platform of former. Closed by 15 October 1888 when Western Daily Press said that apparently collecting tickets at Mangotsfield and Fishponds now.
Bristol & Exeter existed by 24 September 1853 (Bristol Mercury item on assault on policeman by man woken up at ticket platform). Letter from ‘H’ in Bristol Mercury (1 March 1856) complained about being made late by stoppage in ‘dismal trench’ for ticket collection, none on GW here – tickets on slow trains collected at Keynsham, on expresses at Bath.
Item, Western Morning News 22 May 1860, said passengers by express trains were usually landed at what is called the ticket platform, only partially roofed, and left to make their own way to main station for onward travel. Site was on Exeter side of arch spanning Bath Road: report of collision in Bristol Daily Post and Bristol Daily Mirror, both 12 April 1867. Replaced by April 1870 by one at Bedminster, which see.
Excursion Platform (originally Bristol & Exeter) existed at Pylle Hill (Pyle-hill or Pile-hill in notices of the time); just the Bristol or originally Bristol & Exeter excursion platform in company’s adverts, though it was actually at Bedminster. Will be ready in September, entrance a few yards from the iron bridge on the Totterdown Road (Weston-s-M Gazette 1 July 1854). Tenders requested 21 January 1854, plans for letting prepared (co ½ 25 February), ‘soon be ready for use’ (co ½ 26 August 1854) - all Bristol Mercury; earliest specific use seen was for excursion, last of the season, to Torquay and Teignmouth 27 September 1854 (co n ibid 16th). Note that it was opened in same year as that at Weston-super-Mare, which, with Clevedon, would be the most common destination from here, though a great variety of other destinations were involved – Wells and Glastonbury on the Somerset & Dorset were also favourites. ‘On and after Whit Monday’ (29 May 1871) it would be closed and Bedminster (adjacent) used instead (co n Western Daily Press 23rd) though still some later use – see BEDMINSTER.

Non-tt: winter 1949 and summer 1957 wtt include stops for staff at DOCTOR DAYS BRIDGE JUNCTION (for signalman?); MARSH POND {Carriage sidings on line to Brislington, near St Philips Marsh}; ST PHILIPS MARSH {goods IA}; STOKE GIFFORD {marshalling yard, site later used for Bristol Parkway}. BROCKLEY WHINS [maps 24, 25].

BROCKLEY WHINS (a) [Branding Junction]: line through here opened 5 September 1839 (Newcastle Courant 6th) and this was the meeting point of lines from Gateshead, South Shields and Wearmouth; it was here that carriages from and to all three destinations were remarshalled but some remained to have used it as an interchange point (perhaps unintentionally); report of inquest on fatality here 25 December 1839 said witness had been at station here and seen the accident to a platelayer (presumably off duty) who had arrived somewhat intoxicated as a passenger from Sunderland and was going to Shields (ibid 27th.). According to NE pp 413-6 from 9 March 1840 to 19 June 1844 there was a platform just west of the later station used solely for dividing and joining trains from/to South Shields, Gateshead and Wearmouth; a notice for this (ibid 20 March 1840) said in relation to trains from Wearmouth: “To prevent disappointment in case the trains should not arrive at Brockley Whins in time for the Brandling Junction trains, spare engines and carriages will be kept at that station, to convey passengers to their respective destinations”. However usage must have been more general: it appeared as a station / stop in fare table in Brandling Junction notice for service beginning 18 May 1840 (Newcastle Journal 9th) [amend map 25 accordingly]. It was replaced by a station a little east by >

BROCKLEY WHINS (b) [NE]: line through op 19 August 1844 (co n Newcastle Journal 15th), and this was included as a station in the notice but account of formal opening of new line, 18 June, in Leeds Intelligencer (22nd) said that a station was to be built here – did the old one stay in use for a while or was there a temporary arrangement at the new site? Sometimes B W JUNCTION in Brad when it was part of East Coast Main Line; became BOLDON COLLERY 1 March 1926 (ibl April), reverted 8 July 1991 tt (AB Chron); New down platform March 2002 (Rly Obs June); all transferred to [TWM] 31 March 2002; still open.

BROOMILAW [NE; LNE]: private use from 8 July 1856 (U); op to public 9 June 1942 (LNE letter 13 April 1945 Cl pap, where BROOMILAW, from original NE document?; first shown ‘P’ hb 1944a); clo 30 November 1964 (RM December).

BROOMILAW HARBOUR: terminus of the [Polloc & Govan], from Rutherglen. According to Cal it opened 1842 to goods and ‘unknown’ to passengers. According to D&C 6 formal opening was 22 August 1840 and it remained ‘little more than a colliery tramway’. The Returns always show it as not used for passengers. In 1846 it became part of the Caledonian; part of its track was lifted as a result of an Act of 1867. If any passenger service was operated (some sort of workmen’s?), it would have been very short-lived; [on south bank of Clyde, between the General Terminus and line to Glasgow Central HL].

BROOMLEE [NB] op 4 July 1864 (Selkirk 7th) as WEST LINTON (but just L in paper); renamed October 1864 (Brad; RCG ref October) – agreed Board Meeting 23 August (co minutes); clo 1 April 1933 (Saturday) (co n Scotsman 23 March). NB co tt, LNE tt 1933: B for W L.

B EAST [Mid] op 2 March 1868 (Mid); EAST added 1950 (Mid); clo 25 September 1950 (Mid).
B WEST [GW] op 20 March 1865 (co n Carmarthen 17th); WEST added 1950 (Cl); clo 18 August 1958 (T 11th). RCH evidence suggests no GW station until 1890s but press, 1865, refers to a station and one is shown on LNW plan for 1872 (printed 1873) at Carmarthen Record Office*; JH Davies, History of Pontardawe and District, V Davies, Llandybie, 1967, refers to new GW station 25 June 1886 – perhaps slight extension of line?

* = on 9 October 1868 ordered that a platform and station be provided here for Llanelly company’s use, following a demand for rent from the Swansea Vale Company (Llan). It would thus seem that initially they dropped passengers further east on something belonging to another company; this would explain why the Clearing House at one time denied knowledge of this station, though not the length of time it took them to catch up.

BRYNCLEYNOG [GW] op 13 March 1939 (co n dated ‘March’ RAIL 1014/33); HALT; clo 4 January 1960 (RM March); (Cwm Prycor – Trawsfynnydd).

Non-tt, as B: last use for football trains (Stoke City) 23 April 1960 (BR doc); still wakes week use at 19 August 1961 (BR handbill); last use probably 11 August 1962 – not mentioned in 1963 leaflet (AB). LMS tt 1947: B & N for HANLEY.
Diagram in NS, p 78, shows ‘old station’ north of B & N, suggesting that at some stage it was re-sited nearer Stoke-on-Trent. No answer found. On Airey’s Lancashire District Maps of 1873, 1895 and 1905 it is 1 mile 43 chains south of Milton Junction; Brad April 1885 has it 2½ miles from Stoke, January 1894 2¼ miles, suggesting move away from Stoke (often Brad only gave fares not mileages and latter only roughest of guides even when given).

BURNBY – see NUNBURNHOLME.

BURNSIDE [LNW] op 21 April 1847 (description of line, Kendal Mercury 24th, said station being built here but in tt ibid for 1 May so trains presumably stopped anyway). Last full service shown in tt ibid 25 November 1854; Sundays only train included 2 December, presumed left in by error since nothing 9 December. Closed to public as economy measure but trains continued to stop for Mr Cropper, owner of paper mill here and director of Lancaster & Carlisle, who paid £50 per year – Dick Smith, The Kendal & Windermere Railway, Cumbrian Railways Association, p 36); reop 1 March 1857 when a Mr Steele leased station and made it available to public at his financial risk – whether it would be available for a year only or permanently would depend on response (presumably favourable). He even provided cheap returns (4d) to Kendal and back on Saturdays for working classes. (Notice, item Westmorland 21 February). From 1 October 1915 name briefly altered to BURNESHEAD by LNW to avoid confusion with Burnside [Cal]; local protests caused rapid return to original (J Mellentin, Kendal & Windermere Railway, Dulesman, 1980, p 56). Aot request. Still open.

BURNGULLOW [GW] op 1 March 1863 (Royal Cornwall Gazette 27 February); re-sited 11 chains west 1 February 1896 (GM’s report 22 January); clo 14 September 1931 (LMS PCC 217).

BURNHAM MARKET [GE]: first used 8 January 1886 by private train taking Prince and Princess of Wales from Wolfromton on part of their journey to visit Earl of Holkham at Holkham House; special arrangements had to be made to get line ready for this (The Standard – later London Evening Standard 9th). Op to public 17 August 1886 (T 18th); MARKET added 1 June 1883 (GE notice of alterations for June – G Kenworthy); clo 2 June 1952 (RM June).

BURNHAM-ON-CROUCH [GE] op 1 July 1889 (Essex Standard 6th); on-C added August 1889 tt (JS); still open.

BURNHAM-ON-SEA [SD Jt] op 3 May 1858 (Bridgewater Merch); initially Brad showed it as terminus of separate branch from Highbridge [BE], not as extension of Somerset Central; usually just B until 1917 (RCG ref October); clo 29 October 1951 (Bridgewater Merch 30th); many advertised excursions later – 1961 handbills show summer Wednesdays and Saturdays; last 8 September 1962 (SD Jt).

BURNHILL [NE] op 4 July 1859 (RAIL 667 /395); BURN HILL JUNCTION until 1893/4, when became B H, to one word 1908 (Brad); clo 1 May 1939 (Cl). Hb made two words of it in 1904 (only).

BURNLEY [LY]
Names generally accepted as in use from the start were only added to Brad later. ‘Thorneybank’ never shown there; in 1850s cross-referenced as B Burnley in one table, otherwise just ‘Burnley’. However, the Hand-books included Thorney Bank (under ‘T’) in 1862. ‘Manchester Road’ was probably ‘renamed’ at same time as ‘Bank Top’ – certainly between April 1870 and November 1871 (Brad) – previously B (East Lancs).

B THORNEYBANK op 12 November 1849 (RAIL 1005/265); replaced short distance north by >

B MANCHESTER ROAD (a) op 1 January 1867 (Burnley Gazette 5th); clo 6 November 1961 (RM December).

B MANCHESTER ROAD (b): op 13 October 1986*; still open.

* = line through here had been closed by movement of the hillside around Holme tunnel in February 1986 and the reopening of the line plus opening of this station was expected to occur on 29 September (RM October) but delay in approval for safe use of line meant that on that date a railway-provided bus service came into operation and the rail service proper was put back to 13 October (RM December).

B BARRACKS op 18 September 1848 (co n Blackburn Standard 20th) as BURNLEY; clo 1 February 1849 (Thursday) (Cl); though not back in Brad until February 1850, towards Liverpool only, timings show stop here both ways was likely earlier: e.g. Liverpool-bound trains were given 4/5 minutes to Rose Grove, in November 1849, 10 minutes December, suggesting station reopened;
“Barracks” presumably added now. Could it have been reopened to provide easier transfer from the Thorneybank terminus opened from Todmorden, 12 November 1849? Report in Manch, 20th, said this would be kept for its ‘intended use ... suburban accommodation’ once (CENTRAL) was open; such a station would not necessarily have deserved a mention in a national timetable then but evidence of timings does support brief closure.

B CENTRAL op 1 February 1849* as B; became B BANK TOP 1871 tt, B C 2 October 1944 (Cl; Burnley Express 26 August – will have new name ‘in October’); still open.

* = LY vol. 1, p. 114 says op 1 December 1848, but this should probably be interpreted to mean that line was completed to here or opened for goods by 1 December rather than opened to passengers then; no lists (e.g. official 1920 LY List of Acts ... Openings etc. and chronology in LY vol. 2) show any line opening then and Captain Wynn’s inspection report dated 24 January 1849 said he had inspected portion from Burnley to Colne, 6 miles, which would fit opening from Barracks rather than here.

BURNMILL – see LEVEN.

BURNMOUTH [NB] first in Brad July 1848 (see 1846 June 22); see 1948 August 13; clo 5 February 1962 (Birmingham Daily Post 10 January, citing BR announcement).

BURNSTONES [NE] (non-(tt): before line opened directors not sure whether to have a station here or at Slaggyford (Newcastle Journal 13 September 1851); latter won but trains sometimes stopped here: e.g. Tyneside Naturalists’ Field Club picked up from here (had arrived at Slaggyford) 8 September 1865 (ibid 9th); probably used to end of line, 3 May 1976, by general public – served line-side hamlet distant from nearest station; no platform; [Lambley – Slaggyford] (A Young.)

Special stations for Agricultural Show:

1894: north of main station, north of Mill Road Bridge. Eastern Evening News 21 June carried GE notice that on 28th and 29th cheap excursion tickets would be issued to Cambridge Mill Road Station (for the Royal Show; though the Show opened on the 25th, the implication is that Mill Road (6 or 7 minutes’ walk away) would only be used on these two days – East Anglian Daily Times 26th said that traffic on Monday was heavy and that a vast amount of excursion traffic will be handled here, adding a warning that passengers should make sure to return from the same station as the one they arrived at. 4 to 8 July 1922 (inc) (Camb Ag; RM September 1922); on GE main line, south of main station, just south of junction with LNW, entrance from Trumpington Road.

CAMDEN [map 101]

CAMDEN [LNW]: until 1844 many trains into and out of Euston switched between cable and locomotive haulage here (line had op 20 July 1837). Some sort of ticket collecting arrangements here from start – letter T 29 July 1837 complained of being stopped half an hour for this ‘on the approach to the extremity of the Regents Park’; use might not have been continuous – description of journey,
T 24 August 1839 says tickets collected at Watford; certainly ticket platform here by 21 May 1840, when it was suggested that existing wooden shed for ticket collectors should be replaced by brick building (RAIL 384/21). Thus locals might have been allowed to join or leave trains here, especially the latter. Some early writers hint at this – Whishaw refers to it as stopping place, on a par with The Aylesbury Junction (later Cheddington); others, e.g. Drake, refer to it solely as goods station.

Op to passengers 1 November 1851 (L). Replaced 1 May 1852 by station more convenient for locals (first site determined by operational needs); aot C CHALK FARM in some tables; replaced again, 140 yards nearer Willowsden, 1 April 1872 by station later renamed CHALK FARM (which see); first kept for some time as ticket platform. Name usage flexible: in LNW co tt 1863 as C for the Dock Line, 1867 as C for the North London Line; in 1868 said, ‘Passengers must change carriages at Chalk Farm (C Camden Ticket Platform)’; Brad same – probably ticket platform part was carry-over from past, since original would have been inconvenient for changing.

At first passengers for NL alighted here and joined NL trains at Hampstead Road (eventually PRIMROSE HILL, which see); arrangement ceased when NL extended to join LNW 2 June 1879 (Neele).

CANNON STREET ROAD [Blackwall] op 21 August 1842 (L) – a Sunday but was added to existing service (first in Brad September); last in Brad December 1848; [map 108].

CANONBIE [NB] op 5 May 1862 (report of special meeting of NB, Glasgow Morning Journal 5th); op as CANOBIE; altered 1 February 1904 (bbl 28 January); clo 15 June 1964 (RM July). The Eskdale & Liddesdale Advertiser used CANONBIE version at the outset and both versions seem to have been used indiscriminately early on in tts and press – was 1904 intended to bring uniformity rather than make a change? Did local pronunciation differ from what was believed to be the proper spelling? Also see LANGHOLM.

CANONBURY
CANONBURY [NL] op 1 September 1858 (L) as NEWINGTON ROAD & BALLS POND; renamed 1 July 1870 (JS); replaced by new station short distance west 1 December 1870 (NL Circular 81); see 2010 June 23; still open. GE co t 1882: C & N R.

* = but although T item included tt, item in Kentish Gazette 10th made it look like formal only (see MARGATE [SE]).
Non-tt: Royal Agricultural Society Show held here 4-7 and 9-12 July 1860 in grounds of Hales’s Place, a little east of C [SE]. First four days seem to have been principally for machinery trade; special siding provided for machinery and stock. For the last four it was possible for visitors to alight either at C or SHOWGROUND STATION; all to return from ‘City’ station. (co n T 5th; items T 7th, 9th).

CANTERBURY ROAD – see WINGHAM.

CANTLEY [GE] op 1 May 1844 (Essex Standard 10th). Last in Brad September 1847, back January 1851; however, not entirely clear that was closed – item Norfolk Chronicle 18 September 1847, about improvements at Reedinham said it was intended to make Cantley a more important station and ibid 20 May 1848 and 4 May 1850 had items stating that directors had agreed to anglers’ petitions to stop certain trains here during the summer months; it is not clear whether these stops were in addition to ones already being made or at a station reduced to goods only, especially since in the 1848 instance Buckenham was also mentioned and this seems to have remained open; aot request; still open.
CAPE [RSB] (non-tt): HALT/PLATFORM; workmen; dates ?; [Jersey Marine – Court Sart] (U). C P shown hb 1895, no facilities; not included 1904.

* = Leeds Times (3 February) includes it at station in existence when line opened 1 February, but trains were first shown in Brad March; station here first shown as meeting place for Badsworth Hounds 13 February (York Herald 10th) so perhaps opened mid-month.
Also see ADWICK.
CARDENEND [NB: op 4 September 1848 (co n Perthshire Courier 31 August); still open. Became C for BOWHILL February 1908 (RCG) and still thus hb 1956 but not seen thus in Brad.

CARDIFF [map 84].
C QUEEN STREET [TV] op 8 October 1840; Q S added [Barry] table 1890, as addition to (explanation of?) C [TV], others 1891/3 (Brad); still open. Co n Western Mail 7 September 1887 says that on Monday 12th old station would be closed and new opened on Roath Street side of bridge; Junction Diagrams suggest difference of 1 or 2 chains; so really a rebuild?
C BAY [TV]: line op 8 October 1840; this station not open by time of inspection of Merthyr extension (op 21 April 1841) (Rm). Earliest mention is note in co n CARDIFF & Merthyr Guardian (18 March 1843) for service beginning 27 March which contains mention in footnotes that passengers could be conveyed from terminus to Cardiff station, to be booked there; one of company’s carriages would leave terminus 15 minutes before advertised time of leaving Cardiff. However, previous tt seen in local press was for 25 October 1841; was it possible that, at least occasionally, trains did run to Dock? 28 February 1842 trains for Cardiff were almost filled with emigrants going on the Byron; were they taken to the Dock or left to make their own way there? Brad contained same note when it first gave details for line, December 1844; when first added to table there it was C BUTE DOCK; became C DOCK/DOCKS 1845 (Brad), C BUTE ROAD 1 July 1924 (GW circular 18 June), C B 26 September 1994 (AB, Chron); rested and improved by May 1929, when recorded in GW Magazine, now smaller, 8 chains north, directly alongside Bute Road (also see Stewart Smith, Chron January 2020); still open.

C CENTRAL [GW] op 19 June 1850; originally C; became C GENERAL 1 July 1924 (GW circ 2197, 18 June) – but already in use some tables in Brad 1922; renamed C C 7 May 1973 tt; still open.

C RIVERSIDE [GW] op 14 August 1893 (Barry co n Western Mail 8th); amalgamated into Central 28 October 1940 (Cl).

C CLARENCE ROAD [GW] op 2 April 1894 (co n S Wales 2nd); clo 16 March 1964 (Cl).

C ADAM STREET [Rhy] by 31 March 1858 (co ½ T 1 September); replaced by > C PARADE [Rhy] by 1 April 1870* (co n Western Mail 24 June – replaced by new station near the infirmary) as C; CROCKHERBTOWN added Brad 1872 when Rhymney trains moved from own table to LNW one, dropped 1888 tt (Cl); became C P 1 July 1924 (GW circular 18 June); clo 16 April 1928 (C/W – J Morris from Western Mail – trains used Sunday 15th), then its services diverted to Queen Street.

* = 1 April 1871 when Rhymney diverted its services over new line to Caerphilly (co n Western Mail 3rd).

Non-tt

C LOW WATER PIER: double purpose intended: provide connection to steamers to Weston-super-Mare and Portishead for pleasure and to latter for faster regular service to Paddington. Ran partly over Rhymney line from station finally called Cardiff Parade and partly over Bute Trustees’ line to Low Water Pier. Earliest evidence is advert for one train each day, Monday to Saturday (inclusive) from 9 July 1870; still advertised January 1871 but no evidence for later regular use. Certainly occasional use: e.g. July 1873 to allow a ship’s crew to board its vessel without going through Cardiff and August 1875 for excursion by choirs of St John’s Parish. Hints of later use: steamers were still using Pier in 1888 and it would have been reasonable for railway service to have been provided but no firm evidence. Opening of Severn Tunnel in 1886 would have ended possibility of use for travellers to Paddington. No station marked on 1877 Junction Diagram. Did it ever receive BoT sanction? (see article by Stephen Rowson, RCHS Journal July 2018; includes detailed maps).

Temporary platforms:

For visitors to opening of the new South Basin at the docks 23 July 1874; brought by Marquis of Bute’s engines (Cardiff Times 25th).

For Marquis of Bute and guests for cutting of first sod of new dock 31 March 1883; on return from there he left special train near Mount Stuart Hotel to join road carriage for return home to Cardiff Castle (Cardiff Times 3 February, Western Daily Press 1 February). Same site (?) for opening of Roath Dock 24 August 1887 (South Wales Echo 24th).

C DOCKS: 1st class ticket exists (printed about 1930) for Paddington to CARDIFF QUEEN ALEXANDRA DOCK, probably for ocean liner or cruise ship; another, 3rd class, (printed between July 1946 and September 1947) exists for Cardiff General to CARDIFF QUEENS DOCK – workmen’s service? Were these names for the same station? (S Berry).

Also not service for railway staff from GAOL LANE SIDINGS to EAST DOCK LOCO SHED, beyond Adam Street; in existence September 1928 (S JF).

C CANTON DEPOT: open days; 1977 to at least 1985 (S JF).

CARDIGAN [GW] formal op 31 August 1886 by local company; handed over to GW for regular service on 1 September 1886 (South Wales Daily News 1st); clo 10 September 1962 (Cl). GW co tt 1932: C for GWT-BERT-ON-SEA.

CARESTON [Cal] op 1 June 1895; clo 4 August 1952 (RM September).

CARFILN

For first station of this name see HOLYTOWN.

CARFIN [LMS] first used Sunday 13 February 1927 as C GROTTO PLATFORM for pilgrims visiting the ‘Scottish Lourdes’ (Bellshill Speaker 18th); to public as C HALT 1 Oct 1927 (Motherwell Times 7th), as HALT at or near site of earlier Newarthill; originally opened for pilgrims to Holytown (RM March 1935); HALT dropped 16 May 1983 tt; still open.

CARGILL [Cal] on 2 August 1848 (Dundee ... Advertiser 4th); co 11 June 1956 (RM April).

CARGO FLEET [NE]: line op 5 June 1846. Earliest references found: 29 April 1847 instructions were given to provide name-board for CLEVELEAND PORT and 15 March 1848 a platform was ordered for CARGO FLEET. Present in earliest tt seen for line, co tt September 1847. First there and Brad as C P; S&D minutes generally called it C F from 1848 but not renamed in tt until 1867 (Cl); references in minutes, 1851 and 1865, suggest it might have been slightly re-sited as a result of one or both of their discussions; replaced by new station about ½ mile west 9 November 1885 (Cl); clo 21 January 1990 (BLN 625); [map 43].

CARHAM [NE]: op 27 July 1849 (Newcastle Journal 28th); see 1948 August 13th; clo 4 July 1955 (RM August).

CARISBROOKE [FYN] op 20 July 1889, became HALT 1920/1 Brad; clo 21 September 1953 (T 21st). Brad? to closure: is station for Castle.
CARK [Fur] op 1 September 1857 (Fur); still open. Variously CARK, C & CARTMEL, C-IN-CARTMEL (briefly, about 1885) in Brad; reverted to CARK 13 May 1984 tt. Hib originally CARK, then 1883 (preceded by RCG ref 1882) to 1904 inclusive C-in-C, then C & C (RCG ref July 1906). Furness co tt 1910: C & C.

CARLIN HOW – see SKINNINGROVE.

CARLINGHOW [LNW] op 1 April 1872 (LNW Officers 7815); according to RCH clo 15 April 1917 but Brad and ABC tt show last trains March; April 'service suspended'.

CARLISLE [all not otherwise attributed below from D&C 14 and Cl]; [map 20]

Line from Newcastle op to C LONDON ROAD [NC; NE] 20 July 1836 (see 1835 March 10); clo 1 January 1863, trains diverted to C Citadel. Still shown 'P' in hh, P deleted 1895 – occasional special use? inertia?

ROME STREET in NC seems to have resulted from misunderstanding – visitor to line just before opening referred to London Road as 'a neat little building in the Gothic style'; a temporary station was used for official opening train but contemporary accounts suggest this was exceptional event. Scott, 1837, has L R.

Trains from Maryport arrived at C BOGFIELD [MC] (alias WATER LANE) 10 May 1843; this was replaced by >

C CROWN STREET [MC] op 30 December 1844; some trains diverted to London Road in 1848; clo 17 March 1849, when rest diverted.

Maryport trains again diverted, to Citadel, 1 June 1851.

Trains from London arrived 17 December 1846, at first using London Road, via reversal. By 10 September 1847, opening of the line to Beattock, they had been diverted to C Joint/Citadel.

[NB] trains arrived at C CANAL from Port Carlisle 22 June 1854, Silloth trains added 4 September 1856; this clo 1 July 1864 – trains diverted to Citadel. However, NB services from Scotch Dyke had used Citadel from opening of service on 29 October 1861.

CARLISLE [Cal/LNW] op on or by 10 September 1847 (G Body, Great Railway Battles, Silver Link 1994 and Cal say Lancaster & Carlisle use from 1 September but D&C 14 says perhaps not until Caledonian line opened on 10th; description of opening of Caledonian line (Scottish Railway Gazette 11th) implies 10th – arrangements for some companies not completed but Lancaster & Carlisle and Caledonian 'will be accommodated from the outset' and co notice Carlisle Patriot 10th dated 10th says that booking offices for Lancaster & Carlisle and Caledonian passengers are now open and item ibid makes it clear that this was new arrangement for former company; see 2015/16 (only services from this station affected – it stayed open); still open. Hb: 1862 C, 1872 C CITADEL JOINT, 1904 C CITADEL; still thus 1956. JOINT and CITADEL inconsistently applied in tts seen.

Also (non-tt) temporary platform at BOUSTEAD'S GRASSING on new goods line 8 July 1877 when part of the line from Maryport had to be removed during improvement works; used until ? – paper cited said new line was 'now' open for passengers (Carlisle Patriot 13th).

Ticket platform here, dates unknown. Earliest reference seen in Carlisle Journal 3 August 1855: indecent assault on woman sitting on the banks of the Caldew near ticket platform. Complaint from NE that sewage from Railway Inn was flowing over their ticket platform; told own fault for draining ditches that drained cesspool. **

Addition of YEALAND to name probably clerical error – see YEALAND.

CARNFORTH [Fur/Mid] op 6 June 1867 to temporary station (Mid). Line extended 1 July 1868 to Furness main line to Barrow; station, perhaps exchange only, provided at junction to give connections between Fur and Mid lines (named as C F&M JUNCTION Brad, but not Mid co tt). Mid boat trains via Wennington probably only stopped at exchange and went straight on towards Barrow and Piel; other Mid trains backed from F&M into LNW station. Some Fur trains also stopped at exchange. Clo 2 August 1880; new curve allowed trains from Wennington to run straight into new bay platform at LNW station (D&C 14).

A line ran from station at C B BROMPTON ROAD (public platform – JP McCricken, NE Express, August 1986) to Catterick Camp. This line opened in 1915. It appeared in Brad from December 1918, with the following stops:

CALIFORNIA: last shown November 1919;

CENTRAL, last shown April 1920 (May ‘service suspended’);

SCOTTON, last shown January 1919. Military use of the line continued, worked by LNER from 1923; Brompton Road re-sited alongside NE station 1943 (U). Daily recreational service for troops from Camp Centre to Brompton Road began February 1944; some services running through to Darlington by 22 May 1944; summer 1961 wtt showed week-end trains (non-tt Camp to Darlington, no intermediate stops within camp) to or from Sheffield, Birmingham, Gloucester, Bristol and Kings Cross; last train to Camp Centre ran 26 October 1964, by when service was early Monday mornings only. CATTISTOCK [GW] op 3 August 1931 (GW source Cl pap); HALT; clo 3 October 1966 (W D Press 3rd); [Evershot – Maiden Newton].

CATTLE MARKET: on site of later Maiden Lane [NL]; market opened 15 June 1855 (NL co ½ T 13 August), but no reference to any passenger use then; LNW notice (T 2 July 1855) advertised extra Monday and Friday market trains to Caledonian Road station of NL, ‘within a few minutes walk’ of new Metropolitan Cattle Market’ and in Brad Caledonian Road was noted as station for here – this would have been the case for most passengers. However, in Brad, footnote added March 1863 that a train from Windsor LSW ran to Cattle Market station in Maiden Lane but returned from Cattle Sideing in Maiden Lane (any significance? – arrival/departure sides of station?); this service clearly began considerably earlier since it was included in The Intelligible Railway Guide for June 1858. Detailed company ttt's show trains also took portion to Reading on return and that those with return tickets could return to Windsor from Waterloo if they wished (D Geldard; MH Hughes, Chron October 2003). Last in Brad November 1866 – cannot be guaranteed that this was the end of it.

Both replaced by C Joint [GW/LNW] 1 August 1848 (GW); see map in Birkenhead for details of sites; aot C GENERAL; still open.
GENERAL was added gradually – in Hb 1872, in some tables Brad 1890s, but co tts later; dropped 4 May 1970 tt.

Ticket platforms here, many mentions, some probably referring to same site:
Chester & Holyhead existed by 1849 – Morning Post 26 April 1851: appeal against decision in complicated fare case dating back to 25 July 1849. Tickets collected only half-mile from Dee Bridge (also referred to General station at Flookersbrook) (Chester Chronicle 30 March 1850). LNW co tt August 1856 (and other times?) had line showing arrival at ‘ticket stage’ Chester for Mail trains only, from Holyhead only. Passengers presumably allowed to alight, were in another case here. Closed?
From Birkenhead; fatal accident on Monday (Cheshire Observer Saturday 24 May 1862), Drunk and disorderly from Warrington (Warrington Guardian 26 December 1877); collector at Hoole Lane ticket platform LNW saved boy from drowning (Cheshire Observer 5 September 1885). Many got out there to go into Boughton by permission of the company (Liverpool Mercury 20 April 1886); 18 March 1917 fatal accident at ticket stage near Hoole Lane bridge (Cheshire Observer 24th). Last use?
Waverton used as ticket station for Chester on most down trains; easy to get to Chester but much poorer service in reverse: letter of complaint (ibid 13 October 1906). Was this a recent replacement?

C LIVERPOOL ROAD [GC] op 31 March 1890 op 31 March 1890 (co n Chester Chronicle 29th, item 5 April); clo 3 December 1951 (RM January 1952).

Temporary platforms [MS&L] 3 August 1879 at Liverpool Road Bridge (for benefit of local guests) and at Dee Bridge (MS&L) for former plus main party from London for formal opening of Dee Bridge (e.g. Buckinghamshire Advertiser 7th).

C NORTHGATE [CLC] op 1 May 1875 (co n Chester Chronicle 24 April); clo 6 October 1969 (RM January 1970).
During race meetings other sites used – 1874 advertised that return excursion to Worcester would start from C COAL EXCHANGE YARD (Berrow’s 9 May).

Ticket platform, only reference seen: Eastern Morning News 27 October 1881 – Gladstone’s carriage detached, horse-drawn to sidings and attached to train to Liverpool.
C GOLF CLUB was served by non-tt platforms. One near later Wrexham Junction was in use 1891 to 1895, when it was replaced by one near Chester East Junction, as C JUNCTION GOLF CLUB PLATFORM; extra platform provided at Birkenhead Junction 18 May 1896 (as BIRKENHEAD JUNCTION GOLF PLATFORM) (U); survivors clo 26 September 1927 (RAIL 393/151 – Passenger Supt Circ PM 330 ). CHURN [GW] first used for rifle contest Thursday 5 July 1888 (Reading Mercury Saturday 7th); used again for Volunteer Camp starting 28 July (ibid 21st), rifle competition 11 August (ibid 18th) and visit to assess suitability for future use 8 September. The leading figure in canvassing to make this permanent replacement of Wimbledon for rifle competitions was Private John Fidler, captain of the Berkshire Volunteers shooting team; he accompanied Great Western officials and higher ranking officers on their inspection and was allowed to present his case fully to them. Also Camp use 1889; during this year GW providing booking office and building that could be used as a waiting room (Buckinghamshire Advertiser 10 August).

It continued in occasional use for army camps after Rifle competitions moved to Bisley 1890. Examples of other special for Volunteers’ Camps – 2 August 1895 from Wolverton, Aylesbury and Buckingham for 1st Bucks, 3 August 1895 from Bedford for Beds Volunteers (LNW Officers). Intermittently in Brad (wtt same basic pattern): May 1905 to October 1905; May 1906 to September 1907; 1908 to 1913 summer only (May to September); May 1914 to December 1916. Still shown, trainless, to mid 1922. Back August 1928, permanently, with note trains only called during daylight hours. Unlikely to be full story – presumably full use throughout First War; also problem in that in Rail 253/482 says it reop 8 May 1915, but trains already shown – perhaps now properly staffed for extra use? Hbh 1904 – 1929 (inclusive) has note that only used when camp open. Aot report. COATBRIDGE

For earliest MK/Monkland stations hereabouts see HOWES; SOUTH END.

COATBRIDGE [Monkland] op 10 December 1849 (co n Glasgow Herald 7th) (see 1844 December 26); clo 10 December 1851 (Wednesday) (MK); [map 16].

C CENTRAL [Cal] first in Brad January 1843, fare list, though according to MK Cal did not open own independent line until February; CENTRAL added 8 June 1953 (Cl; ref RM April); still open.

C CENTRAL [NB] op 26 October 1871 (co n Glasgow Herald 25th*); perhaps at/near 1849 Monkland station; clo 1 January 1917 except for workmen (RM February); reop 2 June 1919 (RCH); clo 10 September 1951 (BR notice Coatbridge Leader 1st).

= paper of 23rd said ‘today’ and that large new station was to be built near level crossing (being replaced by a bridge), meanwhile temporary wooden structure in use. Falkirk Herald 26th also said had opened 23rd; presumed last minute delay – NB would not have issued notice it did otherwise. Permanent op ?

c.SUNNYSIDE [NB] op 2 November 1863 (co n Glasgow Herald 2nd); still open.

COATDYKE [NB] op 1 December 1890 (NB list); still open.

COATHAM LANE [NE] (non-ff); for use of Newcomen family. Agreement for this was made in 1858 but station probably not opened until 1865; a letter of 11 February 1899 from A. G. Stevenson of NE’s Estates Office said NE would not admit rights existed but considered that they had lapsed. {A report dated 7 June 1859 said it was only about ¾ mile east of Redcar and suggested a site for lines to east and west in}

COATSWAY – see COATDYKE.

COBBETS LANE – see 1835 June 9.

COBBINSHAW [Cal] first in Brad October 1874; re-sited 37 chains south 4 October 1875 (Cl); clo 18 April 1966 (Cl).

COBBINSHAW & STOKE D’ABERNON [LSW] op 2 February 1885 (co n T 31 January); still open. Op notice called it S d’A & C and tickets exist thus but in Brad always C & S d’a until became C for S d’a (RCH dist ref 10 March 1913; and thus LSW co tt 1914); back to C & S d’a LMS in 1905 (Cl, RCH dist ref 68, 6 September 1959).

GE co tt 1882, LNE tt 1933: C R for O F.

COBROUGH [NS] op 1 October 1874 (RCG); clo 2 March 1964 (RM April).

COCHRANE MILL – see MILLIKEN PARK.

COCKBURNSPATH [NB] op 22 June 1846 (co n T 23rd- line; in Newcastle Guardian 27th, description of formal opening 18th); see 1948 August 13; clo 18 June 1951 (RM July).

COCKER BAR [LY] first in Brad September 1851; clo 1 November 1859 (Preston P 8th); replaced by Midge Hall.

COCKERHAM CROSS [KE]: line op Monday 5 December 1870 (Preston Chronicle 10th - line); station originally Thursdays & Saturdays only; last train 9 March 1872 (line clo 11 March, Preston Chronicle 16th); line reop Monday 17 May 1875 (Cl); from August 1877 Fridays as well; became all-day station July 1923/14 July 1924 Brad, and HALT now added, though presumably always treated as one (see 1905); aot request; clo 31 March 1930 (Lancs Evening Post co n 29th, item 31th). Alias C CROSSING, which might have been correct name throughout – shorter form appeared in Brad when moved from notes to body of table – space saving?

COCKERMOUTH [CKP/LNW]

First station was terminus from west, op 28 April 1847 (co n T 5 August)*. Line from east opened 2 January 1865 (co n T 28 February), to station that became through one. Agreement had been reached in January 1864 that both would use latter (Lakeland) but D&C 14 says that probably lines were not immediately linked and both in use together until first clo 1 July 1865. Separate tables for lines to east and west in Brad until October 1866, when through table provided; however, timings suggest through services possible by August 1865. Clo 18 April 1966 (Cl). Became C for BUTTERMERE 14 November 1932 (hbl February 1933).

* = On formal opening date, 27 April, in addition to directors’ special there was a trip from Workington open to all – allegedly 1,500 took advantage (Whitehaven Herald 1 May).
COCKETT [GW] first in Brad May 1871 (only added to tt Cambrian 9 June – paper 2nd said June tts not received); clo 15 June 1964 (CI).

COCKFIELD FELL [NE]
For first service through here see 1834 March 24 and LANDS. At times S&D used COCKFIELD and LANDS interchangeably – minute of 17 October 1860 (RAIL 667/664) has marginal heading ‘footbridge at Lands’ but entry reads ‘footbridge to be erected at Cockfield’ (people there would build bridge, S&D contributing £5).

COCKFIELD FELL op 1 August 1863 (RAIL 667/167- line); effectively replaced Lands, but some overlap in use; FELL added 1 July 1923 (hbl 12th); clo 15 September 1958 (CI).

COCKFIELD SUFFOLK [GE] op 14 November 1870 (Bury & Norwich Post 15th); SUFFOLK added 1 October 1927 (hbl October); clo 10 April 1961 (RM May).

COFTON [BG]
Temporary terminus, C FARM, op 17 September 1840 (co n Chelt Exam 30th); clo 17 December 1840 when line extended to Birmingham (Mid).

COFTON probably op November 1841, with the other ‘police stations’ (J Gough); probably same site as C Farm; clo 4 November 1844? (see line note).

COGAN [Barry] op 20 December 1888 (S Wales 21st); initially terminus from Barry (result of TV/Barry politics), passengers going further walked to Penarth Dock and continued journey from there; line op through to Cardiff 14 August 1893 (Penarth); [map 87b]; still open.

COGIE HILL [KE]: line op Monday 5 December 1870 (Preston P 7th - line); this station originally Thursdays & Saturdays only; last train 9 March 1872 (line clo 12th, Preston Chronicle 16th); line reop Monday 17 May 1875 (CI); from August 1877 Fridays as well; alias C H CROSSING/C H HALT (see note on Cockerham Cross, above); aot request; July 1923/14 July 1924 Brad became all-days station (see 1905); clo 31 March 1930 (Lancs Evening Post co n 29rd, item 31st).

COLBREN JUNCTION [N&K] op 10 November 1873 (G&S) as CAPEL COLBREN J; renamed 1874 tt (CI); clo 15 October 1962 (RM November).

COLCHESTER
COLCHESTER [EC; GE] op 29 March 1843 (T 30th); aot C NORTH (hbl); still open.

COLCHESTER [EU]: line EU up to Colchester 15 June 1846 (Rn PP; co n Ipswich Journal 6th), at first using EC station. According to KA Frost, Back Track, January 2000, p 15 dispute over rent resulted in EU building own short-lived station 1848 on opposite, eastern, side of road bridge; only press references found so far are that had started to build own (Ipswich Journal 14 October) and ‘recent affair’ of Colchester station – suggests argument settled (ibid 18 November); was it ever finished and used (in those days a ‘station’ could be just a couple of simple platforms) or just bluff? No sign of two stations in November tt (Chelmsford Chronicle 3rd). Confusion might have arisen because Essex Standard, 27 October, citing the Ipswich paper, said they had built it.

C TOWN [GE] op 1 March 1866 (Bury & Norwich Post 3rd) as ST BOTOULPHS; renamed 15 July 1991 (AB, Chron); still open.

COUTESTHORPE [Mid]; at first market days only, probably beginning at start of December 1840 (first Saturday was 5th) – Leicester Journal 27 November said that company had ordered one morning and one evening train to stop in response to petition from locals; Robinson, about August 1841, shows Saturday stop at C GATE-HOUSE; it was also in notes in Brad at about this time, but mentions were erratic (e.g. not in December 1842 Companion, nor in July 1845). Earliest mention found in local press ts (irregularly included) is in tt Leicester Journal 10 June 1842, Saturday stop; by 1 March 1844 (tt ibid) stops Wednesdays and Saturdays. Minutes of company’s Committee of Management show that they ordered station, full use, to be included in tts for March 1846 (Mid). Leicester Mercury tts from 18 October 1844 call it C but Brad August 1845 still C-G-H. It is likely that the lack of continuous reference was owing to clerical vagaries rather than irregular use of stop (Mid). Clo 1 January 1962 (Coventry Evening Telegraph 29 November 1961).

CRAIG MERE [NE]: line open 29 March 1847 (see 1847); a station here probably opened with line at BERFORD – see line note. Its existence under this name would have been brief; perhaps closed, more likely kept for market and other special trains. Although it did not appear in Brad until 1875 there was certainly much earlier use. Earliest examples of various uses found:

- 14 February 1849 – first main line each way to stop at ‘the Cragg Mill’ for those attending a ploughing match (advert Newcastle Courant 2nd), similar January 1862; ‘Crag Mill station’ mentioned in advert for sale of farm machinery by private treaty – only makes sense if possible for prospective buyers to come here, at least on market days (ibid 21 January 1850); 3 May 1860 all trains to stop for farm sale, plus a special one from here to enable farmers from Kelso to reach Tweedmouth in time to make their connection (ibid April 20); 6 January 1863 ‘Crag Mill’ in list of places to be served by an excursion (Kelso Chronicle 5th); on Macaulay’s Map 1854 (not 1851); on first edition OS map of about 1866 as CRAGMILL (S Bragg); market stops clearly in operation by February 1871, when in wtt (A Young); first in Brad November 1875; Tuesdays & Saturdays; last there October 1877, and hb 1878a ‘closed’; sometimes C M Siding; [Belford – Smeafield].

CRAIGLEITH HOSPITAL: an internet item (which see for full details, including maps) claims that a PLATFORM [Cal] was provided near Crew Junction for reception of wounded at Military Hospital at Craigleith; doubts were expressed by some contributors about its existence though one did say it was only occasionally used, which could account for the scarcity of evidence. All press items seen by this writer merely say that wounded on the occasions described were transported by ambulance and private cars, making no reference to a platform, whether used or available but not used. These were: Scotsman, 2nd edition 28 September 1914, which said first party had arrived at Princes Street at 2 a.m. that day; same paper 26 October and 4 November 1914; Edinburgh Evening News 19 October 1914; Daily Record 24 May 1915, which referred to some of the survivors of the Quintinshill accident, who were hurried away without anyone on the platform being allowed to speak to them, in order to give them a chance to recover from the shock they had suffered. Thereafter no press reports gave any indications of how casualties were conveyed. However other records not seen might support the claim; thus a conclusive answer is not possible.

Notice T 14 March 1855 – on and from 12 March additional accommodation for local traffic will be provided by extra 19 weekday trains to and from the WESTOW HILL station at the Crystal Palace, as if W H was some sort of extension/overflow to main station; notice T 29 June 1855 says weekday trains use C P, Sunday W H; Brad July 1855 – June 1856 (inclusive), has note that Sunday trains run to WESTOW HILL (timing same as weekdays). Street map suggests this perhaps just short of main line – originally two stops, one for direct entry, another for the grounds, run together with extension of line 1 December 1856? or (more likely?) two names for same station, with different entrances?

East London service added 23 May 2010*; still open.

Line from Swinton [SY, at first operated by Mid] opened 10 November 1849 (GC; T 13th line); Lincolnshire Chronicle Friday 23 November 1849: South Yorkshire line opened without ceremony Saturday last [plus a week]; to relieve pressure on main station a ticket platform has been erected at Cherry Lane Junction, at which down trains will stop for ticket collection. Then on to main station. How long did this last?

Were all Cherry items same or nearby sites?

Ticket platforms: Cherry Lane Junction, see above.

Main station: first and last references seen: Sheffield Independent 14 May 1862 – fatal accident here, a short distance from platform. Yorkshire Post 8 September 1900 – unruly passenger on 30 August.

Racing, especially St Leger

St Leger excursion trains used CHERRY TREE 16-19 September 1851 (and perhaps had done so in 1850); notice Sheffield Independent 13 September 1851 said to CHERRY TREE LANE SIDINGS near Shakespeare’s Head. Platforms at CHERRY TREE JUNCTION, initially for third-class passengers from Sheffield (1851 on), SHAKESPEARE (example of notice that this would be used 16, 18, 19 September 1863 – St Leger Week – for specials to/from London was in The Times on the 7th and MARSHGATE SIDINGS (1859 on), by 1867 LOCO SIDINGS, MARSHGATE HORSE DOCK, CHERRY TREE GOODS SIDINGS and ST JAMES SIDINGS. (See article by P Scowcroft, RCHS Journal, November 1983, p 266-275). GN Special Working Notice for departures of trains after St Leger 12 September 1877 also mentioned NEW GOODS SIDINGS; SIDINGS UNDER THE CLOCK; MS&L’S MARSH-GATE STATION. Ticket (JB) exists; SOUTH DOCK (1899). Also see Away (p 85-?) and article Early Days at Doncaster Railway Station, PL Scowcroft, RCHS Journal, March 1990, page 5 on.

Likely that some of the names above referred to same sites.

JAMES BRIDGE [GC], previously Cherry Lane, used starting with St Leger meeting of 5 to 8 September 1899; after opening of GC line to London, they were able to run excursions from many places (RM October 1899); used at ST J B 13 September 1923 (JB); still in use St Leger Week 1955 for all specials from Sheffield, Manchester and west (Rly Obs October 1955, p 319); station still there 1971 but use then not certain (AB).

DOULAS

D CÆ HARRIS [Taff Bargoed Joint] op 1 February 1876 (S Wales 2nd); clo 15 June 1964 (RM August). D Cwm Cinnel Street pre-op (RAC). According to GW circular 18 June 1924 would become D CÆHARRIS on 1 July, but this form not in GW co tt 1932, nor seen Brad, but was in 1925 hb, and tickets thus.

* = paper’s account includes mention of unusual formal opening on 31 January: ‘first’ trains started out from either end; bigwigs had ‘special’ train to take them back to Cardiff from Dowlas; no indication of how those on Cardiff-bound one got home.

D CENTRAL [BM] op 23 June 1869 (co n Merthyr Telegraph 26th); CENTRAL added 1 July 1924 (GW circular 18 June); September 1939 Brad ‘service suspended’ (operating August 1939); still suspended January 1940; trains December 1940; from 30 June 1952 advertised as workmen’s trains though carried all comers; ‘clo’ 2 May 1960 but continued unadvertised until last, Friday 6 May 1960 (RM July; Chron 6).

D HIGH STREET [LNW] op 11 May 1885 (S Wales 6th,); H S added June 1893 tt (JS – supported by Brad – still D January 1893); clo 6 January 1958 (BR WR notice December 1957). Dowlas Iron Company’s line from D JUNCTION on TV line to D IRONWORKS op 21 August 1851 (T 24th) – see Map 87a; line owned by ironworks company, operated by TV. Closure eventually resulted from accident 27 December 1853, when coach ran down incline before rope was attached; at that time not clear whether TV was still responsible for operating service or iron company had taken over for itself (Cardiff & M G 31 December 1853, 7 and 14 January 1854). Return shows 22 passengers carried in first half of 1854 so service probably resumed and stopped again when BoT inspector came to investigate – Monmouthshire Beacon 14 January 1854 said government had given orders that no more trains should run until proper carriages and ‘breaks’ were provided. Brad showed trains up to and including May 1854 – inertia? did they hope to reopen service? – some of the local press tts were still showing times in November 1854. Not just workers’ service: Returns show that they carried 2,149 passengers, including 158 first-class, in second half of 1853.

1938 hb has ‘P’ for GUEST, KEEN & BALDWIN’S NEW WASHERY; probably error – 1944a ‘delete’. Also see PANT.

Hb has it as HALT 1938 (no indication that not public) and 1956, dropped 1962a; but PLATFORM in tt until altered 10 September 1962 (Cl).
DUNDEE [maps 4, 9].
At first Brad called all just 'Dundee'; additions were made on dates given below and were frequently first added in some tables only. Some of the names cited below seem to have either been local ones or created by later historians to help identify sites concerned.

Newtyle line (see 1831 B): op 16 December 1831 from D TOP OF LAW; intermittently included in Brad after extension to Ward Street. >

Line [DPA] extended to D WARD STREET 3 April 1832 (co n Dundee); clo 10 June 1861 (date of opening of deviation line, co n Dundee Courier 6th). In Brad as D until 1853, then D WARD; Cornwall's Scottish tt 1860: D WARD STREET.

Also on this line - D BACK OF LAW [DPA] op May 1833 (Newtyle); intermittently in Brad; last shown July 1855. Perhaps this and Top of Law were alternative names for same site – see 1831 B.

Further out was CROSSROADS [DPA], op 3 April 1832 (Newtyle); intermittently in Brad; last shown April 1853, but added to Macaulay's maps between 1851 and 1854 and left there until deviation line opened in 1861.

Line from Arbroath [DA] op to D CRAIGIE 8 October 1838; replaced on extension of line by >

D ROODYARDS op 9 June 1839 (Scottsman 12th – on Sunday the train was run to this spot, full use Monday, 10th); replaced on further extension of line* by >

D EAST op 9 April 1840*; replaced on yet another extension of line 14 December 1857 (Dundee Courier 16th); clo 5 January 1959 (Cl). DOCK STREET / TRADES LANE 1840 in some sources but just D in Brad; became D EAST 1848 tt, D DOCK STREET 1856 tt, D EAST 1866 tt (JS).

* = Dundee says op 2 April; Fife Herald Thursday 2nd and Perthshire Advertiser 2nd, both copying Dundee Advertiser 'will open Thursday next', leaving possibility that delay between original and copy would have meant op 2nd, but Caledonian Mercury Monday 1st* 'opened Thursday last'.

Line from Perth [Cal] to D WEST op 24 May 1847 (Perthshire Courier 27th); op as D, became D WEST 1848 tt, D WEST STREET 1853 tt, D UNION STREET 1856 tt, D WEST again 1866 tt (JS); clo 3 May 1865 (RM May).

Tay Bridge line [NB] op to DUNDEE 1 June 1878 (T 1st) as D TAY BRIDGE; renamed 15 April 1966 tt; still open.

Also:

Ticket platforms, only references seen: Fatal accident; train from Perth, 26 December 1865; last there October 1865.

D CAMPERDOWN JUNCTION [DA]: February and March 1880 tt shown in station list, but blank space for times ('arrangements probably at error).

D ESPLANADE [NB] op 1 May 1889 (Dundee Advertiser 30 April); clo 1 January 1917 (RM February); reop 1 February 1919 (RM Highland) February, when requisitioned by War Department (LNE letter 19 April 1945 Cl pap). Later used for Royal Highland Show at Magdalen Green for a few days in 1957 (Tayside p 83).

D NINEWELLS JUNCTION [Cal] logically would have op 1 June 1861 with diversion of Newtyle line, but not in Brad until June 1864; last there October 1865.

DUNFERMLINE

For early service to Charlestown see 1833 A.

D TOWN [NB] op 1 November 1877 (Dundee Evening Telegraph 1st) as D COMELY PARK; became D LOWER 26 October 1889 (NB list), D 1968/76 tt, D LOWER again May 1987 tt, D 4 May 1988 tt; D TOWN 26 January 2000 (AB Chron); still open. Rebuilt 1889, mostly on same site but extended eastwards slightly (H Jack); became a through station 5 March 1890.

D UPER [NB] op 13 December 1849 (co n Edinburgh Evening Post 12th); UPER added 26 October 1889 (NB List); clo 7 October 1968 (RM October).

D QUEEN MARGARET op 26 January 2000 (Rly Obs March 2000); still open.

DUNFORD BRIDGE [GC] op 14 July 1845 (co n Sheffield 12th); co n Rotherham, 20 December 1845, says complete line on through Woodhead Tunnel would open on 23rd, clo 5 January 1970 (BR leaflet EA 116). Football special 12 April 1980 (Rly Obs June). Perhaps at first temporary station west of road bridge (C/W, based on inspection report); resited on new alignment to south for new Woodhead Tunnel 1954 (Stewart Smith, Chron October 2014).

DUNGENESS

DUNGENESS [SE] op 1 April 1883 (SE); clo 4 July 1937 (Sunday) (SR sig inst 1937/32); {map 130}.

DUNGENESS [RHD] (ng) op 4 August 1928 (Folkestone ... Herald 4th); D LIGHTHOUSE later 1928 (Brad) to reopening 1947; see 1927 July 16 for later history.

DUNHAM near Swaffham [GE] op 11 September 1848 (Norfolk Chronicle 23rd) as LITTLE D; renamed 1851 tt (Cl); aot request; clo 9 September 1968 (RM November).

DUNHAM near Altrincham

DUNHAM [Warrington & Stockport] first in Brad December 1853 (but see 1853 November 1); last there April 1855.

D MASSEY [LNW] first in Brad December 1853 as WARBURTON (but see 1853 November 1); renamed W & D June 1856, D October 1856, D M 1861 (Cl); clo 10 September 1962 (RM September).

DUNHAM HILL [Birkenhead] op 18 December 1850 (D&C 10, co n Chester Chronicle 14th - 1); HILL added 1861 tt (Cl); clo 7 April 1952 (RM May). 9 September 1963 wt shows early morning stop, weekdays, ('not advertised') northbound – nothing seen other way.

DUNNERHOLM(E) GATE [Fur]: according to D&C 14, stop Askam/Kirby-in-Furness on line op August 1846; no other reference found. Area is Dunnerholme on later OS maps; in descriptive part of Linton’s Handbook of the Whitehaven & Furness Railway, 1852, but no mention of station; however, Ireleth treated same way and no mention at all of Roose (later Askam) and Rampside. Perhaps casual stop – see 1840 for early MC practices, perhaps copied by other companies in this area. Various press references to e.g. damage to the line near here by storms and existence of sidings for lime-kilns have been seen but none mentions any stations. HB 1872 and 1877 had D SIDING, facilities not shown.

DUNNING [Cal] op 23 May 1848; clo 11 June 1956 (RM April). Also (non-nt) floods destroyed bridge over Dunning Burn on evening of 14 November 1876, cutting line between here and Forteviot; passengers by road between two; temporary platforms being built either side to reduce distance needed by road; some Caledonian trains diverted via Thornton, Dunfermline and Stirling (Dundee Courier 16th). Temporary wooden bridge under construction at Glasgow, which would also serve as staging for rebuilding of stone piers; expected to be delivered by train on 19th (Scotsman 18th); traffic resumed on 20th, after Col. Hutchison had inspected bridge (Dundee Courier 21st). [Other disruption that day but seems to have been short lived.]

DUNNINGTON [Derwent Valley]

DUNNINGTON and D HALT both op 21 July 1913 (Yorkshire Post 21st); clo 1 September 1926 (Wednesday) (RM October). Yorkshire Post, HB at first: D for KEXBY, ticket thus (JB). Paper had Morton Halt – presumed error.

D NORTH [LNW] op 29 May 1848. LNW Traffic & Coaching Minutes (RAIL 410/142), 31 May: ‘The Manager reported the result [compiler’s underlining] of the opening of the Dunstable line’ and difficulties caused by the incline. No reference at next meeting 14 June. ‘31 May only makes sense if line was already open by that date’. RAIL 1005/263 and Brad Share, 1850 retrospective on line openings, give 29 May. Notice issued by LNW in The Times said would open 1 June, date used by modern works in print; same notice (dated 24 May) in Bedford Mercury Saturday 27 May 1848. Presumably a case of opening early, on the Monday instead of waiting for first of the month. Re-sited about 100 yards north January 1866 (Cl); NORTH added 25 September 1950 (RM October); clo 26 April 1965 (RM May).

DUNSTALL PARK (GW) op 1 December 1896 (Worc's Chronicle 5th); clo 1 January 1917 (GW notice dated 22 December 1916); reop 3 February 1919 (RCH; GW Mag April); clo 4 March 1968 (co n Birmingham Post 9 Feb).

EBBSFLEET & CLIFFSEND [SEC] op 1 May 1908 (SEC); HALT; clo 1 April 1933 (Saturday) (T 24 March); [Minster – St Lawrence].

Earlier temporary platform(s) for celebration of thirteenth hundred anniversary of arrival of St Augustine’s Mission to Kent, mentions suggest probably different sites for platforms, first leaving a walk of about a mile, second ‘not two minutes’, from a broad meadow beside Sandwich to Ramsgate Road containing Cross erected by Lord Granville 15 years before:

Protestant contingent led by Archbishop of Canterbury, arrived 2 July 1897, to platform only one coach long beside gate leading to field; some bishops preferred to jump directly onto the ballast to speed things up, American and Colonial Prelates of the Anglican connection being particularly adept at this (Morning Post 3rd, Whitstable Times 10th); press reports suggest not well organised.

Roman Catholics followed 14 September (advrt Tablet 14 August, item Morning Post 15 September); two special trains from Charing Cross, only first-class one for here, second-class one left its passengers to walk from Minster; press clearly much more impressed by the arrangements made for this one; alias ‘Ebbs Fleet’, ‘Ebb’s F’, Ebbs’ F’.

E V HL [LNW] op 2 September 1867 (Merthyr Telegraph 7th); HL added 23 May 1949 (Cl); clo 5 February 1951 (Cl) – see 1951.

E V [GW] op 19 August 1852 (co n Merlin 16th). 21 September 1859 said would give notice to BoT of intention to open railway beyond present station here for passenger traffic (Mon min). This suggests they wanted to move station a little to the north. Support given by timetables. Weekly tt in Merlin increased time from Victoria from 6 to 8 minutes 5 November 1859; by January 1861 Bradshaw had made same change in timing and increased distance from 1 mile to 1¾ miles and by February 1863 had added ‘new station’ in one direction. Inspection report (MT6/20/22, 18 October) unhelpful: says that Victoria was the previous passenger terminus and that the 2 miles beyond, now improved and straightened, only then used for goods, but does mention new passenger terminus at Ebbw Vale. Was last stretch to old E V temporarily out of passenger use at time of inspection? – or on a three-day week, thus confusing inspector? Was site of first Monmouthshire station at/near site of later Tylwyn Halt? LL added 19 July 1950 (Cl); removal noted hbl 10 May 1960 – perhaps done on closure of HL goods, 2 November 1859; clo 30 April 1962 (T 6 April).

E CANAL STREET – see E PRINCES STREET.

E WEST PRINCES GARDENS: Ticket Platform: only reference: use 17 October 1865, when carriages of ordinary train carrying royal party from Aboyne were attached here, short of Waverley station, to special train to Kelso (Scotsman 18th). Perhaps used instead of Haymarket, then mostly to passenger trains.

[NB] line, then Edinburgh, Trinity & Newhaven, op to SCOTLAND STREET 31 August 1842*. Extended 17 May 1847 to (E) PRINCES STREET (below), to which trains were drawn up by stationary engine; platforms now close to extremity of tunnel (Caledonian Mercury 20 May 1847). When tunnel closed 22 May 1868 its services reduced to weekday trains to Granton; service so poor that letter in Scotsman 12 June described it as virtually closed; it was last in co nt November 1868 (absent co nt December); EDINBURGH SCOTLAND STREET e.g. Brad February 1863 but just S S NB ttc; see D. Lindsay, Chiton October 2013.

E PRINCES STREET op 17 May 1847 (Edinburgh Advertiser 18th) – called it CANAL STREET but Brad just E until 1850/3 when became E P S, though elsewhere generally still E C S until 1862, when Edinburgh, Perth & Dundee Co amalgamated with NB; thereafter E P S in co tts. All services diverted to Waverley 22 May 1868 via new line via Leith Walk.

Non-tt: a 'proposed new passenger station' was partly-built to relieve congestion but in May 1852 Board decided to use it for goods; only recorded passenger use was 7 August 1860 for Volunteer Review by Queen Victoria; described as 'Company’s Covered Shed immediately under the New Buildings, North Bridge, [reach via] Princes’ Street, by the Archway, next door to Croll’s Coach Office, 4 Princes’ Street (co n Scotsman 4th).

E HAYMARKET (non-tt) temporary platform about 1,700 feet long, few hundred yards to west of here. Volunteer Review, 25 August 1881 (Glasgow Herald 26th).

E PRINCES STREET op 2 May 1870 (T 2nd). Scotsman 17 June 1890; yesterday a fire that started at about 1.45 p.m. destroyed more than half of the old Princes Street station (a contract for a replacement had recently been signed). Immediate emergency arrangements made. Trains stopped at Merchiston, passengers on overpass advised to go to Merchiston or old ticket platform at Grove Road Bridge which was still in existence (only reference seen for this). Soon they had arranged working in and out from the goods yard in Lothian Road and the surviving outermost part of one platform. Back to normal? Clo 6 September 1965 (T 6th) – services to Waverley.

E MORRISON STREET goods: temporary platform at coal depot, Volunteer Review 25 August 1881 (Glasgow Herald 26th).

On 1 October 1890 Caledonian will suspend running powers from Waverley and use own Princes Street to join North British line a little west of Haymarket near Dalry Junction, using previously little-used Haymarket loop; ticket platform has been erected on this; at/ near site of later Dalry Road (Renfrewshire Independent 29 August).

E MEADOWBANK (non-tt) only used for major events at stadium; first public use 14 June 1986 (RM August); used 24 July to 2 August 1986, inclusive, for Commonwealth Games (shuttle service from Waverley) (Special traffic notice); later use, dates unknown; alias M STADIUM; a few hundred yards west of earlier Piershill (D. Lindsay).

QUEENS STATION, alias ST MARGARETS, alias MEADOWBANK [NB]; (non-tt): description of passing of Royal train in Caledonian Mercury, 1 October 1849 says a platform within, or very near, the grounds of NB’s works here was used by the boys of George Heriot’s Hospital and ‘a large assemblage of ladies and gentlemen’; workmen’s wives, children and friends watched from line of trucks parallel with line.

Station specially built for Queen Victoria’s use on visits to nearby Holyrood House; described by Scotsman as dingy shed with various temporary embellishments; first used 29 August 1850; only known stop by ordinary train 22 August 1861, for Queen’s children on way to Balmoral during her absence in Ireland; last used 23 October 1861 (Scotsman article on recent demolition 7 June 1867); rebuilt for her use on 2 August 1872; last used by her 26 August 1881; also used to load ten convict’s (‘Dynamitards’) being transferred from Calton Jail to Chatham Prison 27 December 1883 – carriage then run back to Waverley and attached to Flying Scotsman (Edinburgh Evening News 27th – where ‘St, Margaret’s Suburban station). Platform on down side only; also found as VICTORIA, PALACE, SOUTH LEITH and variously as STATION and PLATFORM; [at stairway leading to Meadowbank].

U refers to railwaymen’s use of this station, with overall closure ‘by 1906’; would have been another platform in nearby works.
In the course of her Scottish visits Royal trains occasionally used short lines not used by regular trains – avoiding curve noth of Carstairs (first 7 October 1851, last 17 September 1860) and link NB to Cal, Haymarket to Slateford, 1859-60; (most of the above from articles by D. Cattanach, Journal of North British Railway Study Group, 102 and 103). Also see Chron 21/86.

ELSENHAM  [GE]: line through here op 30 July 1845 (Norfolk Chronicle Supplement 2 August). Detailed description of line listed two stations hereabouts:
HENHAM, about 37 miles from London; handsome brick building with booking-offices etc; near level crossing on road from Henham to Elsenham.
ELSENHAM: built on same plan as other stations on line, at end of deep cutting, by level crossing on road to Dunmow and Confield (Canfield?).
No evidence has been seen for the use of the former by passengers. Col Cobb’s atlas has Elsenham re-sited north 1846 to avoid incline (OW – from correspondence with H Paar); was this the move from first Elsenham to Henham, which was then renamed? Elsenham is still open.

ELVANFOOT  [Cal] first in Brad April 1848*; clo 4 January 1965 (RM February).
* = line op 15 February 1848 and no mention of station here; indeed, Caledonian Mercury (17th) said was 18 mile gap between stations at Abington and Beatock; though station expected soon at Crawford, no mention of one here. However, Dumfries Standard (23rd) said that the coach from Edinburgh to Dumfries via Thornhill started for the last time on the 17th and it was ‘supposed’ that a coach will be started from Thornhill to join the Caledonian Railway at Elvanfoot. This would suggest that latter was expected to open shortly; indeed, since Crawford did not open until 1849 it is possible that the paper was wrong and that Elvanfoot was the expected one?

FETTERSSO [Cal] (non-tt): private; details?; {Carmont – Strathaven} (@JF).

FFAIRFACH [GW] op 24 January 1857 (Carmarthen 23rd). Minutes of 12 April 1870 said it was to be closed 1 May – but 12 May said to be closed 1 June (Llan). Western Mail (10 May) said had reconsidered and trains would continue to stop (presumably only temporary reprieve). This one really does seem to have closed (also see Llandilo Bridge): Brad omitted May 1870– presumably prematurely; still missing August and September 1873 (but September table then marked ‘No information, accuracy doubtful’); back October 1873. TTs in Cambrian: up to and including 1 July 1870 trains shown stopping; 8 July 1870 included without any trains; by January 1873 omitted completely; back, with trains, 10 October 1873, in t h the ‘October’ (for some weeks previously paper had said times had not been received). From April 1874 separate tables were provided in the GW section of Brad for the southern part of the line and in the LNW section for the whole Llanelli system; Fairfach was included in the former but not the latter, though e.g. Derwydd Road was there. Became HALT 1 May 1961 (RM June); HALT dropped 5 May 1969 (Cl); aot request; still open.

FFOCHRRIEW PITS [GW/Rhy] (non-tt): alias FFOCHRRIW PITS/COLLIERY; used at least 1897 to 1928 by miners; [branch from Cwm Bargoed] (U).

Sometimes F PIER in Brad.
ART TREASURES EXHIBITION (non-tt); the Exhibition opened on Saturday, 22 May 1886 and closed Saturday night, 30 October; its opening times included Sunday afternoons. To begin with, all visitors used existing stations: on opening day the dignitaries came by special train to Folkestone Junction [later F East] and many of the public came by other special trains. (T 24 May, 1 November). On 31 May the General Manager of the SE wrote to the BoT saying that they wished to open for occasional passenger excursions a short branch to the Exhibition, up to then only used for goods; he asked for prompt action ‘as the Excursions will soon commence and we are anxious to run the trains right up to the Building’. On 8 June Major General Hutchinson reported that he had inspected it and saw no objection to opening provided stringent conditions were met. The line was one purpose-built for the Exhibition; about 1,500 yards long, starting from sidings on the south side of the line at Shorncliffe [thus in report, later Folkestone West] and running south-east to the site, immediately north of Bouverie Road; it had been built without an Act of Parliament since it was entirely on private land apart from crossing two public roads on the level. Hutchinson said the BoT could not sanction the use of the crossings but he implied that there was no objection to them provided the public were careful. His suggested conditions included that trains should come to a complete stop before crossings, should not exceed 6 m.p.h., a platform should be provided at the Exhibition end and the line should be removed after the Exhibition’s closure. On the 9th the Board wrote giving its agreement, provided the conditions were met; it played safe by saying it had ‘no objection to’ (the usual ‘sanction’ was crossed out) the use and including, ‘as it is only to be used for a short time I presume no objection will be made with regard to the level crossings’ – does this translate ‘alright unless the locals object’? (MT6/408/8) Art Exhibitions notice in Surrey Mirror, 11 September, which refers to the Redhill Harmonic Society’s special train drawing up at the doors of the Exhibition on the 7th.
FOLKESTONE WARREN [SE; SEC; SR]:
F W (a): op after 1884; first in Brad September 1888, Dover to Sandgate local table; clo 29 September 1888 and apparently not reopened though BoT inspected August 1889. Accords with story in SE that Lord Raglan objected to picnic parties, brought by trains, trespassing on his land, so station abruptly closed; however dates do not tally. Year misprint in Art Exhibitions notice in Whitstable Times, 23 June, 9 June, which refers to Surrey Mirror, 11 September, which refers to the Redhill Harmonic Society’s special train drawing up at the doors of the Exhibition on the 7th.
F W (b) op 1 June 1908 (Folkestone ... Herald 30 May); HALT, summer use only (e.g. 1910 May to September); initially in Sandgate table but in last year moved to Elham Valley table. RCG says clo September 1915, though it was last in m 1915 (both mentions almost certainly inertia, given earlier history and function as picnic station). Would certainly have been clo by line landslip 19 December 1915.
F W (c): clear from newspaper that there was no use until it reop 30 July 1923, for summer, until end September (Dover Express 20th) – local authority had provided improved access to the Warren; regular summer calls ceased with closure of Elham Valley line 1 December 1940; only calls by special arrangement when that reop 7 October 1946; line clo 16 June 1947 (British Railway Journal no. 9). Also much non-tt use at various times: military camp, doctor, Channel Tunnel workmen; railwaymen – e.g. 17 June 1957 wtt.
FONTBURN [NB]: perhaps unofficial use by 1896 for quarry and railway workers and families as WHITEHOUSE SIDING; public op as W 12 January 1903 (NB list); briefly in Brad June – November 1903 or later; removed on BoT protest that not officially passed – mainly provided for reservoir workers; renamed F when it officially op 1 June 1904 (GM circular 21 May 1904).

GATESHEAD [map 27]

DEERWENTHAUGH [NC; NE] stop on way to Redheugh, below, op ?; clo 30 August 1850 (co n Newcastle Guardian 24th). However continued to be served indirectly by Redheugh to Swalwell Colliery service which stopped at junction just short of D but did not use station. June 1853 Brad and local press showed replacement service, Tuesdays and Saturdays, from Newcastle via Blaydon (reversal) which stopped at D and then reversed at junction (just beyond from this direction), in order to reach Swalwell. Reduced to Saturdays only Newcastle to D June 1854; that still shown tt Newcastle Guardian 12 February 1870, after which paper stopped publishing relevant table.

REDHEUGH [NC] op 1 March 1837 (see 1835 March 10); acted as south-of-the-Tyne terminus for NC, with ferry link to station at ‘The Close’. Lost function as ferry station for Newcastle October/November 1839 when NC extended to station near Shot Tower but remained in use for local omissions. Omitted from Brad about February 1841, back January 1842; given lack of detail in NC tables cannot be taken as proof of brief closure; on return at first only in notes, some trains asterisked to show they carried portions to/from here as well as Newcastle. From 18 June 1842 when the Newcastle & Darlington Junction reached Oakwellgate its usefulness increased again when Brandling Junction/Newcastle & Darlington Junction started free service down the inline from their Gateshead station (NE maps; Return of accident on 31 October 1844). A notice reproduced in NC MacLean refers to a service starting on 23 March 1843, presumably a later addition to/alteration of the service; this states that service was free – perhaps to avoid problems over inspection? Only in July 1844 did NC table in Brad start to reflect this – ‘GATESHEAD’ replaced ‘REDHEUGH’ in table but timings left alone; in October 1844 timings adjusted to include time taken on incline link. Reduced to being terminus of Tuesday and Saturday service to Swalwell Colliery, which operated detached from system 30 August 1850 (co n for opening of Newcastle Central Newcastle Guardian 24th). Last shown in co tt same paper May 1854, absent June.

OAKWELLGATE [Newcastle & Darlington Junction] op 5 September 1839 from Wearmouth and South Shields (co n dated 3rd); clo 2 September 1844 when service diverted to Greensfield, which was already open (CI). Brad 1844: G station. OAKWELL GATE.

GREENFIELDS [York, Newcastle & Berwick] on 19 June 1844 (18th formal) as terminus for main line service to south (co n T 24 May); clo 30 August 1850 (CI), station concentrated on East.

G (EAST) [NE] op 30 August 1850 (NE) – but some sort of arrangement presumably needed here when service across Tyne began 1 November 1848 – see note at end of Newcastle-on-Tyne entry; became G March 1971; clo 23 November 1981 (last train Sunday 22nd); replaced by TWM station.

G WES [NE] op 1 December 1868 (Newcastle Journal 1st); clo 1 November 1965 (RM November).

* = Brad added EAST and WEST 1872/3, and then only in main line table; hh only one entry for both, ‘G’, until 1904.

Gilsland [NE]: op 20 July 1836 (see 1835 March 10*); originally ROSE HILL (body)/ROSEHILL (index) (Brad); renamed 1 May 1869 (CI); clo 2 January 1967 (RM January). Scott 1837; R for G in tt, R H text. Name Gilsland used much earlier in co adverts in Newcastle papers; earliest seen for Whit-Monday excursion 16 May 1842, where was G station; usually seen in connection with Sunday use, at one time tts in papers show that in summer at least it was served every Sunday; likeliest explanation is that potential travellers would be more likely to be attracted by this name because it was associated with Gilsland Spa and nearby scenery while Rose Hill would not have been; it is difficult to see where a station specific to Rosehill could have been so re-siting is unlikely; often R for G in these tts.

Gillern [LNW] first in Brad April 1863 but LNW MTA Minutes Engineer’s Reports 27 January 1863 say supposed to be ready in 3 or 4 weeks, 6 August say has been open for five months, Hereford Journal 21 February ‘in course of erection’; suggests actual opening in March; became HALT 1 November 1932 (Tasker); clo 6 January 1958 (BR WR notice December 1957).

Gipsy Hill [LBSC] op 1 December 1856 (T 31 October, 28 November); still open. Alias GYPSY HILL (L). Became G H for UPPER NORWOOD 1911/12 (RCG ref January1912) and thus LBSC co tt 1912, hb 1938 and Brad until 1955.
GLINTFORD [LMS] op 1 January 1938 (T 8 December 1937); first appeared in Brad July 1938 as a HALT, though notices for that month implied it had just been renamed to that; clo 17 November 1940 (Sunday) (Cl); use for ? continued until 1951 (!@JF); [Sandy – Blunham].

GIRVAN [GSW]
GOLD op 24 May 1860 (co n Glasgow Herald 22nd); OLD added 5 October 1877; clo 1 April 1893 (Saturday) (Cl).

GLADSTONE DOCK [L]Y op 7 September 1914 (RCG); clo 7 July 1924 (hhb 52). Became HALT 1916 (Brad).

GLAIS [Mid] op 21 February 1860 (Mid; Mining Journal 25th line); re-sited on deviation March 1875; clo 25 September 1950 (RM November); (map 44).

GLAISDALE [NE] op 2 October 1865 (Leeds Mercury 3rd); still open.

GLAMIS [Cl] op 4 June 1838 (Perthshire Courier 14th – opened Monday week); clo 4 July 1846 (see 1837 B); reop 2 August 1848 (Dundee ... Advertiser 4th); clo 11 June 1956 (RM June). GLAMMIS/GLAMMISS early.

GLAN CONWY [LW] on 17 June 1863 (LWNW Officers) as LLANSANTIFFRAID; renamed G CONWAY 1 January 1865 (Cl); clo 26 October 1964 (RM December); reop 4 May 1970 (T 8 April); spelling altered 12 May 1982 (BLN 392); aot request; see 2015/16; still open.

GLAN LLYN [GW] on 4 August 1868 (Carnarvon 11th) as private station for Sir W W Wynn but public use with his consent; in paper ‘flag station at Glanllwyn’; in hb SIR WATKIN’S, later FLAG STATION; first in Brad 20 September 1926 as F S; officially public 14 September 1931 (GW H); became F S HALT 4 July 1938 (Cl – from Brad?) but still F S in GW wt 28 September 1938; renamed G L HALT 25 September 1950 (Cl); clo 18 January 1965; Sir Watkin Wynn had right to stop express at Bala Flag Station for owners, occupiers or visitors to Glanllwyn Mansion; inherited from Bala & Dolgelly Co (Out of Course); sometimes one word; [Llanfeder – Llanuchllyn].

GLAN ROAD — see BWLFA DARE.

GLAN-YR-AFON near Llanidloes [GW] on 16 January 1928 (Oswestry area notice 13th); HALT (Brad); clo 31 December 1962 (T 31st).

In hb 1938 as PLATF0RM.

GLANAMMAN [GW] first in Brad May 1851 (perhaps op earlier since no detail given for a while previously) as CROSS KEYS; see Garnant for possible but unlikely loss of service in 1859; on 18 December 1861 ordered platform to be provided here (Llan); existing arrangements? clearly already stop here; renamed 1 December 1884 (RCH dist 12 February 1885); aot request; clo 18 August 1958 (T 11th).

GLANDWYFACH — see 1679 September 2.

GLANDYFI [Cam] GLANDYFI op 1 July 1863 (Cam; co ½ T 28 August-line) as GLANDOVEY (GLAN-DOVEY in Brad until 1880/1, GLAN DOVEY in hb); renamed 1 July 1904 (hb 7th); clo 14 June 1965 (RM July).

GLANDOVEY JUNCTION — see DOVEY JUNCTION.

GLANRAFON [VoR] (ng) op 7 May 1904 (VoR; Aberystwyth Observer 12th — ‘have opened’*); see 1902 December 22 (for line history); originally HALT. HALT dropped 6 May 1968 (Cl); to preservation 1989.

* = paper said it ‘was understood’ it was opened ‘partly as a compliment to Mr. Powell, Nant Eos, in return for his kindness to the contractors during the construction of the line’; a mile beyond Llanbadarn, it would be useful for Moriah, Capel Sion, Nant Eos and neighbouring farms.

GLANRAFON [NWNG] (non-tt): quarrymen; op 14 May 1881 (?); clo – October 1901; Rhyd Ddu extension part-funded by quarry company in exchange for workmen’s trains so op same date as line or later that summer; clo on run-down of quarry (138 employees 1901, 9 in 1902); October 1901 tt change made daily commuting impracticable; though quarry later revived, its train service remained impracticable (R Maund); [Usk – Little Mill Junction].

There were also non-tt stations for Ordnance workers, first two on main line, third on a branch:
G EAST ACCESS; HALT; op 3 January 1943 (RAIL 250/450); alias E A ROAD HALT; clo by mid-1953 – 23 May 1949 wtt shows only used by one train each way (combined Newport/ Blaenavon sections) and that absent 8 June 1953 wtt – relevant train to G R O F.

G WEST ACCESS; HALT; op 12 June 1941 for workmen’s train; 18 June 1941 service by public trains added (GW Superintendent of line’s letter’); before/with 23 May 1949 wtt was G CROSSING HALT; by 8 June 1953 wtt only stops by public services shown so probably fully clo 30 May 1955, with Usk line service.

G ROYAL ORDNANCE FACTORY: first trains with construction workers ran to level crossing at Glascoed 24 May 1938 (no platform) – later G WEST ACCESS; probably later temporary platforms until station op 6 October 1940 (RAC); clo 24 April 1961. Also see WERN HIR.

GLASGOW (map 15)

Some stations in addition to those listed below were at one time shown in it as ‘GLASGOW xxy.’ Those not listed here will be found under their own initial letters, as will all on the Glasgow Subway.

Most Glasgow stations were just ‘GLASGOW’ in early tts. The additions given below were added mostly about 1850 or later, often at first only in tables where there were two possibilities for a particular service.

G BRIDGE STREET [Cal] op 14 July 1840 (Scotsman 11th); permanent buildings op 4 April 1841 (GSW); clo 1 March 1905 (Wednesday) (RCG). References to CLYDE PLACE: in e.g. Col Cobb’s Atlas and Brand’s Chronology should be regarded as names used loosely for through part of this station.

G BUCHANAN STREET [Cal] op 12 November 1849 (T 6th); clo 7 November 1966 (RM January 1967). Glasgow, Dumbartonshire & Helensburgh station’s opening notice said trains ‘Leave Dundas Street Station’ (this company used Buchanan Street for its first month, switching to Queen Street on 30 June 1858); according to notice trains returned to ‘Glasgow Station’.

Troops for Volunteers’ meeting, 8 August 1874, on Lanark Moor were despatched from G BRIDGE STREET (Glasgow Herald 18th). Ticket platform, first and last references seen: Saloon belonging to Marquis of Lorne detached here and taken into station by special engine (Scotsman 21 August 1871). Assault (Glasgow Evening Post 22 March 1881).

G CENTRAL [Cal] op 1 August 1879 (co n Glasgow Herald 29 July); still open. Aot G C HL GORDON STREET (hb); G C HL in Murray 1948.

G CENTRAL LL [Cal] op 10 August 1896 (RCG); RM February 1899 says permanent station now open and temporary closed – does not give exact date or any details about site; clo 5 October 1964 (RM November); reop 5 November 1979 (RM December); see 1994 December 10th; still open, since 1979 both levels of G Central treated as single station.

G COLLEGE – see G HIGH STREET.

G DUNLOP STREET – see G HIGH STREET, above.

G DUNLOP STREET [CGU] op 12 December 1870 (minute of 19th, SRO BR/CGU/1/5); absorbed into G ST ENOCH, 1 May 1876.

G GALLOWGATE [GSW]* op 19 December 1870 for NB service to Coatbridge (minute of 26th, SRO BR/CGU/1/5); clo 1 April 1871 (Saturday), (minute of 3rd, SRO BR/CGU/1/6) – this says service diverted to College (later High Street), implying that was then replaced by latter, but only way of reconciling this with entry for latter is to assume that both were in use after 1 February; reop 17 May 1871 (minute of 22nd, SRO BR/CGU/1/6), with start of hourly Bellgrove to Shields Road service; additional service 1 June 1871 when through Edinburgh to Greenock trains began (minute of 3rd, SRO BR/CGU/1/6); clo to public 1 October 1902 (Wednesday) (RM November). Included in Brad December 1904 with Renfrew Wharf, workmen’s service (see 1967 June 5th); last in t September 1926 (G&S).

* = [CGU] until 1896.

G GALLOWGATE CENTRAL [NB] op 1 June 1892 (Edinburgh Evening News 2nd); clo 1 January 1917 (RM February).

G GORBALS [GBK Jt] op 1 September 1877 (Scotsman 3rd); clo 1 June 1928 (Friday) (CI).

G HIGH STREET [NB]* op as COLLEGE, a terminus, 1 February 1871 (Saturday), (minute of 3rd, SRO BR/CGU/1/5); absorbed into G ST ENOCH, 1 May 1876.

G ST ENOCH [GSW]* op 1 May 1876 (GSW); clo 27 June 1966 (CI). Later use: 4 July 1966 for Kings Troop Royal Horse Artillery to Kensington Olympia for Royal Tournament (Rly Obs August p 266).

= [CGU] until transferred 29 June 1883 (before split between NB and GSW).

G SOUTH SIDE: first used from Barrhead by [GBK Jt] 27 September 1848; joined by [Cal] service from Motherwell 1 June 1849 (T 3th). [Cal] initially called it G GUSHETFAULDS*, then G S by 1 August 1849 (Cal co notices), November 1849 (Brad). Maps and Motherwell trains diverted to Bridge Street 1 July 1879 (Tuesday): wholesale alterations to local services from Glasgow and Edinburgh to make way for special traffic to Volunteer Review in Edinburgh; many stations without trains that day. See Caledonian and North British company notices in Dundee Courier 22 and 24 August. Reportedly more than 40,000 Volunteers were present at Review.

GLASGOW CROSS [Cal] op 1 November 1895 (Glasgow Herald 30 October); clo 5 October 1964 (RM November). Argyle Street near later.

GLASSEL [GNS] op 2 December 1859 (co n item Aberdeen Press 30 November); clo 28 February 1966 (BR notice ibid 1st). According to ref RM October 1960 had a HALT but not thus in Brad.

GLASSFORD [Cal] op 2 February 1863 (Cal); in Brad became HALT 1933, reverted to G 1937/8 and thus to closure (but became HALT hb 1944a); clo 1 October 1945 (RM March 1946).

GLASSEUGHTON on 21 February 2005 (Rly Obs April); still open.

GLASSON near Carlisle [NB]: line op 22 June 1854 but Newcastle Journal (24th) said Burgh was only station; directors contemplated erecting platform here; earliest evidence is in co n of alterations from 25 July 1854 (Carlisle Journal 28th) as request stop, fitting first appearance in Brad August; initially all days; omitted March 1858 (error?); back August 1858 Saturdays only; all days again June 1884; clo 1 January 1917 (CI), reop 1 February 1919 (RM February); August 1921 Brad includes PORT CARLSILIE line; but without trains. Trains were shown September 1920 and July 1922. Another casualty of 1921 April/May (Cal) clo 1 June 1932 (Wednesday) (T 3 March).

GLASSON DOCK near Lancaster [LNW] op 9 July 1883 (LNW Officers 24972); clo 7 July 1930 (LMS notice Lancashire Evening Post 24 June). LNW co tt July 1883 said it was ‘expected’ that this would open on 2nd, clearly a short delay. G D PLATFORM on 1928 Junction Diagram.

GLASTERLAW [Scottish North Eastern, later Cal]: line op 1 February 1848 (co n RM February 1953), nd, May (Topham); probably did open with line – estimates for building station here advertised in Montrose Advertiser 26 February 1847 in same notice as those at Dutton and Bridge of Dun. Original intention was for a large junction station here but this did not come about and much of the site was used in 1858 for a manure works; last in tt March 1849. There was later use but evidence so far found is very scrappy and makes it impossible to say how far there was continuity for passengers (goods use did continue). Four trains each way stopped 28 April 1852 for convenience of those going to market here (co n Montrose ... Advertiser 23rd); not known if this was one off event; perhaps included because this was the first use that year; if it was a regular use otherwise left to local knowledge, it would have been seasonal since markets here were monthly from April to October (inclusive), the April one apparently more important (often described as ‘annual’). Dundee Advertiser (1 June) included case of assault when cattle were being loaded on 28 April 1871; no guarantee passengers could use then but this would have made sense (1852 notice had linked market attendance with handling of cattle).

Saturday 8 June 1878 some attending an Oddfellows Gathering got off here by mistake; most had used Frielochm (Dundee Courier 11th) – but how did they manage this? Did they give wrong instructions for their special? 14 June 1879 there was an arranged special here (Dundee Advertiser 17th).

GLENBURNIE [Edinburgh & Northern] op 9 December 1847 (co n Perthshire Advertiser 9th) as a temporary terminus; co n called it NEW LINDORES STATION, about a mile north of Newburgh; clo 17 May 1848 (co n Perthshire Courier 18th); [map 5]. In it as GLENBURNIE but this was probably mis-spelling by tt printers – estate shown on 1850s map is GLENBURNIE and NB wtt later used this version (D Lindsay), as did Edinburgh Advertiser, which only mentioned opening ‘shortly’.

GLENBURNIE [High]: approval given for station 9 May 1871 (High), though not in Brad until August 1873 (earliest use as private station?) as PLATFORM; became G 10 September 1962 (Cl); aot request; clo 7 December 1964, but later unadvertised use – revenue shown (High: Lochalsh). GLENMORISTON (non-tt): private station for William Chambers, founder of publishing house who lived at Glenmornist House and was at one time a Director of the Peebles Railway. The earliest certain reference to a station is in an advert in The Times 30 July 1883 for the sale of the estate following Chambers’s death: ‘There is a private station on the railway at Howford, within five minutes walk of the mansion house’. It was probably used 4 ? August 1865 when the whole of Messrs Chambers’ Edinburgh staff, upwards of 300 were treated to a pleasure trip and various entertainments in the grounds of the House (Scotsman 5th – ‘yesterday’ – did not specify station at Howford but difficult to see how else such numbers could have got there). Certainly also used as G PLATFORM 5 August 1911 by specials to and from Peebles for Mr. Thorburn’s party – fare 1s (NB notice for special trains); [Cardrona – Innerleithen, probably at 322365]. (D. Cattanach).

GLENROTHES WITH THORNTON op 11 May 1992 (RM June); still open.

GLENSIDE [GSW] op 17 May 1906 (co n Maidens); built on initiative of the Marquess of Ailsa, mainly for his use – few others lived within reach (A. Wham, The Lost Lines of Ayrshire, GC Book Publishers, 1999); in Brad and available to others; clo 1 December 1930 (updated LMS Northern Division list, Cl pap). Used 20 May 1938, northbound only (return by bus – engines wrongly believed to be too heavy for line) for excursion to Ibrox for Glasgow British Empire Exhibition at nearby Bellahouston Park (Maidens). See 1939.

GLENWHILLY [GSW] op 19 September 1877*; clo 7 February 1882 (Tuesday), reop 16 February 1882, clo 12 April 1886, reop 14 June 1886 (Cl); clo 6 September 1965 (RM September); later use by railwaymen (U).

* = support from Captain Codlington’s inspection report, made 10 June; said line satisfactory but company had postponed opening to 1 July. M. Bairstow, The Sheffield, Ashton-under-Lyne & Manchester Railway – The Woodhead Line, 1986, appendix p. 71 gives 30 June as opening date (9 June was goods opening). See DINTING for similar instance – free rides on 30 June or change of mind or did company regard first day of full service as true open?

GLOUCESTER [map 95] GW expected that Birmingham – Gloucester – Bristol line would become part of GW; however, it became part of Mid instead.

[Birmingham & Gloucester] op 4 November 1840 (Bath & Chelt 10th) > [Bristol & Gloucester] was originally operated by GW; service began 8 July 1844 (Gloucester Journal 13th), using platform added to station above >

Station became GLOUCESTER [Mid]; replaced by through station 12 April 1896 (ibid 18th); renamed G EASTGATE 1951 > [GW] arrived from Swindon 12 May 1845 (ibid 17th), initially using Bristol & Gloucester platform; own station op with line to South Wales 19 September 1851 (ibid 20th); renamed G CENTRAL 1951 > EASTGATE and CENTRAL combined 26 May 1968 as G (Mid); old Mid part closed 30 November 1975*; GW part still open.

* = engineer’s possession to take out platforms and track was from 1500, Saturday 29 November so timetabled Sunday service did not run (signal notice 43/SM/W2718).

G ‘T’ STATION [GW] op 23 October 1847 with Gloucester avoiding line (T 25th); clo 19 September 1851 (Cl).

Ticket platform for Midland: earliest reference: accident night mail from Bristol – (Cheltenham Examiner 15 October 1856). Enquiry into another accident; ticket inspector said checked one side of train at ticket platform, other in station (Gloucester Journal 29 October 1867). Ibid 24 July 1880: suggestion made at Council meeting (trying to get joint station) that at least time could be saved if Midland collected tickets at station before here, as GW did. Cheltenham Chronicle 8 December 1900: fatal accident; body found between old ticket platform and up line; accident 29 November. So now closed?

GLYNYRHONW [LNW]: only evidence found is in LNW Officers, minute of 13 July 1870; G is included, one train each way per day, in tt proposed for Llanberis line, following opening of Carnarvon Town Line. Line through G had op 1 July 1869. Not found in Brad, where timings suggest still line in use both ways May 1872, reduced to one train from Llanberis January 1873. LNW co tt timings suggest April 1870 that most trains were stopping here on way to Llanberis; January 1874 none either way (though Brad April 1874 suggested one still stopping – presumably inertia); in hb as siding, laterly for slate company; [Llanberis – Cwm-y-glo].

GOATHLAND [NE]

GOATHLAND (a): line op 26 May 1836 (see 1835 B). Omitted from Brad October 1857; back April 1858, in footnotes as terminus of Saturday afternoon service from Whitby; shown fully again November 1863; however, throughout this period trains had to stop hereabouts to join/leave incline haulage; April 1858 entry probably only included because G was terminus – presumably at least one train took people to Whitby; it was listed as a station in adverts for excursions of Grosmont Mechanics’ Institute Tuesday 15 July 1862 (Whitby Gazette 12th) and Wednesday 15 July 1863 (ibid 11th).

GOATHLAND (b): New station on deviation line 1 January 1865, op as G MILL; MILL dropped 1 November 1891 (Ci); clo 8 March 1965 (T 19 January); occasional later severe weather use (U).

GRIFFITHS CROSSING [LNW] line op 1 July 1852 and co n North Wales Chronicle 25 June said trains would also stop at Port Dinorwic, implying that was only intermediate station; thereafter, tts seen, both Brad and local press, lacked detail; first seen in tts that paper May 1854; HALT at clo 5 July 1837 (RM August).

GRIMES HILL – see WYTHALL.

GRIMSTHORPE BRIDGE [Sheffield & Rotherham] op on or by 24 November 1838; clo 25 March 1839 (co n Sheffield Independent 23rd – where just Grimsthorpe). Reopened, Tuesdays & Saturdays only – date?, not in 2 November tt 1841 (Sheffield Independent 23 October), present tt 27 November 1841 which lacks usual starting date, probably mostly December since first part says trains will be despatched but in later part ‘trains now stop’ here; last in Brad January 1843 – by then tt had ceased to appear in local press.

GRIMSBY [GC] [map 64]

G DOCKS: inspection report 7 December 1854 said line from town to Docks in use some time for goods but so incomplete that approval for passenger use refused. 30 January 1855: company withdrew notice of passenger opening – line not yet ready for inspection (Rm). Station here actually op 6 April 1863 (Grimsby … Advertiser 11th). Still open.

G TOWN op 1 March 1848 (co n, item Hull Packet 3rd); TOWN added 1900; still open. GREAT G in description T 12 April 1849 and Brad to about 1900; then G T, though occasionally just ‘G’.

Ticket platform, earliest reference seen: Lincolnshire Chronicle Saturday 4 April 1868: inquest on Monday dealt with fatal accident on 1st put down to inadequate length of ticket platform. Hull Daily Mail 15 January 1903, letter: no longer collecting tickets at old ticket platform, but at station.

(T non-tt) temporary platform for Duke and Duchess of Connaught to depart after their opening of Grimsby Park 17 August 1883 (Stamford Mercury 24th). Another behind Town Hall when Lord Yarborough brought party in special train from Brocklesby to Hospital Ball 30 December 1891 Stamford Mercury 8 January 1892).

G PIER (non-tt): MS&L notice (T 13 May 1852) says new dock will be opened for steamers and ships [freight] on 27 May at noon. Clear PIER station would be available then – main line of railway extends to edge of low water landing-stage, ‘where a passenger station is [compiler’s underlining] built and to which passenger trains will run in connection with the boats’. Exact date of first use not known – said subsequent advertisements would give details, but none found. Certainly likely that was in use by mid-August since half-yearly report (and meeting) (T 20, 26 August) say steam packets running to Humber [sic], Rotterdam and Antwerp. Only relevant reference in GC’s list op opening dates (RAIL 1005/273), which goes as far as 22 March 1915, is ‘Royal Dock, Grimsby 27 May 1852’; no reference in list of closures.

No explicit timetable evidence for its use has been seen; however, various indirect references, from RCH sources and as increasing amounts of detail were included in Brad, suggest use, perhaps not continuous, until First War. Clearing House evidence is contradictory. Pier only given separate listing in Hand-books 1872 and 1877 (first time facilities listed, now shown goods only); thereafter presumably treated as part of Royal Docks which was always shown goods only. Junction Diagrams show it as passenger station 1870 to 1929 (inclusive), with no closure shown in Supplement dated November 1939. Initially it was shown as 57 chains beyond Dock passenger station but this was amended to 55 in 1877. [The first diagram, 1867, had lumped most of Grimsby together.] England & Wales maps show it as passenger station still in 1923. A possible explanation for discrepancy is that Pier station was not available as starting point or destination in itself, which would also explain lack of direct evidence in Brad.

Brad evidence: By July 1867 a train was shown as far as Great Grimsby (= Town, Docks not included separately) on days and at times that matched steamer sailings. By August 1887 relevant train was continuing to Cleethorpes. After September 1898, before or with August 1908 Brad GC’s advert for steamer services (see e.g. p 966-7-8 Brad April 1910) refers to trains running to Grimsby Docks ‘alongside the steamer’, which cannot literally be Grimsby Docks station since that is outside the docks, and says return passengers from Antwerp and Hamburg were conveyed to Docks station by omnibus; in body of book shows that relevant train was allowed longer than others between Town and Docks, suggesting that carriages might have been detached at Town and taken onto the Pier station. Still same August 1914 (see BLN 21 December 2014, where it is suggested, probably correctly, that service ceased with war – Clearing House information often out of date).

Included in table in Bilborough 1924, without any indication of facilities; omitted 1928. Non-tt report of 7 December 1854 referred to (very incomplete) CLEETHORPE [ROAD? – there is a mention of junction at C R] as intermediate station; presumably nothing ever came of this.

HAMPSTEAD [Nor] op 22 June 1907; still open. Pre-op Heath Street (L). H HEATH [LSW] op 2 January 1860 (T 2nd); clo Sunday 2 December 1984 by engineering work and closure extended by damage to tunnel (BLN 507, 508, etc); reop 15 April 1985; again clo. (route modernisation) 29 October 1995 (BR leaflet NLL/DAL/A100); reop 30 September 1996; still open.

Excursion platform existed at one time. Daily Telegraph April 19 1892 described accident previous day (Bank Holiday); fine weather had attracted many but in evening threat of rain caused rush to station; beyond main platform (covered, 159 yards long) was an extension or excursion platform (120 yards, uncovered), sharing a common entrance. Platform approached from street down flight of stairs, narrowed at one point by ticket collector’s box; 8 dead, 13 injured in crush. Major Marindin’s report advocated separate entrance and exit for this. LNW had already acted: Booking-office and Waiting-hall (wooden) assumed to be forerunner of this (no explanation for name has been found); H all days when first seen elsewhere. April 1849 (Reid); KIRK H in Brad until 1850, but just H in Reid and Topham; still open.

Major Marindin’s report advocated separate entrance and exit for this. LNW had already acted: Booking-office and Waiting-hall (wooden) 80 feet by 21 feet 6 inches, holding 600 people at one time, separate entrance to new additional platform 200 x 20 feet, joining onto ordinary and replacing previous excursion train siding; platform as extended would hold 3,600 to 3,800 people but only half that number would be admitted at one time (St James’s Gazette 6 June 1892). [Use of ‘siding’ here raises questions about exact nature of original excursion platform. Was excursion platform part provided with lines on both sides?]

HARLESDEN [Mid] op 3 August 1875 (Mid) as HARRROW ROAD for STONEBRIDGE PARK and WEST WILLESDEN; became H R for S P and HARLESDEN February 1876 co tt, HARRROW ROAD 1 May 1878 co tt, HARRROW ROAD for S and HARLESDEN 1 November 1880 co tt, S P for W W and HARLESDEN 1 July 1884 (Mid); clo 2 July 1888, reop 1 March 1893 co tt
(Mid); renamed HARLESDEN for W W and S P 1 February 1901 (RCG); clo 1 October 1902 (Wednesday) (RCG). Other variations used elsewhere — e.g. gb 1894a, 1895 omitted ‘WEST’.

HARLESTON [GE] op 1 December 1855 (co n Norfolk News 1a); see 1860 November 2; clo 5 January 1953 (T 5th). At first in hb as HARLESTONE; thus co wt September 1856.

HARLING ROAD near Doncaster [Deame] op 3 June 1912; clo 10 September 1951 (RM November).

HARLINGTON BEDS [Mid] op 13 July 1868 (T 14th); still open. Became H for TODDINGTON 1 October 1889 (RCG), H BEDS 1 November 1927 (hbl October). Brad dropped ‘for T’ 1955.

HARLOW [GE]
H MILL op 9 August 1841 (co n T 30 July); MILL added 13 June 1960; still open.
H TOWN probably op 22 November 1841, with earlier special use 9 and 10 September 1841 (see 1841); in mid-1843 it was still alternative stop to Harlow and Roydon but by the end of 1843 some trains were stopping here and at one/both of the others; still open. Early NETTLESWELL; BURNT MILL, N; B M & N (NETTLESWELL Brad), & N dropped 1843 it (CI); renamed H T 13 June 1960 (RM July); still open.

HARMSTON [GN] op 15 April 1867 (GN; co ½ T 19 August- line; included in description of formal opening on 11th, Stamford Mercury 12th); clo 10 September 1962 (RM October).

HAROLD WOOD [GE] op 1 February 1868 (Chesham Chronicle 7th – flag station); aot request; still open. Heril Wood pre-opening (L).

HAROLDS MOOR [SIT] first in Brad December 1878; see 1860 July 25; last in Brad May 1896; in hb 1883 to 1895 (inclusive); [map 88].

HARPENDEN
HARPENDEN [Mid] op 13 July 1868 (T 14th); became H CENTRAL 25 September 1950, reverted 18 April 1966 (Mid); still open.
H EAST [GN] op 1 September 1860 (London Evening Standard 1st – at New mile-end H); EAST added 25 September 1950 (RM October); clo 26 April 1965 (RM May).

HARPERLEY [NE]
On Bell’s Map of Great Northern Coalfield 1850 (perhaps goods only) (M Cobb).
HARPERLEY (a) first in Brad March 1861; last May 1864.
HARPERLEY (b) op 1 November 1892* (NE Hoole); clo 29 June 1953 (RM August).
* = new a fully recognised station, in time books for first time and all trains call (Northern Echo 27 October 1892); presumably paper looking forward to November tt; does wording imply already in e.g. market use, or just that previously goods only?

HARPUR HILL – see 1833 May.

HARRINGAY
HARRINGAY [GN] op 1 May 1885 (Pall Mall Gazette 2nd); to H WEST 18 June 1951, reverted 27 May 1971 (WR GIC 7 June); still open.

HARRINGAY GREEN LANES [TH Jt] op 1 June 1880 (Mid) as GREEN LANES; renamed H P G L 30 August 1884 (Mid; RCG ref July), H PARK in co tt by April 1910 but 18 June 1951 (LMM Operating Circ 31 May), H STADIUM 27 October 1958 (RM December), H EAST 14 May 1990 (BLN); > H G L 8 July 1991 (AB Chiron); still open.

HARRINGTON
HARRINGTON [LNW] op 18 May 1846 (co n Carlisle Patriot 15th); aot request; still open.
H CHURCH ROAD (CM 3c) first in Brad November 1913; clo 31 May 1926 (CI); used by workmen until 1 April 1929 (Cumbria).
Also see HIGH HARRINGTON.

HARRINGTON [Mid] op 1 March 1880 (Mid); clo 1 November 1948 (Mid).

HARROGATE [NE] [map 42]; early sometimes HARROWGATE. See SPOFFORTH and STARBECK for early stations serving Harrogate.

HARROGATE (a) op 20 July 1848 (Herapath 29th/Yorks Gazette 22nd); in most modern works is H BRUNSWICK, but only H in Brad; clo 1 August 1862 (Friday) (CI).
HARROGATE (b) op 1 August 1862 (T 4th); still open.

Ticket platform, only reference seen: accident (Knaresborough Post 11 August 1883).

HARROW
H & WEALSTONE [LNW] op 20 July 1837 (co n T 19th); & W added 1 May 1897 (hb 29 April); still open. Also used by [Bak] 16 April 1917 to 27 September 1982 and 4 June 1984 (Ug) to present.
According to Pinner Observer 16 July 1987 within days of outbreak of World War One in 1914 a temporary platform made of railway sleepers was put up in the coal yard extension north of Headstone Drive adjacent to Cecil Road because a transit camp for troops had been set up at Harrow Weald. Platform in sidings north of this station in Joe Brown’s London Atlas, where there was direct access to road to Harrow Weald (Stewart Smith, with supporting map evidence).

H-ON-THE-HILL, [Met/GC] op 2 August 1880 by Met (T 2nd), on-the-H added by 1890 (hb) but 1 June 1894 (CI); GC use began 15 March 1899; still open.

H ROAD – see HARLESDEN.
Also see NORTH HARROW; SOUTH HARLOW; SUDBURY HILL; WEST HARROW.

HARSTON [GE] op 1 April 1852 (D&C 5-line), in Brad April; aot request; clo 17 June 1963 (RM August).

HARSWELL GATE – see EVERHAMING.

HART [NE]: line opened 1 May 1839 (see 1836 A for details); clearly use earlier than suggested by Brad, perhaps (unlikely?) even continuity with that mentioned in note 1836 A; station here, originally named CRIMDON (perhaps goods only), mentioned in account of accident on 15 February 1865 (Sheffield Independent 18th); certainly passenger use by 12 March 1870 (report of Saturday pay-day fight amongst miners, York Herald of 19th); but only added in Brad July 1871; renamed October 1871; clo 28 July 1941, reop 7 October 1946 (RM January 1947); suffered gradual dilution of service: all days at reop but soon reduced to summer only; still winter trains 6 October 1947 LNE tt; none October 1949 Brad. After August 1948 Brad, before/with August 1950 further reduced, to Saturdays and Sundays only (1950 until 3 September, inclusive); clo 31 August 1953 (Cl).

HARTFIELD [LBSC] op 1 October 1866 (co n T 1st); clo 2 January 1967 (RM February).

HARTFORD

Also see GREENBANK.

HARTHOPE [Cal] (non-tt): railwaymen and families; op 3 January 1900; clo after 1926; [Beatcook Summit – Ruttonside] (U).

HARTINGTON [LNW] op 4 August 1899 (LNW Officers 39077, 39103); clo 1 November 1954 (Buxton Advertiser 29 October), later emergency winter use (U); see 1962 August 5.

HARTINGTON COLLIERY [Mid]: (non-tt); at some point Saturdays only service for miners; notice with November 1888 public tt says that trains will not pick up/set down at sidings adjacent to colliery on Saturdays – passengers now to go to/from Netherthorpe (later Staveley Town) and Staveley (later Barrow Hill) stations; [branch from between Staveley Town and Barrow Hill] (Mid).

HARTINGTON ROAD Brighton [LBSC] op 1 January 1906 (LBSC); HALT; clo 1 June 1911 (Thursday) (Cl); [Lewes Road – Kemp Town].

HARTLEBURY [GW] op 3 May 1852; still open. H JUNCTION 1862 to 1894 (Brad) and thus GW co tt 1865. Paddington station-master had record dated 1865 that Bishop of Worcester could stop trains but no confirmation in other records (Out of Course).

HARTLEPOOL all lines ultimately part of [NE]; (based on Hartlepool plus information from S Bragg); (map 35).

[Hartlepool Dock & Railway]: first service provided by contractors, first licence issued 21 July 1836 (see 1836 A), to dock area, exact site unknown; company began own service 1 May 1839, again initial terminus unknown; by 1841 a station had been built at the NE corner of Victoria Dock; re-sited about 1880 (perhaps 6 June 1880 when other station, below, opened). This station clo to public 16 June 1947, though school trains continued to 20 March 1964 (U). Unused Early Morning Return ticket printed 1952/3 suggests also workmen’s later use (S Berry). In Brad 1862 to 1894/8 shown as EAST H in some tables, especially those including both Hartlepool stations.

[Stockton & Hartlepool] service began 10 February 1841 from a temporary station, with ‘halt’ at STRANTON. Harbour improvements meant line had to be cut. According to a literal interpretation of writings of local historians sequence then was: About April 1846 line cut back to STRANTON, now used as a temporary terminus; About June 1847 new temporary terminus opened on west side of South Street, needing spur from point just south of STRANTON, which would then have closed;

Between early 1848 and 1851 new terminus built on Victoria Terrace, opposite the Customs House;

About September 1853 this was again replaced, by terminus in Mainsforth Terrace. A local paper said new station was expected to open on 1 September, but that was a month before and no evidence has been found that it actually did so.

On the face of it, seems unlikely they should have moved their station so often and it may be that in reality the 1846 and 1847 ‘stations’ were same one since no map evidence has been found for 1847 one, though its life was so short that no maps might have been made during, or have survived from, its period of existence; furthermore, many ‘stations’ of that era were such primitive affairs that often would have been possible, literally, to move them from one site to another. From July 1846 to July 1847 (inclusive) Brad has references to ‘STRANTON’ that clearly have to be interpreted as ‘The Hartlepool station at Stranton’; name WEST HARTLEPOOL first appeared in February 1848 tt (Cl). These name changes would fit full listing given, but naming of stations was then such a haphazard business that this cannot be relied upon fully.

Thereafter, its history is much clearer: it was again re-sited Saturday 1 May 1880 (York Herald 4th, Shields Daily News 4th, after the event); Daily Gazette for Middlesbrough, Friday, 30 April, had said would be one train Sunday evening, full use Monday. WEST dropped from name 26 April 1967 (Cl); still open as HARTLEPOOL.

Tts (e.g. Brad 1872 and NE co tt 1880) often indiscriminate, having EAST H/WEST H in one table, H E/H W in another.

HARTLEY [NE] op 3 May 1847; line; re-sited to north in 1851 (BT); clo 2 November 1964 (RM January 1965). Originally H PIT and thus intermittently to 1858 tt (JS); later briefly, about 1863, H JUNCTION (Brad).

HARTON ROAD [GW] op 16 December 1867 (GW- line); ROAD added 1881? (ref RCH dist 31 July); clo 31 December 1951 (T 31st).

HARTS HILL & WOODSIDE [GW] op 1 April 1895 (RCG); clo 1 January 1917 (GW notice dated 22 December 1916); [Round Oak – Dudley]. Aot HARTSHILL & W (hb).

HARTSHILL & BASFORD [NS] op 1 May 1905 (NS); HALT; clo 20 September 1926 (hbl 61); [Stoke-on-Trent – Newcastle-under-Lyne].

HARTWOOD [Cal]; op 1 May 1889 (Glasgow Evening Post 1st); still open.

HARTY ROAD [SEC] first in Brad June 1907 but see note on Brambledown; HALT; clo 4 December 1950 (T 4th).

HARTINGTON [Mid] op 17 September 1866 (Mid; Rtn- line); clo 1 October 1962, but buses to 17 June 1963 (Cl).

HARWICH

H TOWN [GE] op 15 August 1854; originally single platform close to quayside, between West Street and George Street; had to be replaced because in direct line of access to new GE Continental Pier, built 1864. Old station clo in March 1865 and a new op 1 December 1865 (Essex Standard 1st), slightly inland, 300 yards south (arrangements in between?); TOWN added 1 March 1883 (GE Journal Special No 2, September 1979). Still open.

In 1864 (at least) boat trains ran along quayside (M Harris, article, Steam Days, June 2000).

Co n T 4th said on and after 15 May 1877 Rotterdam Boat Express would run direct onto Pier here; wording suggests new arrangement (not in equivalent 1876 notice), though ‘uniformed interpreter’ who accompanied passengers from London to Cologne was already at post. Pier soon dropped from notices – assumed or discontinued?

H INTERNATIONAL [GE] op by 15 March 1883 (date of closure of old line, GE Soc Journal 93; supported by co n T 5th giving warning of time alteration for Boat Train on 15th) as PARKESTON QUAY; sometimes H P Q (e.g. GE co tt 1889, 1914); H I PORT 28 May 1995 (AB Chron), on opening of new passenger terminal (D&C 5) – PORT soon omitted, in practice even before 24 September 1995 (AB); still open.

H PARKESTON QUAY WEST [LNE] first in Brad September 1934 (either prematurely, or station was in use before formal op 1 October 1934, described in T 2 October); steamer passengers only (hb); from 8 November 1968 regular services ceased; then only occasional use; officially clo 1 May 1972 but already out of use.

HARWORTH COLLIERIES SIDINGS (non-ty): used for works outings 30 May 1965 (to Cleethorpes) and 4 June 1967; [branch from Tickhill & Wadworth] (U: JB).

HASELOUR – see ELFORD.

HASLAND NO 9 FIT SIDING [Mid] (non-ty) op by 5 March 1913; clo ?; [Clay Cross – Chesterfield] (Mid).

HASLEMORE [LSW] op 1 January 1859 (SR; *co n T 1*ª line); still open. H for HINDEHEAD in Brad 1929/30 to 1955 but not hb 1929, 1938.

HASLINGDEN [LY] op 17 August 1848; clo 7 November 1960 (RM December).

HASSALL GREEN [NS] op 17 April 1905 (RCG); after December 1926 Brad, before/with August 1927 reduced to Thursdays and Saturdays; clo 28 July 1930 (*Staffordshire Sentinel 24*ª).

HASSENEDEAN [NB] first in Brad March 1850; clo 6 January 1969 (BR clo notice).

HASSEocks [LBSC] op 21 September 1841 (*co n Sussex Advertiser 20*ª); H GATE until 1881; still open. Brad ? to 1955: H for HURSTPIERPOINT.

HASSOP [Mid] op 1 August 1862 (co n Derby Mercury 30 July); clo 17 August 1942 (Cl). 1870 to 1906/7 H for CHATSWORTH in Brad, but not thus Mid co tt.

HASTINGS

HASTINGS [SE] op 13 February 1851 (*co n T 13*ª); still open. For difficulties met by LBSC when they tried to use this station, see Also (non-ty) SE provided temporary platform from the course for racing 22 and 23 August 1865 (*Sussex Advertiser 26*ª).

Perhaps excursion platform existed here: Hastings ... Observer 21 February 1880: plans for enlarged station included extra platform, one side of which would be used for ordinary trains, the other would be long excursion platform, stretching from bridge to office on the Cornwallis estate, latter being entrance. Was this carried out?

Ticket platform(s): Sussex Advertiser Tuesday 14 September 1852, column headed Hastings & St Leonards Observer: inquest on porter who had been sent to ticket platform to help on ‘Wednesday’ [or was this a St Leonards station? Or on St Leonards side of Hastings?]. 4 November 1879, fatal accident to guard who, on his own initiative, was helping to collect tickets from Ashford; collectors had to climb from track to train stopped outside station; Coroner recommended provision of platform (*Kent & Sussex Courier 19*ª). Was one provided?

One on Rye line; in use June 1890 (U).

HASWELL [eventually NE]

Station op for goods by [Hartlepool Railway & Docks] 23 November 1835; first passenger service horse-drawn, provided by contractors from dock area at Hartlepool, first licence issued 21 July 1836 (see 1836 A).

First regular passenger service provided from Sunderland by [Durham & Sunderland], using Hartlepool station, April or May 1837 (NE).

Hartlepool Railway began own regular service 1 May 1839. Unlike that proper station at first; probably contractors dropped passengers at convenient point and Durham company left them nearby; early maps show a ‘Railway Hotel’ and a ‘Railway Inn’ at sites that would have fitted this contention. BoT accident report shows that they were still then considering a more convenient arrangement; BoT inspection report by Major-General Pasley, dated 26 July 1844, details improved arrangement then in force (see map 35a). Report shows Durham company already wanted curve to allow through running and replacement of cable- by locomotive-haulage. NE wts (Rail 968 series) show February 1858 for this (change perhaps made during January): for the first time details of all stations were included and Haswell was shown as though a through station. Support from [GN] op 1 October 1844; (it had been ‘recently opened’ according to letter of complaint about fares, Essex Standard 20 December); last February 1849 (had been destroyed by fire – ‘last night’ Chelmsford Chronicle 19 January).

HAYE [GN] op 4 August 1905 (Whittle from GN sources; ‘has commenced’ Morning Post 8 April); last shown Brad June 1905 but with note that motor-car service was subject to alteration so perhaps closed before 1 July (Saturday); [Hatfield – Cole Green].

HATFIELD near Hertford; {map 72}.

HATFIELD [GN] op 7 August 1850 (*T 6*ª, *S*ª); still open.

Ticket platform. only reference seen: Herts Guardian 24 June 1862: fatal accident; man hit by Midland express going at full speed.

HYDE [GN] op 8 April 1905 (Whittle from GN sources; ‘has commenced’ Morning Post 8 April); last shown Brad June 1905 but with note that motor-car service was subject to alteration so perhaps closed before 1 July (Saturday); [Hatfield – Cole Green].

HATFIELD near Chelmsford

[HATFIELD] [EC] first in Brad December 1844; (it had been ‘recently opened’ according to letter of complaint about fares, Essex Standard 20 December); last February 1849 (had been destroyed by fire – ‘last night’ Chelmsford Chronicle 19 January).

HEVEREL [GE] op 1 March 1878 (Cl. note 1600), on same site; HEVEREL until 1879/80 (Brad); still open.

HATFIELD – see SIGGLESTHORNE.

HATFIELD & STAINFORTH [GC] op 1 October 1866 (*GC; Rt*ª line) as S & H, replacing earlier STAINFORTH; renamed 28 September 1992 (tA AB Chron); still open.

HATHERLEIGH [SR] op 27 July 1925 (*Bideford 28*ª); clo 1 March 1965 (*Express & E 1*ª); {map 116}. 217
HATHERN [Mid] op 17 February 1868 (Mid); clo 4 January 1960 (RM February). 11 September 1961 wt shows Fridays only stop northbound ‘for wages cash’.

HATHERSAGE [Mid] op 25 June 1894 (Derbyshire 30th); still open.

HAVANT
HAVANT [LBSC] op 15 March 1847 (Salisbury 20th); temporary terminus between Havant and Rowlands Castle, provided as result of dispute with LBSC, passengers being taken on to Portsmouth by omnibus; although line opened through to Portsmouth 24 January 1859, this was kept as LSW Havant station at least until end of month. Notice of through use (T 21st) said all trains would stop at Havant New to set down and pick up; notice about cheap fares (T 27th) specified New. Notices for February merely ‘Havant’. However, inter-company relations such that ‘New’ perhaps taken for granted. Through services suspended with effect from 9 June 1859 after LBSC had won injunction (co n T 11th); again just ‘Havant’ but highly unlikely LBSC would have allowed use of ‘main’ since it would have meant use of their station yard by omnibuses taking passengers on to Portsmouth; LSW vol I, p 147 says LSW had to stop its trains ‘before Havant’. During this dispute LSW did run excursions along LBSC line to Chichester, reversing at Havant, for Goodwood Races 27-8 July; these would not have competed with LBSC since they started from Chalpam Common (co n T 23rd). Through services resumed 8 August 1859 (co n T 4th); this then closed?

HAVENHOUSE [GN] op 28 July 1873 (GN) as CROFT BANK; renamed 1900 (1 October according to hbl 12 July, but 1 August, CI, JS – latter looks better fit); see 1962 November 11, at request; still open.

HAVENSTREET [IWC]: op 20 December 1875?, as HAVEN STREET – (see 1875); partially re-sited when rebuilt and crossing loop installed 1926 (T Cooper); at request; to one word 9 June 1958 (CI); clo 21 February 1966 (RM March).

Reop (or new makeshift provided) 1 October 1869 when Mid took over line and GW refused to allow use of Barton (co minute books RAIL 482/2).

BARRS COURT JUNCt [GW/LNW] first in Brad September 1864; last May 1868 but intermittently in GW co tts at least January 1864 to July 1873; service varied. [map 93].
Trains to/from Gloucester always used Barrs Court. Trains on Joint line to/from Shrewsbury could initially use either Barton or Barrs Court, some having portions for both, divided/joined at Barrs Court Junction. Trains to/from Newport had initially to use Barton, also used by Worcester trains; those to/from Brecon used Moorfields. From 1 December 1857 some Newport trains used Barrs Court. The opening of the ‘Hereford Loop’ (see map) on 1 August 1866 (Joint GW/LNW notice, Hereford Journal 28 July) allowed trains to/from Shrewsbury, Newport and Worcester all to use Barrs Court, though some Worcester and Newport trains continued to use Barton and some Shrewsbury ones to have both Barton and Barrs Court portions. When section of line south from Barton to western end of new loop closed to passenger traffic is not known; December 1866 it shows one train each way; wtt September 1867 shows coaches for Newport being taken by Pilot engine from Barrs Court Junction to Barton; service from Barton to Newport ceased 1 June 1868 (RAIL 937/11); only services then left using Barton were those from Hay. These were joined 1 July 1869 by some of Midland’s services from beyond Worcester. Hay trains diverted to Moorfields 1 October 1869. From 1 November 1872 Midland coaches were taken to Worcester by GW trains. Services from Moorfields were diverted to Barton 1874; all Midland and associated services were diverted to Barrs Court 1893.

There were also local connecting services, full details unknown. 1866 notice quoted refers to ‘a Pilot Train’ taking passengers on weekdays between Barrs Court and Brecon & Merthyr line; whether this involved reversal to Moorfields or some sort of exchange arrangement at junction west of Moorfields not known; at least sometimes through carriages was transferred this way. Arrangements might have begun when Brecon line opened in 1866 – opening notice says trains will run in connection with LNW and GW trains at Hereford, though might have been bus connection at first.

Ticket platform: before platform; accident; Hereford Times 5 June 1858. Possible that intermittent tt entries in book referred to this and that wider public use available than suggested above?

See articles by CR Clinker in RCHS Journal July and November 1982 for legal aspects of companies’ usage.

OTHERWAS FACTORY [LNW/GW Joint] (non-tt): alias R F SIDINGS; from 26 January 1916 to after 9 March 1918 (facsimile of ticket so dated in GW book) trains for workers at munitions factory. One wtt notice, headed “Workpeople’s Trains” included separate trains for “Workmen”, “Work Girls”. “Soldiers”. Trains ran from Hereford Barrs Court Junction; connections provided at least from Ross and Credenhill (Ray Gaston and John Morris of Signalling Record Society). Workmen’s trains again at least by 2 October 1944 wtt to 1946 (RAC), now calling at FACTORY SIDING; NO. 1 CROSSING; NO. 3 CROSSING (@JF); [Rotherwas physical junction shown IA].

HEREFORD JUNCTION: according to Byles exchange platform (non-tt) south of Pontypool; line op 2 January 1854; platform op then ? clo ?

HERIOT [NB] op 1 August 1848; see 1948 August 13; clo 6 January 1969 (BR clo notice).

HERMITAGE [GW] op 13 April 1882 (T 10th line; in description of formal op, 12th, Reading Mercury 15th); clo 4 August 1942, reop 8 March 1943; clo 10 September 1962 (RM October).

HERMITAGE FOOT [NB] appeared only in Brad June 1862, when no trains were yet shown for its stretch of line, though line opened 2 June. Omitted July when trains were shown. Perhaps indicated a stop for benefit of workmen on line since service on this stretch seems initially to have been mostly for their benefit (see entry on Riccarton Junction); {Steele Road – Newcastleton}. opened 2 June. Omitted July when trains were shown. Perhaps indicated a stop for benefit of workmen on line since service on this stretch seems initially to have been mostly for their benefit (see entry on Riccarton Junction); {Steele Road – Newcastleton}.

HERNE BAY [LCD] op 13 July 1861 (co n T 15th); original station west of Greenhill Bridge, replaced about ¼ mile east on extension of line 5 October 1863 (D. Banks, from photographic evidence); H B & HAMPTON-ON-SEA 1880/1 (Brad) to 1951 (WR General Instruction Circular 26 February 1951 said had been, Cl pap); still open.

HERNE/HERNE BRIDGE – see HURN.

HERNE HILL [LCD] op 25 August 1862 (co n T 23rd); still open.

HERON QUAYS [Dock] op 31 August 1887 (T 1 September); clo during 9 February 1996 by IRA bomb (T 10th), reop 22 April 1996 (Rly Obs June); clo for rebuilding September 2001, reop 18 December 2002 (Trams website); still open.

HERRIARD [LSW] op 1 June 1901 (co n Risingtostoke); clo 1 January 1917 (T 22 December 1916), reop 18 August 1924 (T 14th, 16th); clo 12 September 1932 (Portsmouth Evening News 8th).

HERRINGFLEET JUNCTION – see HADDISCOE.

HERSHAM [SR] op 28 September 1936 (SR sig inst 34/1936); still open.

HERTFORD [map 74]

H EAST [GE] op 31 October 1843 (T 2 November); re-sited 27 February 1888 (Hertfordshire Mercury 3rd March – B Wilson); EAST added 1 July 1923 (hbl 12th); still open. H RAILWAY STREET 1883/4 to 1923 (Brad).

Ticket platform, only entries seen: Herts Guardian 20 January 1855; accident 14th. Opposite Grotto Road (ibid 3 March 1883).

H NORTH [GN] op 1 March 1858 (Herts Guardian 2nd); NORTH added 1 July 1923 (hbl 12th); passenger service cut back from original terminus of branch to Hatfield to through station now opened east of the original 2 June 1924 (CI); still open. GN co tt 1909: H for HAILESBURY, H COWBRIDGE 1882/3 to 1923 (Brad).

HERTFORDSBOROUGH [GN]; co n for tenders for building station house near here (Hertford Mercury 1 May 1858); first in Brad December 1858; clo 18 June 1951 (RM July).

GN notice of alterations for July 1861 (T 29 June) said new passenger station would open here – brief closure overlooked? – some sort of upgrading, previously regarded as ‘halt’? – latter unlikely since in January 1859 Brad all trains shown as stopping but in February 1863 it and Cole Green, only other intermediate station, request stops. Or (most likely?) clerical misunderstanding after GN absorbed line.

HESKETH BANK [LY] op 20 February 1878 (Southport Vis 20th); clo 7 September 1964 (RM October). Brad; H B & TARLETON at op (and thus hbl before 1890), became H B for T 1882, H B 1911/12; but just H B in LY co tt 1899.

HESKETH PARK [LY] op 20 February 1878 (Southport Vis 20th); clo 7 September 1964 (RM October). At first H P SOUTHPORT in hbl.

HESLEDEN [NE]: line op 1 May 1839, nd; added to Macauly’s map between 1851 and 1854, though not in Brad until February 1858; clearly some earlier use but not known how full or continuous. See 1836 A; 12 October 1850 special train run for convenience of pitmen attending meeting on Town Moor, poorly patronised so perhaps not repeated (Newcastle Journal 19th); Saturday market service began 6 December 1851 (Durham County Advertiser 12th) – note that Trimdon and Wingate, already fully included in Brad were also served by this; station mentioned in connection with accident (ibid 13 May 1853) but then perhaps goods only. Originally CASTLE EDEN COLLERY; renamed 1 February 1891 (RGC); clo 9 June 1952 (RM August).

HESLERTON [NE] op 8 July 1845; clo 22 September 1930.

HESSAY [NE]; trains called at ‘HESSORY’ level crossing on market days from line opening 30 October 1848 (co n York Herald 28th; same Yorkshire Gazette); all days when first seen elsewhere (Reid April 1849, first issue of this tt); clo 20 September 1915 (T 18th); back in Brad June 1919, Saturdays only, for York passengers only; full use August 1921/July 1922; aot request; clo 15 September 1958 (RM October).

HESSLE [NE] op 2 July 1840 (Hall 10th); still open.

HESSLE ROAD [NE] op 1 June 1853 (co n Hull Packet 3rd — unlikely any station – ’passengers will be taken up and set down at’); clo October 1853 (Cl); [map 63].

HEST BANK [LNW] op 22 September 1846 (co n Lancaster 26th); clo 3 February 1969 (Cl).

HESTON – see HOUNSLOW CENTRAL.

HESWALL [Birkenhead] op 19 April 1886 (co ½ Herapath 14 August); clo 17 September 1956 (RM October).

HESWALL (GC) op 2 May 1898 (GC dates) as H HILLS; renamed 7 May 1973 (Cl); still open.

HETHERSETT [GE] op 30 July 1845 (co n Norfolk); last in Brad September 1847; back January 1852; aot request; clo 31 January 1966 (Cl).

HETTTON [NE]; for op in 1837 see 1836 A; clo 5 January 1953 (RM March).

HEVER [LBSC] op 1 October 1888 (co n T 28 September); still open.

HEWORTH

HEWORTH main line op 5 November 1979 (Rly Obs February 1980) as replacement for Felling and Pelaw, which both clo then for conversion to TWM; still open.

See 2002 March 31; continues to be served by ex-BR and TWM trains.

HEXHAM [NE] op 10 March 1835; still open.

HEXTHORPE

HEXTHORPE [SY] op 1 February 1850 (GC); last in tt February 1855.

Seems to have continued in use as a ticket platform into GN days: all trains to Doncaster will stop at Hexthorpe station for ticket collection (notice Sheffield Independent 13 September 1851) for races all days 16 to 19 September. In use normally only on Wednesdays and Fridays of Doncaster race-weeks; serious accident 16 September 1887 (e.g. Sheffield Evening Telegraph of that date); long platform 900 yards from Hexthorpe Junction, near bridge over line. Sheffield Daily Telegraph 25 August 1888: done away with; tickets to be collected at Conisborough.

HEYFORD [GW] op 2 September 1850 (co n T 31 August); still open.

HEYS CROSSING [LY] first in Brad September 1911 but perhaps op later in that month – Ormskirk 28th says ‘now open’ (no mention in previous paper, 21th); see 1905 (b); clo 18 June 1951 (wtt supp).

HEYSHAM PORT [Mid] op 11 July 1904 (Morecambe & Heysham Times 15th) for local service to/from Morecambe; long distance services began 1 September 1904, when shipping services transferred from Morecambe; re-sited to east 4 May 1970 (Cl); clo 6 October 1975, except for occasional use by boat train passengers; re-open 11 May 1987 (Mid); H in public tt and Brad but H HARBOUR in wtt until 1917 (R Bond) and tickets generally bore this name (JB); H SEA TERMINAL on reopening (owners’ version but in tt); became H PORT 11 May 1992 tt; clo 8 February 1994, reop 16 December 1994; still open.

HEYTESBURY [GW] op 30 June 1856 (W Fly P 1 July); clo 19 September 1955 (RM November).

HEYWOOD

HEYWOOD [LY] op 15 April 1841 (LY); re-sited 1 May 1848 on extension to Bury (Cl); clo 5 October 1970 (Cl). Also see CASTLETON.

HEYWOOD – see HAYWOOD.

HICKLETON

H & THURNSCOE [HB] op 23 August 1902 (RCG); clo 8 April 1929 (last train 6th) (NE Express, June 2003); excursion 14 October 1933 during Hull Civic Week (RM January 1934, pp 153-4).

Also see BOLTON-ON-DEARNE.

HIGH BARNET op [GN] 1 April 1872 (co ½ T 12 August); transferred to [Nor] 14 April 1940 (T 15th); still open.

HIGH BENTHAM – see BENTHAM.

HIGH BLAITHWAITE [MC] op 1 October 1878 (G&S); clo 1 August 1921 (RCH Distance Tables amendment 955/7 (RAIL 1089/70)).

HIGH BLANTYRE [Cal] op 2 February 1863; clo 1 October 1945 (RM March).

HIGH DROOMS [SE] op 1 March 1893 (SE sig notice 10/1893) as SOUTHBOURGOH; renamed 21 September 1925 (Cl; hbl ref October); still open.

HIGH FIELD [NE]; line op 1 August 1848, this clearly op later. Correspondence between Joseph Jefferson and Hudson published in York Gazette 13 May 1848 shows that former believed he had secured promise for Bubwith station to be built here but latter claimed he had been misled by former into thinking that this would be in the public interest whereas that was best served by site actually used for Bubwith; it did not appear in Brad until January 1859 (as BUBWITH H F) but adverts for sale at Harthorpe (e.g. York Herald 5 March 1853) said that Harthorpe was about one mile from stations at Foggathorpe and Bubwith High Field so it looks as if it was one of those stations omitted from NE tt for some years; renamed H F 1 December 1873 (Cl); clo 20 September 1954 (RM October). RCG: HIGHFIELD.

HIGH HALDEN ROAD [KES] op 15 May 1905 (Ashford Chronicle 19th); HALT (but not all sources – e.g. 11 September tt, NRM York); clo 4 January 1954 (T 2nd- last train Saturday 2nd).
HIGH HALSTOW [SEC] op Sunday 1 July 1906 (item and tt, Gravesend Reporter ... 30 June); clo 4 December 1961 (T 8 November).

HIGH HARRINGTON [CW Jc] op 1 October 1879 (D&C 14; Rtn-line); clo 13 April 1931 (Cl). Unadvertised service still in wtt 20 July 1931, not present 18 July 1932 wtt; ended? 1936-1939 (last 26 August) excursions to Workington Central and Carlisle (JNMC).

HIGH LANE [GC/NS] op 2 August 1869 (Macclesfield – co n 31 July, item 7 August); clo 5 January 1970 (BR leaflet EA.116).

HIGH MARSHES – see MARISHES ROAD.

HIGH PEAK JUNCTION – see 1833 May.

HIGH ROCKS [LBSC] op 1 June 1907 (Kent & Sussex Courier 24 May); HALT; clo 16 October 1939, reop 15 June 1942 (Cl); clo 5 May 1952 (RM June).

HIGH ROYDS [SY] according to GC and Cl there was a passenger station briefly in use in 1856; however, the only trains shown stopping here in tt Sheffield Daily Telegraph 5 July (starting 4 July) were in columns headed ‘goods and coal’; no August tt seen; that 28 August (‘for September’) showed one train from Sheffield taking ‘goods, Coal, 1, 2, gov’ stopping here; that in paper 27 September (‘for October’) was confined to passenger trains and omitted this station completely; (Dovecliffe – Westwood).

HIGH SHIELDS [NE] [map 25]

The first station in High Shields was called South Shields, which see. 17 December 1842 (Brandling Junction co n) above replaced by two stations, new South Shields and first to be named HIGH SHIELDS; in op notice latter is ‘Station at Greecock’s Corner’; re-sided to north 1879 (Cobb); clo 1 June 1981 (RM June).

HIGH STOP [S&D]; a station existed here but little detail is known; a long drawn out legal dispute showed that wagons of lime could be brought here in 1861 (Durham County Advertiser 13 June 1864), though passenger use not certain; advert for furniture sale, H PARK 20 February 1869; still open.

HIGH STREET – see GLASGOW.

HIGH STREET KENSINGTON [Met] op 1 October 1868 (T 16, 30 September); K H S until 1894/6 (Brad); Dist use also from 3 July 1871; still open. Pre-opening just K (L).

HIGH WESTWOOD [NE] op 1 July 1909 (RCG); clo 4 May 1942 (Cl).

HIGH WYCOMBE [GW/GE] op 1 August 1854 (co n T 31 July); re-sited 1 October 1864 (Cl); still open. HIGH added intermittently 1861/3 on (Brad, hb).

HIGHHAM near Gravesend [SE]; line opened 10 February 1845; Canterbury Journal 15 February said station ‘in contemplation’, co n dated 5 April 1845 – H Station is now open; first seen July 1848 (Topham); clo re-open as Gravesend, which see; still open. Perhaps ticket platform here, first and last references seen: ticket offence (South Eastern Gazette 28 March 1854). Disorderly conduct (ibid 3 July 1860). Perhaps station proper being used for collection of Gravesend tickets; hardly deserved platform of own.

HIGHFERRERS

HIGHFERRERS [Mid] op 1 May 1894 (RCG); H F for IRTLINGBOROUGH 1 July 1902 (hbl 23 October) to 1 October 1910 (hbl 1st); clo 15 June 1959 (RM July); later special use – e.g. BR handbill showed through trains to Blackpool Central, Manchester Central, St Pancras and Scarborough Saturday 5 August 1961; Saturdays over local holiday fortnight to 1 to 15 August 1964 (RM November); other excursions, last Monday 3 August 1964 (BRJ no. 17, p.317). H F for I in Mid co tt 1903; by 1909 Brad gave joint entry in index for Mid and LNW stations as H F & I, but in table Mid was ‘for’. Hb: 1904 H F & I. 1912 H F. Also see IRTLINGBOROUGH.

HINDERWELL [NE] op 3 December 1883 (co n Whity Gazette 1st); clo 5 May 1958 (RM May). LNE tt 1933: H for RUNSWICK BAY and thus Brad to closure but not in hb 1938, 1956.

HINDHAUGH [NB] (non-tt): iron miners' specials terminating at loading dock at kilns here; workings begun 1864 by Sir W G Armstrong; trains certainly by 1866; workings closed 1879; trains from Bellingham only, had to walk home in evening; [Reedsmouth – Woodburn, just north of Broomhope] (Sewell). Also see VICKERS PLATFORM, especially for site.

HINDLEY
HINDLEY [LY]: line op 20 November 1848; clearly did not open with it since letter (dated 30 November) in Manchester Times 2 December complained that no trains stopped; first in Brad January 1849; NORTH added 11 August 1952 (LMS operating circ 2nd), dropped 6 May 1968 (Cl); still open. Wigan Examiner 6 October 1888 referred to this as 'The Ladies Lane station' – local name to avoid confusion with other Hindley's? helpful information?

H GREEN [LNW]: op 1 September 1864; clo 1 May 1961 (RM June).

H SOUTH [GC] op 1 April 1884 (Wigan Observer 2nd, item and tt) as STRANGEWAYS & H; renamed H & PLATT BRIDGE 1 January 1892 (ibid 28th), H S 1952 (Cl); clo 2 November 1964 (RM December).

HINDLOW

HINKSEY [GW] op 1 February 1908 (Oxford Chron 31 January); HALT; clo 22 March 1915 (RCH); [Hinksey – Oxford].

HINTON near Evesham [Mid] op 1 October 1864 (Worcester 8th); clo 17 June 1963 (RM July). Not seen as HALT, Brad or BR tt but BR ticket thus (JB).

HINTON ADMIRAL [LSW] op 6 March 1888 (W Gaz first edition 9th); ADMIRAL added 1 May 1888 (Cl); still open. LSW co tt 1914: H A for HIGHCLIFFE-ON-SEA and thus Brad to 1955 but not in hb 1938.

HIPPERHOLME [LY] op 7 August 1850 (Bradford Observer 8th – wooden box presently acts as station); clo 8 June 1953 but facilities for excursions retained (RM July).

HIRWAUN
For earliest service see 1833 May.

HIRWAUN (LNW) op 1 June 1894 (ibid Advertiser 29 October); later excurs; see 1962 August 5.

HIRWAUN TRADING ESTATE (non-tt): U lists station on branch from H Pond but others say existence unlikely – no primary evidence found.

HISTON [GE] op 17 August 1847 (Cambridge Indep Press 21st); aot request; clo 5 October 1970 (RM October).

HITCHIN [GN] op 7 August 1850 (T 6th, 8th); still open.

HITHER GREEN [SE] op 1 June 1895 (RCG); still open.

HIXON [NS] op 1 December 1864 (Staffordshire Advertiser 3rd); reduced to one up train per day, no down service with tt alterations of 28 July 1941 (Gough); clo 6 January 1947 (RM January 1950). Became HALT 20 July 1931 (LMS PCC 208) but not thus Brad, nor LMS tt 1938, 1946.

HOCKERILL
HOCKERILL [GE] op 7 November 1910 for golf club, but others used; initially not available to/from Bishops Stortford (only short walk); passengers from Dunmow direction had to buy ticket to Bishops Stortford; when other halts on line opened 18 December 1922 (Chelmsford Chronicle 13th), tickets issued by guard, including tickets to Bishops Stortford (Bishops Stortford); HALT; clo 3 March 1952 (RM April).

Also see BISHOPS STORTFORD.

HOCKLEY
near Southend [GE] op 1 October 1889 (co n Essex Newsman 23 September); still open.

HOCKLEY near Birmingham [GW] op 1 November 1854 (GW; T 13th- line); clo 6 March 1972 (RM April). Also see West Midlands Metro – Jewellery Quarter (Section 6).

HODNET [GW] op 16 October 1867 (Liverpool Mail 27th); clo 9 September 1963 (T 9th).

HOUGHTON
HOUGHTON [LY]: op 1 June 1846; clo 12 September 1960 (RM October). Friday only call to set down railway staff shown 18 June 1962 wtt 9.

H TOWER [East Lancashire] certainly in use by 5 May 1847 (tt in paper of that date Blackburn Standard); perhaps earlier use – same paper, 17th, said had opened for the summer season so people could visit Elizabethan relic with its picturesque scenery; also item in Preston Chronicle 12 September 1846 that 1.871 had during previous week come here by rail, but also said that a station was being built here – did visitors use unfinished station or walk from Hoghton?; last in Brad October 1848 – press items about later trips here suggest, on balance that tippers then walked from Hoghton; [Hoghton – Pleasington].

HOLBEACH [MGN] op 15 November 1858 (Linc R & S Merc 19th); clo 2 March 1959 (T 2nd).

HOLBECK
Station opened here 1 July 1855 (GN co n T 2nd). Notice clearly states that both GN and NE trains will be using; Brad confirms. GN would have used HL platforms, NE LL ones. Not in NE list of stations later 1850s so perhaps a GN concern.

Joint Mid/NE LL station op 2 June 1862 (Mid). Earlier use: ‘Midland new station at Holbeck’ to be used 15 to 19 July (inclusive) 1861 for Royal Agricultural Society’s Show at Leeds (co n Leeds Mercury 1st).
Hb made three of it: GN, Mid, NE.

All closed 7 July 1958 (Cl).

At times H JUNCTION, e.g. early Brad, NE co tt 1880, LY co tt 1899, hb 1872 to 1949a. HL and LL officially added to name 2 March 1951 (Scot R comm. Circ FK48/25); earlier on tickets – LY and LNE examples (JB) and in Brad from 1892/3 to 1915/16 (not consistently); added hb 1949a.

HOLBORN

HOLBORN [Picc] op 15 December 1906 (co n T 14th). Aldwych line platforms added 30 November 1907; clo 22 September 1940 (Sunday) (RM February 1941); reop 1 July 1946 (RM September); clo 3 October 1994. Main still open. Renamed H KINGSWAY 22 May 1953 (L)*.

HOLBORN [Cen] op 25 September 1933 (L) as H KINGSWAY*, replacing British Museum; still open.

* = In both cases KINGSWAY gradually dropped – from map about 1960 judging by maps in K Garland, Mr Beck’s Underground Map, Capital Transport, 1994. Only seen as H in Brad – space?

H VIA DUCT – see under LONDON.

HOLBORN HILL – see MILLOM.

HOLEHOUSE (JUNCTION) [GSW] into use 2 December 1895 (D Stirling, from wtt at SRO); in Brad from 1894, always exchange only; only ever shown as physical junction in hb; H in wt, H JUNCTION in Brad; clo 3 April 1950 (RM June).

HOLEGATE BRIDGE – see YORK.

HOLES MOUTH JUNCTION [GW] (non-tt) op 28 December 1916 for GW workmen only (Notice 121); ceased Thursday 15 February 1917 (Notice 174); [original junction between Henbury and Pilning lines].

HOLIDAY CAMP – see ST MARY’S BAY.

HOLKAM [GE] op 17 August 1866 (T 18th); not request; clo 2 June 1952 (RM June).

HOLLAND ARMS [LNW] op 8 March 1865 (co n and item North Wales Chronicle 11th both refer to Wednesday); clo 4 August 1952 (RM September). 1867 only: HOLLANDS A (hb); clo 1 March 1965.

HOLLAND PARK [Cen] op 30 July 1900 (London Evening Post 31st); still open.

HOLLAND ROAD [LBSC] op 3 September 1905 (Brighton Gazette 22nd); HALT*; clo 7 May 1956 (Cl). Hove (a) was on this site or close by earlier.

* = certainly thus in press item and February 1906 (Brad) but RCH only made it Halt with hb 1941a.

HOLLINGBOURNE [LCD] op 1 July 1884 (LCD; Canterbury Journal 4th line); still open.

HOLLINGWOOD COLLIERY [Mid]: non-tt; 2 August 1875 wtt shows service (not in July wt), Saturdays only, to Chesterfield only; ended ?. [Staveley Town – Barrow Hill] (Mid).

HOLLINWELL & ANNESLEY GOLF STATION [GC] op 1 November 1901 for golfers (GC dates); clo 4 March 1963 (wt supp), by when used by railwaymen only; continuity of use not certain (U). Included in Brad November 1901 only (just as H & A, normal form in later use), two trains each way, and op date given by RCG and RM November without qualification; perhaps original intention was public station but soon demoted to non-tt; shown ‘P’ in hb 1904 to 1956.

HONINGTON [GN]

HONINGTON (a) op 1 July 1857 (GN) – mentioned in T 15 June report for opening of line that day, but inspection report, 13 June 1857, says they did not intend to use it until 1 July (Rin); no trains shown stopping in tt Grantham Journal (27 June, 1 August), same ibid 3 October, but note added ‘stop by signal only’ so probably taken for granted from start (still thus Brad February 1863).

HONINGTON (b) According to Whittle a new station further west was provided on line opened 12 April 1867, assuming no gap in provision. That clo 10 September 1962 (RM October); later occasional use when engineering work prevented Grantham stop (U).

HONLEY [LY]; probably op 1 July 1850 with line (Huddersfield Chronicle 6th ended its list of stations with ‘etc’; in earliest tt seen ibid 10 August); still open.

HOOLEY HILL – see AUDENSHA.

HOOLEY HOUSE [London & Brighton]: temporary transfer point 30 October to 2 November (inclusive) 1841. Fall of earth in Merstham cutting blocked line and arrangements were made to carry passengers by road between Merstham and Hooley House (Coulson side of Merstham), 4 miles (co notices T 29 October, 2 November). Perhaps already something here since original intention had been to open Hooley line to temporary terminus here (T 18 September 1840/Brighton Gazette).

HOOTON [Birkenhead]: line op 23 September 1840; station not mentioned in co n for line opening – but clearly before first seen in it in Chester Chronicle 9 October 1840, where shown for early market train on Tuesdays and Fridays to carry passengers and their baskets of produce (see Birkenhead Grange Lane for other details) since market trains originally ran Wednesdays and Saturdays – a shareholder at the co ½ meeting on 2 October requested change to Tuesdays and Fridays and was told it was under consideration (ibid 9th, from Liverpool Journal); all days before with it for 15 December 1840 (ibid 25th); still open.

HOUSLOW [map 104 – Dist only].

SMALLBERRY GREEN (temp terminus) [LSW] op 22 August 1849 (co n T 22nd); generally H in tts; replaced by Isleworth and >

HOUSLOW [LSW] op 1 February 1850 (Morning Post 2nd); aot H & WHITTON/H for W; settled 6 July 1930 as H (T 30 June); still open.

H CENTRAL [*] op 1 April 1886 (co yearly Daily News 12 August) as HESTON-HOUSLOW renamed 1 December 1925 (L); still open. Hbl ref January 1926 said had become HOUSLOW C for HESTON but just H C (Brad).

H TOWN [Dist] op 1 May 1883 (Rtn); TOWN added 21 July 1884 (ug); clo 1 April 1886 (Thursday), reop 1 March 1903 (Cl); replaced by through station on main line >

H EAST [*] op 2 May 1909 (London Daily News 3rd) as H TOWN; renamed 1 December 1925 (L); still open.

H WEST [*] op 21 July 1884 (L) as HOUSLOW BARRACKS; renamed 1 December 1925 (L); clo 12 July 1975, ready to be replaced by new through station to north, opened 14 July 1975 (RM September); still open.

a = [Dist] op EAST, CENTRAL and WEST; [Picc] began to use 13 March 1933 and now provides only service – Dist ceased 10 October 1964.
HUDDERSFIELD [LY/LNW] op 2 August 1847 (co ½ T 25 August); still open.
Ticket platform, only mention seen: fatal accident to man turning points ‘below the station’ near ticket platform (Huddersfield Chronicle 14 January 1860).

HULLGLOUCESTERS [AN Jt] op 1 September 1873 (LNW Officers 10205, 10207); clo 13 April 1931 (LNW dates PCC 192).

HULANDS [LNE] (non-tt): in use by September 1926, when in wtt as H QUARRY; certainly in wtt 11 March 1940 and 31 May 1948, but wtt's 6 May 1946 and 31 May 1948 showed only services to set down on Darlington to Penrith trains – perhaps long-running misprint since stops other way were shown earlier; not in wtt 18 June 1961 (R Maund); [Lartington – Bowes].

HULL [map 63]
HULL [NE] op 8 May 1848 (Hull Advertiser 12th); still open. H PARAGON STREET/H P in Brad and co tts from early 1850s to 1938/9 but inconsistently; ‘Street’ might well have been error resulting from use of abbreviated ‘St’ versions internally – in 1880 NE co it was ‘Station’ in three places, ‘Street’ in one and plain ‘Hull’ in most.
Ticket platform: earliest mention seen: ticket offence, assault (Hull Packet 13 January 1860). Ticket platform moved in improvements at station (ibid 9 September 1864). Many passengers were leaving train here though not supposed to so thus prosecution intended as example reported in Hull Packet 8 August 1876. Hornsea and Withernsea tickets taken this morning at Botanic Gardens (Hull Daily Mail 18 July 1889). Tickets now collected at previous station (ibid 30 April 1902) – all use now ceased?

H ALEXANDRA DOCK [HB] (non-tt): boat trains; from 1885 (U) – Dock Engineer reported 7 August that passenger station was ready for use; last regular use 1908/9 (not inspected by BoT for passenger use when signalling revised 1910); perhaps used First War for repatriating German prisoners (NE Express June 2003); however, shown ‘P’ in all Hand-books to 1938; May 1945 bba – passenger service temporarily withdrawn. Suggests passenger use (or just possibility of use?) continued until WW II – or was this an unusually prolonged example of belated information?; [branch from Beverley Road].

H BOOTHFERRY PARK (non-tt): football supporters; HALT; op 6 January 1951 (RM March); specials ceased end 1985/6 season (BLN 27 December). A.T. ticket platform would only be used for football trains to 1985.

H CANNON STREET [HB] op 27 July 1885 (co ½ T 21 August); clo 14 July 1924 (photograph of crew on last train yesterday, Leeds Mercury 14th) – services diverted to PARAGON.

H MANOR HOUSE STREET [York & North Midland] op 2 July 1840 (Hull 10th); clo 8 May 1848 – services diverted to Paragon (Hull Advertiser 12th); reop 1 June 1853 for local service to Victoria Dock (co n Hull Packet 3rd); last in Brad September 1854. Was H KINGSTON STREET ? to 1853 tt (JS); thereafter ‘H old station, M H S’ in Brad.

H NEPTUNE STREET [HB] (non-tt): cattle market; dates ?; [branch from Springbank junction] (U).

H RIVERSIDE QUAY [NE] op 11 May 1907 (Hull Daily Mail 18th) – first portion op, initially for Zeelbrogge steamboat service, Saturday & Wednesday out, back Monday & Thursday; varied over time; clo August 1914, reop 15 May 1920 summer only; ceased 1939 (with outbreak of war? – still in co tt 3 July 1939), which shows Wednesday and Saturday trains from Paragon for Rotterdam and Hamburg steamers, return trains Thursdays and Sundays. (See R. Maund, Chron October 2013, for full details.)

H VICTORIA DOCK [NE] op 1 June 1853 (co n Hull Packet 3rd); clo 1 June 1864 (Wednesday) – services diverted to Paragon (Hull Packet 3rd). In 1873 hb DRYPOOL is shown ‘P’ (Airey’s name for Victoria Dock; probably error) – Temporary non-tt station for opening of HULL JOINT DOCK 26 June 1914 (ticket evidence, D Geldard).

Excursion Platforms:
Main one was regarded as extension of Paragon: earliest reference seen Hull Packet 21 January 1876 – ‘on the Anlaby Road’, one of a multitude of tradesmen’s notices using it as a reference point for their premises over many years; NE company’s notices treated it as part of Paragon, occasionally adding ‘entrance from Anlaby Road’ (separate site from entry of this name under ‘A’); no evidence seen for use during First World War; only uses seen in Second were for returning troops (Hull Daily Mail 22 August 1944) and for reception of Dutch refugee children (ibid 12 March 1945); Rugby League supporters’ trains would run from platforms 12 and 13 ‘outside the station’ (ibid 1 November 1946); most recent seen Hull Daily Mail 29 January 1949 for similar event but further evidence needed to determine last use.

H NEWPORT [NE]: according to works in print this op 8 October 1896; perhaps origin was that local timber merchant, Mr Jameson, built platform for invalid wife, using own materials; and was later used for fairs. Was this enlarged for later use or a separate site? ‘New excursion platform(s)’ erected for Yorkshire Show (19, 20, 21 July 1899); excursionists would step straight into showground; those from Paragon would walk to main entrance in Anlaby Road (where it was well west of Paragon) or use good service of electric trams (Yorks Herald 11th; Hull Daily Mail 18th); this was clearly Newington since there were later petitions that Paragon should be used instead of Paragon, occasionally adding ‘entrance from Anlaby Road’.
HULTON COLLIERY SIDING [LNW] (non-tt): miners; op by February 1919; clo after September 1930; [branch from Chequer bent] (JR).

HUMBERSTONE [GN] op 1 January 1883 (co n Leicester Mercury 6d); clo 7 December 1953 (T 7th); though workmen used to 29 April 1957 (U) and summer Saturday and Sunday use continued to 9 September 1962, last train (CI).

Line op 29 March 1843; station not included in report on opening (T 30th); included in company tt 12 July 1843, but without trains (H Paar, Chron February 1996); first in Brad December 1843. At first company was in dispute with Lord Petre about positioning of station – he wanted station in Old Hall Lane, company wanted it in Stock Lane. In June Petre was still refusing agreement to Stock Lane. On 15 July it was decided at a meeting between villagers and company representatives that station would be provided in Stock Lane. This was put up and opened between 22 and 28 July – it only consisted of steps leading down into cutting and two platforms, on ground and walk up/down slope of cutting – not allowed to use platform or steps. Affidavit sworn on 4 August by Petre’s steward led to another break early 1844 (minutes of February say ‘is discontinued’); from March to May 1844 only six small parcels having been handled between opening and then. Petre was still refusing to agree to Stock Lane – he wanted station in Old Hall Lane, company wanted it in Stock Lane. In June Petre was still refusing agreement to Stock Lane. The line had been acquired by the Caledonian. In June Petre was still refusing agreement to Stock Lane.

Another break came early 1844 (minutes of February say ‘is discontinued’); from March to May 1844 Brad included station but no trains calling; 9 February government inspector (Pasley) had given opinion that unsafe for use; on 14 May he wrote suggesting that reopening be allowed; ‘now reopened’ (Essex Standard 31 May). Moved to site at Hall Lane, given by Lord Petre 7 September 1846 (co n Chelmsford Chronicle 4th). Still open.

L S AVENUE [LNW]: On 9 July 1852 Captain Huish reported that he had authorised the erection of a temporary station at Avenue Road (RAI 410/452); opened 7 – Leamington Courier 17 July 1852 said would be completed ‘in about six weeks from the present time’; no exact opening date found; at times just L. Leamington Year Book of 1853 said LNW had put up station within past year. Notice in Leamington Courier 28 January 1854 said omnibus connections would be made at AVENUE, not MILVERTON, since all trains would be dispached from there from 1 February (fits first appearance in Brad). Likely that still used Milverton as terminus – still in Brad and description of temporary hardly fits terminus. Paper of 3 March 1860 expected permanent AVENUE to be opened in April and existing ‘miserable wooden erection’ would be removed. Clo 18 January 1965 (RM March), ‘AVENUE’ not always included in tts.

L S MILVERTON [LNW] op 9 December 1844 (co n T 20 November); re-sited just south 13 October 1883 (Cl); clo 18 January 1965 (RM March). At times just M, or WARWICK, or W plus L and/or M; both Brad and LNW co tts often had two or three names for this station in different tables in the same issue.

LEAMSIDE [NE]: line op 15 April 1844 (Durham County Advertiser 19th), nd, August 1844; re-sited about 7 chains south for branch to Bishop Auckland which opened 1 April 1857 (inspection reports 13 January on; also see Cobb) – wording of report such that it could be interpreted to mean that this came into use before branch, especially since re-inspection of line was necessary; clo 5 October 1953 (RM November), Aot L JUNCTION 1860 to 1893/4 (Brad) and thus (one table only) NE co tt 1861. * = included in inspection report for 19 June 1844 opening – detail not given for April opening but nothing to suggest it did not open then.

LEASINGTHORNE [NE] first in Brad June 1864 (see 1845 November) but in use earlier – mentioned in legal case about a ticket in Shields Daily Gazette 10 April 1852 – event 15 February; fortnightly Saturday market service terminus; last in Brad April 1867. In it as L; map evidence suggests Westerton was different site (see Cl); [map 33].

LEEDS [map 56]
Most stations at first in Brad as L; names mostly expanded in late 1840s, early 1850s; perhaps at first helpful description rather than part of name – e.g. July 1850 had ‘Wellington Road station, opposite Exchange’.
LEEDS [LMS/LNE] op 2 May 1938 (Mid); amalgamation of WELLINGTON and NEW; op as L CITY, became L 5 May 1975 tt; old Mid portion clo 13 June 1966 (Mid); test still open.
L CENTRAL [GN/LY/LNW/NE] op 18 September 1848 (co n Leeds Intelligencer 16th); originally a temporary station, gradually transformed into permanent over next 9 years (D Joy, RCHS Journal, 1976); last train 29 April 1967; next day services diverted to City (BLN 81).
Ticket platform: London Evening Standard off the line January 1855 described derailment of GN train near ticket platform which resulted in a carriage being thrown completely off the line into the LY goods yard below. Op and clo dates?
L HUNSLET LANE [Mid] op 1 July 1840 (co n T 27 June); Mid trains transferred to WELLINGTON 2 April 1849 (Committee of Management Minute 6474, Leeds 31 March); last used by LY trains, clo 1 March 1851 (Saturday) (Mid) *. Ticket platform: mention civil case; fell out of open wagon (defective lock) on Manchester & Leeds train 1 March 1842; only able to tell staff when reached the ticket station
L MARSH LANE [NE] op 22 September 1834 (trial trip 18th) (York Courant); clo 1 April 1869 (Thursday) (CI) *
L NEW [LNW/NE] op 1 April 1869 (T 2nd); combined with Wellington to form City 2 May 1938 (CI).
Ticket platform: in consequence of opening of Leeds New tickets now collected at Batley will be collected at ticket platform outside station (LNW Officers 4099, 17 March 1869). Fare from Liverpool (Leeds Times 19 June 1875). Last use?
Excursion platform: Bradford Observer 8 January 1879 – described nearly complete alterations here; included excursion platform approached by subway from present station and by flight of stairs from Victoria Road. Leeds Mercury 15 April 1879 – new excursion platform used for first time yesterday for trip to Wetherby. Yorkshire Gazette 12 July 1890 – great improvement being made by linking excursion platform to main – previously ‘gloomy subterranean passage’. Iron bridge now provided. York Herald 27 April 1895 mentioned excursion platform at ‘Leeds’. No later information seen.
13 January 1892 fire destroyed most of the approach to what was then Leeds Joint from the west; many temporary measures introduced: included diversions to other stations – some LNW used Wellington Street and a temporary platform west of the canal brought into use on 19th. Most fully restored in week beginning 25th – see especially Leeds Mercury and Yorkshire Evening Post over the period for full details.
L WELLINGTON [Mid] op 1 July 1846* (Mid); original temporary station replaced by permanent by the autumn of 1849 (evidence of contracts cited in North of Leeds, P. E. Baughan, Roundhouse, 1966; application to transfer license from old refreshment to new, Leeds 29 September 1849); combined with New as City 2 May 1938 (CI). Sometimes L W Street.

LESBURY [York, Newcastle & Berwick] op 1 July 1847 (see 1847 March 24); probably clo 19 August 1850 when Alnwick branch opened from Bilton, later Alnmouth. Brad, Topham and some maps of the time suggest Bilton was just renaming of Lesbury, delayed until May 1851 Brad. However, inspection report (MT 6/949) makes it clear that Lesbury was a mile or so north of junction; its continuance in it and late arrival there of Bilton probably inertia. Contention supported by advert in Newcastle Journal 15 June calling for tenders to build stations at Alnwick and Bilton. Also, if branch had initially operated from Lesbury, with reversal (as

KIRKINTILLOCH op 21 February 1849 (co n T 19th); replaced by >

KIRKINTILLOCH 26 December 1844, a little to the east, to serve as interchange between EG and MK services; now MK had their station, different gauge alongside (see KIRKINTILLOCH, under ‘K’) >

KIRKINTILLOCH moved back to original site 5 July 1848 (London Evening Standard 5th) to serve as junction station for Campsie branch (regauging of MK meant their trains were running through to Glasgow, making 1844 interchange redundant); now K JUNCTION. Renamed CAMPsie JUNCTION 1849 t, LENZIE J 'in future' GM circular 10 August 1867, L 1890 (Cl), L J 1925/6 (Brad), L 1951 (Brad); still open. Became L J for GARNGABER J 1 August 1917 according to hbl 24 January 1918 and thus hb 1925 to September 1962a but not seen thus Brad.

LEOMINSTER [SH J] op 5 December 1853; still open. L JUNCTION 1862 to 1895/6 in Brad and LNW co tt 1869 (one way).

LESBURY [York, Newcastle & Berwick] op 1 July 1847 (see 1847 March 24); probably clo 19 August 1850 when Alnwick branch opened from Bilton, later Alnmouth. Brad, Topham and some maps of the time suggest Bilton was just renaming of Lesbury, delayed until May 1851 Brad. However, inspection report (MT 6/949) makes it clear that Lesbury was a mile or so north of junction; its continuance in it and late arrival there of Bilton probably inertia. Contention supported by advert in Newcastle Journal 15 June calling for tenders to build stations at Alnwick and Bilton. Also, if branch had initially operated from Lesbury, with reversal (as timetables imply), it would have added significantly to journey times and tts do not show any reduction in timings when Bilton did eventually appear. It is likely it was only intended as a temporary station, sited to provide link with road service to Alnwick (few people lived in immediate area), so no point in keeping it once railway open to Alnwick. One snag is that inspector said station at junction had only just been laid out, but there was two-month gap between inspection and opening; so time for something to be provided.

Local press timetables kept Lesbury for considerably longer – in some cases into 1853 (exact dates not given since papers differed from one another). First reference to Bilton found there is in item (Newcastle Guardian 29 May 1852) which said that company had agreed to run the Saturday market train from Alnwick at 4.15 p.m. to carry passengers to Bilton and places north; this is only reference so far seen to existence of this service. However it is possible that Lesbury survived as a Saturday market stop since note referring to market train from Lesbury to Newcastle and back (note that reverse direction of Alnwick one) survived until mid-1853, when this was extended north, from / to Morpeth. Given the obvious unreliability of these tts, there can be no certainty that this was really Lesbury. In Brad as L, ALNWICK.

LESLIE [NB] op 1 February 1861 (co ½ T 8 October); clo 4 January 1932 (LMS PCC 233).

LESMASHAGOW
First station of this name – see BROCKETSBAE.

LESMASHAGOW [Cal] op 1 July 1905 (RCG); clo 4 October 1965 (BR notice, The True Line July 2006).

LETCWORTH GARDEN CITY [GN]: ‘temporary platform’ 6 October 1903 for party of journalists to view progress (Herts & Cambridge 9th) – west of station (ibid 10 April 1905); workmen used (temporary?) from 1903 (U); main op to public 15 April 1905 (RM May); re-sited 18 May 1913 (Cl) – but Whittle, from GN records said 15 May, a Thursday and Laton Times Friday 23rd said opened ‘Friday’ (i.e. 16th); still open. G C intermittently added: was in GN co tt 1909 and LNE tt 1927; omitted body of Brad 1937; restored 17 June 1999 (AB Chron).

LETHAM
L GRANGE [NB] op 1 May 1833; clo 22 September 1930 (Scotsman 15th).
L MILL OFFSET is shown on Macaulay’s Maps (added 1851/4, still present mid-1860s); with that name should have been passenger ‘halt’ but no evidence for such use exists; all other sources seen refer to it as goods siding.

LETHENTY [GNS] op 1 October 1856 (GNS corr); clo 2 November 1931 (RM December).

LETTERSTON [GW] op 11 August 1895 (co w Western Mail 9th); clo 25 October 1937.

LEUCHARS [NB]
LEUCHARS op 1 June 1878 (Dundee Courier 3rd) as L JUNCTION; JUNCTION dropped 6 May 1974 tt (perhaps earlier – BLN 241 implies by December 1973); still open. EARLSHALL (31 May 1878 Dundee Courier).

LEVEN

LEWES [LBSBC] [map 132]
LEWES op 8 June 1846 in Friars Walk (Gen Pasley’s inspection report said this was at extreme end of line beyond where permanent would be – Sussex Advertiser 9 June); permanent station 28 August 1846; re-sited 1 November 1857 (co n ibid 3rd) and again in 1889 – new buildings, Brighton lines platform and access to Uckfield lines 4 March followed by London lines on 17 June (Sussex Agricultural Express 5 March and 25 June); still open.

Ticket platform, only mention seen in press: Sussex Advertiser 18 January 1848 – accident.

L HAM op 8 June 1846; apparently only a ticket platform (certainly too small for use as station according to Pasley’s report), absorbed one before 1857 re-siting.

‘L PINWELL’ was really extension of station for when London (Keymer) line opened 1 October 1847 (Sussex Advertiser 31 August, 28 September).

See also C E Lee’s article, RM January 1950.

LEWES ROAD Brighton [LBSBC] op 1 September 1873 (LBSBC); clo 1 January 1917 (T 22 December 1916); reop 10 August 1919 (Cl); HALT added, probably on reopening – in Brad 1920; clo 1 January 1933 (Sunday) – based on Cl (says 2nd) + SR practice.

LEWIEFIELD [LNE] op 3 July 1933 (LNE letter 19 April 1945 Cl pap); op as HALT, staffed and ceased to be such 1 January 1938 (ibid); clo 15 October 1956 (T 21 September); [Kielder – Plashetts].

LEWISHAM
LEWISHAM [SE] op 30 July 1849 (co n The Era 29 July); became L JUNCTION 1 January 1857 (L), reverted 7 July 1929 (Cl); still open. Accident report in 1858 referred to L OLD, on North Kent line, and L JUNCTION new station on Mid-Kent; presumably regarded as one station by the SE; confusingly Lloyd’s Weekly Newspaper 8 November1857 said that on 1st new station on North Kent Line had been opened at Lewisham – no explanation found.
Ticket platform? South Eastern Tuesday 3 June 1857: train from Strood hit at ticket platform here on Sunday last. Separate platform or station being used for collecting tickets to London?

LITTLEBY [EC line]: GE Society Journal included a number of items on this: July 1993 – photograph of mystery buildings, looking like station; April 1994 – identified as Littlebury Siding; October 1994 – evidence (contradictory) about contract for station here. When plans handed over to Railtrack in 1994 it was noticed that a platform was shown here on old EC map; interpreted as most likely having existed for navvies working in area (G Kenworthy). The Times included Littlebury as a station in account of formal opening of appropriate stretch but this was almost certainly an error; there was no reference to a station in any of the accounts of accident here on 4 August 1845 (within a week of line opening); all refer to Wenden and Chesterford as stations either side of accident (T 6th, 7th). Perhaps a level-crossing keeper’s ‘lodge’ – see Ickleton.

Excursion platform here at one time. Details not known but 14 September 1892 used to receive the ‘Welsh’ Lord Mayor of London (North Wales Chronicle 2nd).

L JUNCTION [op 1 October 1858 (included in tt for branch Carnarvon 2 October, but not in main line table until 30 October, for November service); first in Brad November (L itself there October). Some weeks prior to October 1859 branch trains worked from Conway (evidence of accident report); in April 1860 decided to develop JUNCTION as proper interchange, due to congestion at Conway. At times branch worked by horses (financial difficulties), certainly during winter of 1862; permanently loco-hauled by October 1863 when decided to ease curve at junction (all from Carnarvon). Re-sited on deviation 1 November 1897 (co ½ Rly Times 12 February 1898); still open.

LLANELLY

LLANELLY [op 11 October 1852 (T 12th); LLANELLY until February 1966 (letter DM Cardiff to Clinker 31 May 1967 cited Cl paper); still open. In Llandovery table in Brad was L HIGH STREET 1877/8 to 1906/7.

LLANELLY [Llanelly; GW] first in Brad April 1853 (see note with L DOCK, below); beside South Wales, later GW, station; needed because Llanelly was standard gauge line, South Wales broad; service diverted over direct route through main station 1 September 1879 by which time this had been absorbed into latter.

LLANELLY DOCK [Llanelly; GW] op 1 May 1850; clo 1 September 1879 (S Wales 1st) – trains diverted to main station. Company report prepared for meeting 6 June 1853 said line between Dock and South Wales station had been brought into use ‘so recently’ that benefits (presumably financial) had not yet had time to show (RAIL 1110/253).

The first passenger ‘station’ here was to south-west of that shown in existing works, roughly where the GW Atlas shows a goods station; OS maps later show the company’s loco & carriage department there. Whether there was a passenger ‘station’ in the goods depot or passengers were dropped nearby is not known – the original station seems to have been hemmed in to the north by the New Dafen River, running between station and Dafen Road and a point to the west of it would seem to have been more convenient since the 1880 OS map shows no way of crossing the river east of here. When the service was extended to the GW line, trains at first went along a line closer to the docks, west of the one shown on Map 82 (article by Nigel Wassell, Bulletin of the South West Wales Archaeology Society, October 2007). On 14 May 1861 they ordered a passenger platform to be made adjoining the road (Llan). The likeliest site for this would have been at the end of Dafen Road; this might represent a re-siting for the greater convenience of passengers or because there was no longer room in the locomotive area or it might represent a proper provision for passengers previously just deposited at the roadside. The only other possible site would have been near St David’s Crossing but there was no obvious road which it could have adjoined, and a station there would not have made much sense, being so close to the GW station (Paul Reynolds from 25 inch OS, surveyed 1877/8, published 1880).

The date of the move to the station shown on map 82 is not known and the evidence presently available is somewhat contradictory. The minutes would suggest that the new station came into use late 1869/early 1870: on 16 June 1869 they directed that a station be constructed on the Morfa branch at Llanelly Dock; 15 July 1869 – plan of above approved; 11 November 1869 – passenger trains to pass over the Morfa Branch as soon as gates were erected at St David’s Crossing (Llan). However, it was already shown on the Morfa Branch in the 1867 Airey/Clearing House Junction Diagrams – though placed, incorrectly, at Copper Works Junction, where it would still be shown in 1870 and 1877. The diagrams also show the goods station apparently well west of the site given in the GW Atlas and in the sketch-maps accompanying the article cited and mysteriously the distance from Morfa Junction to the goods shed shrank from 20 chains in 1867 to 16 in 1870 but expanded again to 20 in 1877, when other minor changes were made. Was the 1867 inclusion anticipation of a move known to be under consideration? Was the diagram the product of some long-distance guesswork? Overall, this Diagram would seem best to be ignored as completely untrustworthy.

Initially in Brad as LLANELLY DOCK; became DOCK on extension of line to GW station and indexed under ‘D’ when index expanded to include all stations; after July 1867, before/with July 1869 became L DOCKS; gradually shed ‘S’. By November 1871 omitted from table, probably initially through lack of space; still lacked in it table even when changed layout would have allowed it; by September 1877 gone from index as well. At one time tables in Cambrian called it DOCK one way, L DOCKS the other.

LONDESBOROUGH ROAD – see Scarborough.

LONDON

Stations listed below are termini and major central area stations served by surface lines. Suburban and all Underground and Docklands stations are listed under their initial letters.

Early timetables tended just to have ‘LONDON’ or e.g. ‘EUSTON’ on its own. Hb 1862 had 12 entries, all ‘LONDON’; they were also provided with separate entries, such as ‘EUSTON’ ‘same as London’, under ‘E’.

BISHOPS ROAD – see PADDINGTON.

BISHOPSGATE  [GE] op 1 July 1840 (co n T 29 June) when line extended from Devonshire Street; op as SHOREDITCH, renamed by Act of 27 July 1846 (JS); trains diverted to Liverpool Street 1 November 1875 (co n T 28 October); some use for relief trains until about 1879; {map 107}. Brad, e.g. 1846-7, had B WITHOUT in Colchester table and B NORTH in 1873 (probably incorrect additions, JS); in 1840 just LONDON and 1841 on just S or B.

Ticket platform only mentions seen, both calling it Shoreditch: Morning Chronicle 22 September 1846; day before prosecution for leaving train here. London Evening Standard 10 February 1847 – failure to catch eloping pair.

BLACKFRIARS  [SE] op 11 January 1864 (L; co n T 9th line); replaced by Waterloo East, 1 January 1869 (co n T 23 December 1868); {map 106}.

BLACKFRIARS BRIDGE  [LCD] op 1 June 1864 (co n T 30 May); clo 1 October 1885 (Thursday) (Cl); {map 106}.

BRICKLAYERS ARMS  [SE] op 1 May 1844 (T 2nd). See article by Canon Fellows, RM 1944, pp 209 – 212, 272 – 274: aim was to provide station nearer West End, to which omnibus connections would be provided; would also save SE and Croydon companies need to pay tolls they considered too high, for using the Greenwich’s line to London Bridge. Diversion of traffic caused the Greenwich to reduce tolls. Thus the Croydon stopped using after 31 March 1845. SE continued to use; services from London Bridge and here were joined at ‘New Cross’ (letter T 1 August 1845) – was this writer’s version of North Kent Junction, or point further out? At end of October 1846 ordinary SE passenger service withdrawn. They continued to attach passenger coach to 11 p.m. goods from B to A for people catching morning steamers from Folkestone and Dover; this last in tt January 1851.

Meanwhile, SE had tried to catch local traffic: from 1 September 1849 a shuttle service was run to North Kent Junction to connect with Greenwich and Kent trains (use detailed in SE co n ½ T 20 September, which refers, not entirely accurately, to B A branch being ‘opened’ now to ‘the junction station with the North Kent line’).

21 August 1850 shunting engine hit a wagon into a pillar, bringing down roof (T 22nd). SE notice, (T 22nd) said from ‘this day’ they would cease to use B A, report in next day’s paper confirmed had done. Probably end of North Kent Junction. Reappeared in 12 November 1850 tt in South Eastern Gazette – not present 5 November tt. Last in Brad 1852; present in April ts South Eastern Gazette – no tts seen later that year. Special train carrying hearse containing the Duke of Wellington’s body from Walmer to Lying-in-State at Chelsea Hospital and a select group of mourners arrived here in the early hours of 11 November 1852 (London Evening Standard 11th). Various press items show that clearly goods only by then.

1856: special first-class trains from here so people from West End could go to Sandhurst 3 May (to see Queen lay foundation stone of Wellington College) and 2 June for fete there (co notices T 1, 28 May).

Early excursions. Christmas Day 1856 to/from principal SE stations (co n T 15 December). 1857: Easter ‘Holydays’ afternoon trips to Blackheath (SE n T April) and regular weekly Monday morning trips, third-class only, to Ramsgate and Margate for 3s 6d (including admission to Tivoli Gardens) from 4 May to end October, by when Folkestone and Dover also possible destinations. Seems to have been end of series – SE’s Christmas 1857 excursions from London Bridge;

7 March 1863: special took Prince of Wales to Gravesend to collect Princess Alexandra, his future wife, and brought pair back to Blackheath (JS). Various press items show that clearly goods only by then.

Reop for excursions, Sundays only, 12 June 1932 (T 10th); last Sunday 10 September 1939 (based on introduction of emergency tt on 11th); {map 105}.

BROAD STREET  [NL] op 1 November 1865 (T 2nd); station demolished and replaced by temporary platform 1985; clo 30 June 1986 (RM September – last train Friday 27 June). Often B S (CITY) in Brad and thus LNW co tt 1874.

CANNON STREET  [SE] op 1 September 1866 (co n T 28 August); clo at 3 p.m. on 5 June 1926 (Saturday) for electrification (T 3rd); reop 28 June 1926 (SR sig instruction 17); clo 5 August 1974 for track remodelling, reop 9 September 1974 (BR pamphlets); still open.

CHARING CROSS  [SE] op 11 January 1864 (co n T 9th) from temporary platform in Villiers Street for Greenwich and Mid-Kent services only; main line services 1 May 1866 (co n 22 April); clo 5 December 1905 after roof collapse, reop 19 March 1906 (RM April); clo 24 July 1993 for track remodelling, reop 16 August 1993 (RM July – planned dates); still open.

Ticket platform probably from opening: Illustrated Times (3 December 1863), describing work in progress here, referred to ‘unsightly’ covering of ticket platform. Only other mention seen: London Evening Standard 19 April 1865: train carrying King of the Belgians stopped at ticket platform in Charing Cross Road to let bigwigs get in.

CITY THAMESLINK op 29 May 1990 as ST PAULS T; renamed 30 September 1991 (AB chron); still open.

DEVONSHIRE STREET MILE END  [EC] op 20 June 1839 (T 14th, 19th); services extended to Shoreditch (later Bishopsgate) on 1 July 1840 but this station kept open; closed between 16 May 1841, when an accident which occurred at Ilford was partly blamed on a policeman who had been dealing with passengers who had boarded here without tickets, and 8 June 1841, when Lt. Col. Sir F. Smith’s report of that date said it had since been ‘given up’. Bell’s Life in London (13 June) said it had been closed and replaced by new station in Cambridge Road MILE END. Closed at the end of May?; later Globe Road just to west (maps in P Kay, GE in Town & Country, part 3, Irwell 1996); [map 107].

EUSTON [LNW] op 20 July 1837 (co n T 19th); still open. Early indiscriminately L, E and E SQUARE in LNW co tts; E-GROVE in Times 10 April 1838 description of opening of an extension to line. Brad had just L in tables until 1844, though quoted hackney fares from Euston in 1840.

FENCHURCH STREET [GE]: op advertised for 2 August 1841, but actual use began 29 July (T 2 August/Observer), when service extended from Minories; see 1849 March 31*; clo 22 July 1994, for remodelling and resignalling (LTS Rail pamphlet); reop 5 September 1994, earlier than planned (BLN 742.19); still open.

HOLBORN VIADUCT [LCD] op 2 March 1874 (co n T 2M); clo 29 January 1990 (last train Friday 26th) (T 27th).

HOLBORN VIADUCT [LL] op 1 August 1874 (T 4th) as SNOW HILL; renamed 1 May 1912 (bbt 25 April); clo 1 June 1916 (Thursday) (RCG); [map 106]. Just HOLBORN LOW LEVEL in SEC wtt, e.g. 1916.

KINGS CROSS: [GN] services opened 7 August 1850 (T 8th) to a temporary station usually shown as MAIDEN LANE, though GN called it K C; line extended to permanent K C 14 October 1852 (T 15th); also used as Mid terminus from 1 February 1858 to 1 October 1868*; still open.

Main line local station added 18 December 1874, later absorbed into main (KC).

* = article by PJ Wilde in Midland Record no 24 claims that Midland had a separate station, north of the Regents Canal, between the GN goods depot and potato station. A Midland station is certainly shown on the maps included in the article but this is much more likely to have been for goods of some description. All contemporary evidence supports the accepted view that the Midland used the GN station. In addition, the site shown would have been so inconvenient that one would have expected hostile comment in both the railway and public press, but none has been seen. A notice issued by the Midland in the Bedfordshire Times 7 July 1868 said that main line trains would continue to run from the GN station at King’s Cross until further notice (FG Cockman, The Railway Age in Bedfordshire, Bedfordshire Historical Record Society vol 53, p 61, 1974). Also see article in Midland Record no. 28 by S Duckworth, which supports goods only use of station concerned.

Ticket platform: see HOLLOWAY.

K C YORK ROAD: op early 1866 (perhaps 1 January) (see R. Maund, Chron October 2015, April 2016); new station 4 March 1878 (T 6th); clo 8 November 1976 (CI); briefly reop 3rd to 5th March 1977 (CI).

K C SUBURBAN op 1 February 1878 (L); incorporated into main station 5 March 1977.

K C FUNERAL STATION (non-tt, but advertised): train for consecration of Cemetery ran 10 July 1861 (Friends of National Railway Museum Newsletter, Summer 2000); op to funeral parties 11 July 1861. Initially operated daily; from 1 August 1861, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays; from 14 February 1862. Fridays only; from 31 August 1862 Sundays (now allowed for working men’s funerals) and Wednesdays, with occasional variations; from 1 January 1863 only occasional trains; last known ran 3 April 1863. Station was north of main and trains with coffins and mourners were run to Cemetery at Colney Hatch. See M Dawes, LRR, October 1999.

Other non-tt use: excursions to the Great Exhibition of 1851 were run to the GN goods depot and Midland coal depot (AA Jackson, London’s Termini, p 60).

KINGS CROSS THAMESLINK op 11 July 1983 (15th formal) (RM September p 378) as K C MIDLAND (in tt as K C M City Line); renamed 16 May 1988 (BR leaflet); clo 9 December 2007 (last train 8th), replaced by platforms under St Pancras International (RM February 2008).

LIVERPOOL STREET: [GE] op 2 February 1874 (T 2nd) for some suburban trains and 1 November 1875 (co n T 28 October) for full use, including those previously terminating at Bishopsgate LL; [Met] used platform in main station from 1 February 1875 until 12 July 1875, when it opened own station, but connection used for excursions until 1904, removed 1907 (London’s Termini); clo on 24 April 1993 by bomb which destroyed most of glass roof, reop 26th (RM October); still open.

LONDON BRIDGE

London & Greenwich: see 1835 June for pre-opening trials nearby; from 10 October 1836 passengers bought tickets here and walked along line to Bermondsey Street (no station) to board trains (co n T 3rd); station came into use 1 December 1836 though formal opening did not occur until 14 December (co n T 13th).

London & Croydon: op own part 5 June 1839.

Later: July 1844 – station made Joint; L & Greenwich and SE used original L & Croydon part on north, L & Croydon and L & Brighton used original L & Greenwich plus a new part.

2 August 1850 – Joint station divided (SE co ½ T 17 September). According to T 2 August 1850 LBSC and SE had temporary stations to cover period of demolition of old joint station and building of new separate ones. LBSC described as being at end of area being cleared and having all necessary booking offices and waiting rooms, SE as abutting onto Tooley Street.

3 January 1851 – separate SE (low level section; arrival platform in use from 9 December 1850) and LBSC stations. Through platforms added 11 January 1864, with opening of line to Charing Cross.

Amalgamated into of office of station 1926 by SR. Still open.

Sometimes called 'KEY STREET' early (Brad until 1844, Tuck 1843, co notices in The Times issued by London & Croydon; but not seen thus in SE tables, where it was just L at first). Later ’City Terminus’ often added to name. London & Brighton/LBSC tables just LONDON until 1844.

Ticket platforms: from Croydon: South Eastern Gazette Tuesday 18 May 1847: on Thursday 2 o’clock up train was unable to get further than ticket platform; passengers had to walk to station. According to diagram with Railway Commissioners’ Accident Reports of 1850 in December of that year station was a long one on the extreme SW of the lines, just before divergence of the two sets of lines.

North Kent line Morning Chronicle 25 June 1850: accident yesterday. According to 1850 map was about half the length of the above, on the North Kent up line, also just before the divergence.

LUDGATE HILL [LCD] op 21 December 1864 (co n T 21st); temporary station replaced by permanent 1 June 1865 (L; co n T 2nd – is now open); clo early Saturday afternoon 2 March 1929 (T 4th).

MALTON ROAD [NE]: the only clear reference to this ‘station’ is in a footnote to co n Yorks Gazette 29 April 1865 for opening of line from Market Weighton to Beverley on 1 May. This says market trains (Saturdays, alternate Thursdays) would no longer call here ‘as heretofore’ so last use would have been Saturday 29 April 1865. Likeliest site would have been where York to Malton road crossed line west of Stockton (later Warthill).

Possible earlier reference to this (or nearby site) concerned use of farm hereabouts (Mr. Wilberforce’s) for trials of steam ploughs and reaping machines on 4 August 1857 as part of Yorkshire Agricultural Society’s Show (main part at Bootham): according to Yorks Gaz (1, 6 August) special trains were run to and from the ‘Implement Trial Field’. However, ibid (26 July, 6 August 1862) said trains for similar event, at / near same place, would run to and from Stockton, about ¾ mile from trial ground; this might have been the actual arrangement in 1857 since an established station would have been better able to cope with large numbers who attended – or had a wayside ‘halt’ been tried and found wanting?

MANCHESTER [map 52].

At first timetables often just had ‘M’; fuller names appeared gradually, apparently initially only being added where confusion might occur. Brad 1840 had M in railway tables but specified Liverpool Road, Oldham Road and Fairfield Road (= Travis Street) in table of hackney fares. As a result it is impossible for later writers safely to be able to distinguish between what was intended to be a station’s name and helpful information about where it was situated.

M AIRPORT op late evening 16 May 1993 (BLN 707); still open.

M ART TREASURES [MSJA] op 5 May 1857 (assumed from date of Exhibition opening, T 6'''); Exhibition last day was 15 October 1857. Main service was shuttle from London Road in connection with trains from London, Oxford, Birmingham, Shrewsbury, Crewe, Macclesfield and Sheffield; also a through service from Chester, connecting there with GW services – see Walton Junction. See Manchester Courier (2'') for full details of railway services, which included one from LY and East Lancs via the Ardwick branch once the shilling days were available. Later use as M EXHIBITION (below).

M CENTRAL [CLC]: temporary station op 9 July 1877 (Mid); replaced by permanent 1 July 1880 (LNW Officers 21087); clo 5 May 1969 (BR press release 7/135/1683 that day). Both had entrances in Windmill Street; permanent slightly south-east of temporary (line NE-SW here) (GN II p 78; later map evidence E Bredee).

M CRICKET & FOOTBALL (non-tt) – see M EXHIBITION.

M DOCKS [LY] (non-tt): op 11 April 1898 as M RACECOURSE; certainly used 21 to 23 November 1901, last flat race meeting; perhaps used for National Hunt racing 1 & 2 January 1902 (race); ‘P’ in hb 1904 and 1912 as M D, for general excursions until 1939 (AB); [shown IA].

M DUCIE BRIDGE (a) [LY] op late 1855 (LY); merged with M Victoria 1877 (LY).

M DUCIE BRIDGE (b) [LY] first used 30 August 1879 for special trains, as often as required, to Heaton Park for Grand Review and Sham Fight (co n Manchester Times 23''); op fully 1 September 1879 (ibid 6''); clo 30 March 1884 (Sunday) (co n Manchester Cour 25'’ – ‘after Saturday’ 29'’ trains to Victoria). Built to provide temporary extra capacity whilst M Victoria was being rebuilt.

M EXCHANGE [LNW] op 30 June 1884 (LNW Officers 26313 – ‘part’ opened) – probably ‘part’ applied to some of station facilities since all LNW trains booked to leave from here (co weekly notice); completely op 4 May 1885 (Brad Sh Eng 1886); connected to M Victoria in 1929 and management unified; old Exchange portion closed 5 May 1969 (BR press release 7/135/1683 that day).
M EXHIBITION [MSJA] used (non-tt) as E for Royal Agricultural Society July 1869 and 1897 (MSJA). For Queen Victoria's Golden Jubilee first in Brad May 1887; last October 1887; Prince and Princess of Wales arrived here by special train to open exhibition on 3 May (Manch Cour 4th); also later use 8 November by party of foreign ambassadors (ibid 9th). Also used from ? as OLD TRAFFORD CRICKET GROUND/ O T C & FOOTBALL GROUND (and variations); in Brad summers 1862-6; advert for services to and from the CRICKET GROUND STATION ‘on each day of the Matches at Old Trafford’ on back of Lancashire County Cricket Club’s scorecards 1926 (E Bredée); in 1931 permanently opened as WARWICK ROAD (see under ‘W’). Some at least of shorter usages seem to have been from temporary platforms near Warwick Road site.

M HOPE STREET: shown ‘P’ in 1883 hb –presumably parcels or error.

M LIVERPOOL ROAD [LM] op 17 September 1830; clo 4 May 1844 when service diverted to Victoria (CI). Co tt for March 1831 had M in timetable but referred elsewhere to company’s station in Liverpool Road (explanatory?).

M LONDON ROAD [MSJA] op 1 August 1849 (GC), renumbered 20 September 1954 as part of PICCADILLY, platforms demolished 15 September 1958 and trains diverted to rest of that station.

Special ‘station’ for the Art Treasures Exhibition (see above), to provide shuttle service, thus enabling ordinary traffic to run without interruption (Manchester Courier 2 May 1857); connected to further end of MS&L arrival platform.

Tickets vary – include: M. U. F. C. HALT; M. C. F.; OLD TRAFFORD FOOTBALL GROUND (DM).

M VICTORIA [LY] op 1 January 1844 from Yorkshire, 4 May 1844 from Liverpool (T 10th); briefly clo for rebuilding, reop 16 August 1993 (RM October); still open. At first Brad called it HUNTS BANK in table, V in note about refreshment rooms; in July 1845 it was V in Preston & Wyre table, H B in Leeds table; report of inspection on 3 May (for opening from Liverpool) described this as new station at Hunts Bank recently named Victoria; however co op n Manch 3rd, dated 14 December 1843 clearly calls it VICTORIA station at Hunt’s Bank near the Exchange.

Ticket platforms:

Cheetham Hill: only reference seen: fatal accident to L&Y man mending telegraph wires (Manchester Evening News 23 September 1887).

Newton Heath: on part of Manchester Loop Line between Victoria and Thorp’s Bridge. Co ½ Manchester Courier 15 August 1878 described line as recently opened for passengers, New Openings Brad gave 1 August 1878. MERTHYR TYDFIL

MERTHYR [TV] op 21 April 1841 (Merlin 17th, 24th); clo 1 August 1877 (Wednesday) (Western Mail 2nd), service diverted to GW station. M ROAD [Vale of Neath] temporary station, with road connection to Merthyr, op 24 September 1851; {Hirwain – Gelli Tarw physical junction}; replaced by > M TYDFIL [GW] op 2 November 1853 (GW); original replaced 1971 by one on new site in John Street; T added 12 May1980; re-sited 200 yards short of original, in Court Street 14 January 1996 (Monmouthshire Railway Society Journal, September 1996, p 27); still open. Aot M HIGH STREET in some tables – at first probably to help travellers find right station after diversion: GW tables were last to have H added and first to lose again; some kept to 1927 (Brad); also used in LNW co tts, e.g. 1883.

Ticket platform. only references seen: Western Daily Press 18 May 1874 – on 16th train of loaded coal wagons broke in two in tunnel; 22 rolled back and hit Brecon & Merthyr train standing at ticket platform. At BoT enquiry (ibid 23 May) said that train had moved off and nearly in station; also, ten or a dozen passengers had got off at ticket platform (authorised alighting?). Ticket platform on both sides extends for a very long distance outside the station without any shelter (Western Mail 13 July 1877).

METHIL [NB] op 5 May 1887 (Glasgow Herald 6th); see 1921 April/May; clo 10 January 1955 (T 28 December 1954). Later football excursions – certainly 18 January, 1 February and 22 March 1858 (Rhy Obs March, May); these arrived in goods yard (too large for passenger station); not repeated in later years since Methil was then relegated from Scottish First Division (The Methil Branch ..., Kingdom of Fife Railway Preservation Society and Lower Methil Heritage Centre, 1996). Also, non-tt workers’ services from Thornton Junction via Cameron Bridge to KIRKLAND YARD and METHIL EAST (for docks); about 1910 to after World War II. See A. Hajducki, M. Jodeluk & A. Simpson, The Leven & East of Fife Railway, Oakwood, 2013. This book also refers to short-lived services pre-1914 to temporary station on Lochty branch and use of Leven and Lochty lines for dropping off Regular and Territorial soldiers at various points on training exercises; no exact sites mentioned. Also see Section 4.7.

M JUNCTION [LY] op 16 January 1860 (co n Leeds 14th); clo 4 October 1943 (LNW Record).

METHLEY NORTH [Mid] line through here op 1 July 1840. Most of the sources cited in that note say there was a station here; co n Leeds (25 July 1840) for start of York to Leeds service on 27 July said all trains from York would go via Methley, which only makes sense if there was a station here; on 19 August 1840 Lord Mexborough returned to Methley Park by the North Midland Railway (no station specified, but one likely to have been if other than Methley) (ibid 22nd); item in York Herald (10 October 1840) in reporting that trains from Leeds to Selby were still going by the old route and it was proposed that all should go via new route (this came into effect 9 November 1840). However, those trains were running through Fairburn, Castleford and Methley. However, Methley is not in Allen’s tt for 24 August 1840 and first clear tt evidence comes from co tt of 6 April 1841. Possible explanations: built but not used at first; short-lived early station, brought back into use later; always in use but from 27 July 1840 only used by trains to Selby (would explain how it came to be missing item, 1 January 1841, since this referred to NM use); mainly for use of Lord Mexborough (Mid records show that this station was ‘by arrangement’ and he would have been most likely to be other party to this).
NORTH added 25 September 1950 (Mid); clo 16 September 1957 (RM November).
M SOUTH [Methley Joint] op 13 May 1869 (co n Bradford Daily Telegraph 10th); SOUTH added 25 September 1950 (BR circ); clo 7 March 1960 (RM April).

METHVEN [Col]
METHVEN op 1 January 1858 (Glasgow Herald 8th / Perth Courier); see 1921 April/ May – was M JUNCTION then available to public instead? – item complaining about difficulty of access to Trinity College Glenalmond suggests not – said no road from Junction to there, Dundee Courier 5 May. Clo 27 September 1937 (Perthshire Advertiser 8th).
M JUNCTION op 21 May 1866; became unadvertised exchange 1889; 27 September 1937 took over role of closed branch station; clo 1 October 1951 (BR notice Strathearn Herald 22 September). HALT at clo according to RM and thus 1938 hb but not Brad or LMS tts, where only METHVEN after closure of above station. M J in clo notice.

METROCENTRE op 3 August 1987 (RM October); GATESHEAD M C until renamed MetroCentre 17 May 1993 tt (AB Chron), Metrocentre 23 May 2010 tt; still open.

MEXBOROUGH [GC] see below note, based on Stewart Smith, Chron January 2020; also see Andy Overton, Chron May 2020.
M JUNCTION op 1 January 1850? - first in Brad based January 1850, also tt for 1 January 1850 in Sheffield Independent 29 December 1849 but not in December 1849 tts; replaced 30 chains east by > MEXBOROUGH on line op 3 April 1871; Yorkshire Post (8th) said new station would be shortly erected. Exact date of opening not found, but at inquest on Joseph Smith, killed in accident 10 February 1872, cause was attributed in part to inadequacy of station and it was said new station was being built (Sheffield Independent 14th) and Manchester Evening News 7 March 1872 referred to ‘Old MEXBOROUGH’ in item about accident 5 March, implying that new then in use; thus late February/ early March would seem to be likely. Initially M NEW in Brad (to advise passengers rather than as part of name?); still open. Hb showed both OLD and NEW as ‘P’ up to and including 1890; in 1895 ‘P’ shown only for NEW.

Note: 1854 OS map shows MEXBOROUGH JUNCTION station west of town at junction with curve going SW to Midland line; it also shows a ‘MEXBROUGH’ station to the east of the ‘U’ band of the river and to the south of it, where it might have been sited to provide access to the ferry to the town. This suggests that there were originally (or from an early time) two stations here, not distinguished in the tts; if this is so, the eastern one might have been the OLD one. The 1893 map shows ‘NEW’ about half way between two on north bank of river; by then the curves built in 1865 (south westward to Midland line to Swinton) and 1874 (south eastward from original line through junction station) would have made M JUNCTION redundant. It would certainly have made sense to have had some sort of stop here, given the distance of the junction station from the town. Wikepedia items refer to M (FERRY BOAT) HALT but state that no clear source has been cited; if it existed it is most unlikely that this would have been thus named – this looks like much later practice read back into earlier times. The only press reference so far found that gives support was in Sheffield Independent 7 and 14 August 1858 which carried an advert for sale of Ferry Boat Inn, Mexborough, possessing ‘every facility of access to the South Yorkshire and Midland Railways’. ‘Ferry Boat Crossing’ mentioned in account of accident 21 May 1868, when a train clearly not stopping here ploughed through a flock of sheep being taken for a wash in the river; no mention of nearby station in account but this not conclusive since would not have been central to account. [Local press seen otherwise not helpful. Bradford Observer 8 October 1853 reported collision at M Junction 29 September 1853 (as did other papers, probably common source) which shows that was being used by passenger trains. Derbyshire Courier 11 February 1860 described accident at M ‘station’ on 4th when girl killed by 1.10 from Doncaster to Sheffield train which did not stop there (she had gone there to collect a parcel for her father, so clearly not a ‘halt’). Nearest tts available: Intelligentle June 1858 shows that relevant train did not stop at M Junction; Bradshaw reprint February 1863 shows 1.30 non-stop; suggests M J and M station same. Clearly further research needed.]

* = GW H says opened 11th; however, T and others said would open on ‘Monday’ and Monday was one of the standard opening days for halts; mid-week openings were rare, though not unknown. Perhaps last minute delay?

MICKLEY [NE] first used, non-tt, as ELTRINGHAM(E) COLLERY (NC); first in Brad November 1859 for Saturdays only market service from Newcastle; since this terminated at Mickley, thus compelling reference in tt, it may be that other trains stopped here and had been doing so before 1859; by closure, also one each way Tuesdays; last in Brad June 1915; [Prudhoe – Stocksfield].

Items:

Working timetables sometimes include extra stops between stations. The following should be seen only as examples.

West Highland Line

Provided many, to ‘uplift’ or set down schoolchildren and for ‘domestic purposes’ (wives shopping?). The former probably varied as children of railwaymen in isolated areas came of school age or left school; the latter may well have been used continuously for many years. The following have been arranged in line order, with wtt in which they are known to have been shown and mileage (mp); mileage of Mallaig line stations taken from Fort William. In some cases stop only shown one way. These would have been the rough equivalents of the ‘provision train’ stops shown in Section 5 under ‘1957’.

Main line:

Glen Douglas – Arrochar & Tarbet (mp 16½); 6 October 1947, 17 June 1951; schools.

1954: stop at lengthman’s cottage to pick up schoolchildren, access by ladder, date unknown (BBC programme on line, 1960).

Tyndrum – Bridge of Orchy (mp 44½); summer 1962, winter 1962-3, 5 May 1973; domestic, Thursdays only.

Rannoch – Corrour (mp 74½ according to wtt, assumed misprint); winter 1962-3; domestic, Saturdays only.

Corrour – Tulloch (mp 70); winter 1962/3, 5 May 1973; domestic, Saturdays only.

Mallaig line: 296
Lochelside – Glenfinnan (13½); 5 May 1973; domestic, Saturdays only.
Glenfinnan – Lochailort (19½); summer 1962; winter 1962-3; schools weekdays, domestic Saturdays.
Lochailort – Arisaig; at least two stops involved – summer 1962 and winter 1962-3 show ‘short of mp 26’ pick up schools Mondays and set down Fridays (weekly boarders?), mp 25½ domestic Saturdays only.

MILLERSTON [Cal] (non-tt)
MILLERSTON Accident 27 June 1878 when train too fast into station and hit buffers at Glasgow Buchanan Street. 3 miles 30 chains from Millerston to buffer stops. It was a special carrying boys from industrial school at Millerston (BoT report, Glasgow Herald 31 July 1878). This was an annual treat but how far rail travel was involved in other years is not known. Was there some sort of arrangement for receiving boys, as at Farningham?
MILLERSTON RIFLE RANGE: ironically only reference so far seen is in Caledonian wt October 1883 Alterations, saying that stops to set down Volunteers would be discontinued – was use summer only? Judging from site of rifle range shown on OS surveyed 1855-60, revised 1895 (Caledonian Books reprint) stop would have been at/near later Robroyston. Press reference to use of range suggest several brief meetings each year so railway provision would probably only usually show up in special notices. Almost certainly two used same site: a path led directly across the rifle range from school to railway some 350 yards away. Later maps indicate that a new path led from school to Robroyston station after its opening in 1898.

MITCHAM [LBSC] op 22 October 1855* (T 23°); clo 1 June 1997, for conversion to Croydon Tramlink – see Section 6. * T 22 October carried two op notices, one detailing service from London Bridge, other from Waterloo. T 26° had notice (dated 25°) saying service from London Bridge had been suspended until 1 November. No indication found on whether service from Waterloo also affected. Theoretically could have continued since accident occurred near ‘the village of Beddington’ on Croydon side of Mitcham. However mention in Brad Sh and fact that line was being operated as a whole by contractor (GP Bidder) makes this unlikely. Not confirmed that line did reopen 1 November; perhaps they waited for request on driver, held 5 November (T 67), at which jury endorsed Colonel Yolland’s recommendation of 20 mph limit.

M BROOMFIELD: according to D&C 13 there was a temporary station (1866-7) just north of Scottish North Eastern (later Caledonian) Broomfield Road Junction station, north of Montrose in attempt (successful) by the Montrose & Bervie to get charges for use of main station reduced. However this is not recorded by Clinker or Col Cobb and references in Montrose ... Advertiser suggest it probably arises from casual way in which names were used; furthermore dates given there do not match. All notices seen prior to 31 May 1867 show that co's trains were running to Montrose. Issue of 3 May 1867 had item on co ½ in which it was said that unless satisfactory concessions could be obtained from the Caledonian, from 1 June all its trains would stop at 'Broomfield' except for one each way, first day, third class only, to meet legal requirements (under Gladstone's Act). 31 May: article that had gained no concessions and notice which began by specifying 'Broomfield Junction' as point beyond which passengers would not normally be booked and later referred to temporary trains from 'Broomfield'. Nowhere was there any reference to a separate station; indeed, at the hall-yearly one speaker had said that many were already walking from the Broomfield station. Exact date of resumption of normal business not known. Paper of 30 August 1867 included September tt which showed full use; according to Stonehaven Journal 15 August the matter had been settled at a meeting on the 7th.

MORECAMBE
Midland
Based on information provided by R Bond and J Gough.

Op 12 June 1848 (Lancaster 17th). Short section opened because Poulton was bathing-place for Lancaster people. The company’s½ yearly said ‘A temporary station has been completed at Poulton’ (Lancaster 2 September) – did this mean no station earlier?incomplete station earlier, now completed?

An account of the line was written by T Edmondson in The Poulton Railway Companion, Lancaster, 1848. This can be dated to atime after opening of the line but before opening of the North Western Hotel on 11 September 1848. This shows that station was thenin Northumberland Street – station or stop there from out of town? (No obvious alternative site). Edmondson also mentioned anintermediate station between Lancaster and Poulton-le-Sands, beneath an arch of the Lancaster & Carlisle [later part of LNW] bridgeover the River Lune; no other information known – short-lived ‘halt’?

For its earliest appearance in Brad the table is headed ‘Morecambe branch’ but POULTON appears in the table; renamed fromPOULTON-LE-SANDS to MORECAMBE (August 1850 t).

Main station replaced by temporary station 4 November 1906, that by permanent during the day of 23 March 1907, after departure of9.50 a.m. to Lancaster.

Clo Tuesday 8 February 1994 (last train Monday) (BLN 722-4/51 pp 26, 40, 57, 103); new op 6 June 1994 about ¾ mile east, on site ofstation clo 1907 (RM October). Became M PROMENADE 2 June 1992 (Rly Gaz 23 May), reverted 6 May 1968 (Mid). Still open.

The Wooden Pier was brought into use for goods in 1850. The earliest reference to its use for passengers is for 12 July 1850 but thatwas only for landing people from a steamer and the earliest reference to trains in connection was in a notice for June 1851 and thatdid not specify that trains ran onto the pier (local press). Brad October 1853 has note about sailings to Belfast on Wednesdays andSaturdays and from there Mondays and Thursdays and says that steamer will not sail from Morecambe until after arrival of passenger train; since only 5 minutes allowed for transfer, suggests trains ran onto wooden pier. This was renamed M HARBOUR by circular dated 15 December 1854.

BoT letter dated 5 June 1855, about level crossings, says lines to timber jetty had been in use for some time, those to pier expected to be completed in a few months; only goods traffic mentioned as using these but does not specifically say ‘goods only’. First reference in Brad for replacement M PIER on stone jetty was August 1856. Thereafter appearance erratic. Initial explanation is that had begun service without BoT permission since it was only a short extension of existing line; service started only ‘a short time’ before 25 August 1856, date on letter to BoT asking for clarification. When told permission was necessary, service stopped. At first failed inspection. BoT finally sent permission to open on 30 October 1856. Soon removed from ordinary table in Brad but information in steamer sailings section implied continued use – one complication was that sailings were dependent on tide and times varied from day to day. Use ceased with effect from 1 September 1904, on opening of Heysham (Cl).

MOTHERWELL [Cal] (map 16)

First station here [Wishaw & Coltneys], was at second bridge across Merry Street; side street Pollock Street here later. It was used for a special to Linlithgow to see Queen Victoria making her first visit to Scotland, 13 September 1842; this started with two passenger wagons and collected coal wagons full of people on its way. Op to public 8 May 1843 (see 1835 C) > Caledonian’s Clydesdale Junction line opened to here 1 June 1849 and had station off Brandon Street, at what was later Melville Drive. Presumably W&C station now closed since Caledonian worked its trains and Brad referred to it as M JUNCTION; also thus Murray 1852 and Cumnor 1860, but not Cal co tt 1859. Brad gradually shed JUNCTION from different tables in the 1880s.

On 1 April 1868 the line to Lesmahagow opened (Hamilton Chronicle 4th). M BRIDGE was opened on this line 4 February 1871 in Clyde Street (later renamed Hamilton Road). This is supported by Brad. At first relevant table shows trains starting from Motherwell and taking 10 minutes to reach Ferniegair (would have involved reversal just after leaving Motherwell). November 1871 issue’s table shows trains starting from Holytown, calling at M BRIDGE and taking 5 minutes from there to Ferniegair. (Connections or coaches detached from trains from Glasgow?)

1 August 1885: 1849 and 1871 stations replaced by one in Muir Street (Motherwell Times 1 August 1885); paper said that it would be a relief to public to be rid of old station; still open.

Locally, stations usually known by name of street in which sited – a relief to public to be rid of old station; still open. Opened as ELTHAM; renamed E & M 1 January 1892 (bbl 26th), E for M before/with SEC co tt 1914, E & M 1922 (SR), M 26 September 1927 (L; RM ref October).

Excursion Platform(s): perhaps all information refers to one basic site, altered over time.

In existence before Newcastle Journal 27 June 1871 said in item about preparations for race meeting beginning today: during last week NE have excavated subway from main platform to further side of station, where excursion platform is situated, thus passing its course under main line; subway will be used for first time today, Shields Daily Gazette 8 June 1880 – reference in accident report; at south side. Newcastle Evening Chronicle 27 June 1887 – elaborate arrangements for race week, included notices in Forth Street from corner of Neville Street to direct people to excursion platform. Durham County Advertiser 8 July 1887 – Forth Street excursion platform Newcastle Central. Newcastle Chronicle 10 February 1894: details of changes nearing completion: include two subways from main area to new excursion platforms against the south wall of the station (sketch-map included).

Ticket platforms: Guard accused of pushing man off train at Morpeth; accusation made at ticket platform here (Newcastle Daily Chronicle 5 October 1865). Same as this? – derailment opposite Castle-junction signal-house just after train had left ticket platform opposite the old Castle (Yorkshire Post 5 December 1871).

NEWHAILES [NB]: [map 18]

Probably place served by occasional stop on a train from Musselburgh mentioned in report of accident on 21 July 1850. No station but a gate-keeper was stationed at level crossing concerned (Return). According to the report it was about half way up a three-quarter mile long incline which began about a third of a mile out from Musselburgh; from 1854 6 inch map of Newhailes area D. M. Cattanach suggests about ¼ mile east of point where branch, still following original route, crossed the main line. Dates? Op with branch to Fishersrow and clo when next opened?

NEWMARKET [GE] (see Chron 33 for sketch).

NEWMARKET op 4 April 1848 (co n T 3rd); clo 1 July 1850; reop 9 September 1850 (co n T 6th). Original was single platform, terminus, requiring reversal when line extended to Bury St Edmunds 1 April 1854. Temporary platform set up at Kennet end of tunnel evening of Thursday, 1 February 1865 following collapse of part of tunnel at Newmarket end (Express, London, 2nd); used until ? – debris not cleared by end of the week. Suffolk Chronicle 25 February said that new faults had been found since ‘partial’ reopening so extra caution and inspections in operation. When line to Ely opened 1 September 1879, a through island platform was opened, slightly lower level, overlapping and slightly east, connected to original by footbridge (GE Society Journal, October 1993, p 33). The through portion was replaced by much larger station on 7 April 1902 about ½ mile nearer Cambridge (Newmarket 12th). Still open. Ticket for N HL (to Sunbury, via South Tottenham, GE) (JB).

Original platform plus Third Class Platform (no protection from weather, added at same time as Warren Hill), kept for race specials from south until 1902 (GE Society Journal); after that still available for grooms accompanying horses (tickets exist).

N WERNER HILL (non-tt): race meetings; op 20 April 1885 (Newmarket 25th); used for traffic from north (RM November 1908); still in use October 1938, believed only horse specials after War (AB). [Newmarket – Kennett].

Note on effects of collapse of first Tay Bridge 28 December 1879.
Dundee People’s Journal Saturday 3 January 1880: interim it has been issued by NB. Depart Dundee Craig Pier; steamer to old Tayport station, then train stopping at old Leuchars Station and Leuchars Junction. Trains will also run between Tayport and Newport stations and passenger boats ply from Broughty Ferry. Presume passengers walked from main station to Pier.

Dundee Courier Monday 12 January 1880: notice from NB that after Saturday West Newport station would be closed and block telegraph cabins at both ends of bridge, Wormit and Newport would be closed. Would result in about a dozen railway servants being thrown out of present employment.

Dundee Advertiser Monday 2 February 1880: trains run daily East Newport to Tayport and back. Broughty Ferry Pier now reopened.
Dundee Courier 16 May 1880: NB co n for excursion to Edinburgh on 18th (Queen’s Birthday) – from Dundee Tay Bridge via Broughty Pier and East Newport.
Fife Herald 15 June 1887 has it headed for June 1887 that includes branch Leuchars Junction to East Newport (assumed stops at Old Leuchars and Tayport?); not seen in earlier tts, including those for June; was this service already running or new one preparatory to reopening of bridge? – former more likely.
Dundee Courier 24 June 1887: reopening of bridge on 20th, Old Tayport station closed again now?

NORMANTON [Mid/LY/NE Joint]: line op 1 July 1840. Earliest tt evidence is in Manchester & Leeds notice for 5 October 1840 opening (Leeds Mercury 3rd), where trains to and from Hebden Bridge were calling but arrangements were clearly primitive: item on opening (ibid 10th) said M&L were building a station ‘a little to the north of the junction’ for the exchange of carriages but made no mention of a North Midland structure – both companies to use same partly-built ‘station’? Looks suspiciously as if NM had intended exchange with Y&NM to be made at Wakefield / Oakenshaw (earliest ts suggest this was happening in some cases) and had not planned an interchange with M&L but were pushed into station by M&L; at a meeting at Wakefield on 12 November 1840 representatives of three companies (York & North Midland the third) agreed that the building of a joint station was desirable and on 11 December the NM Board agreed to this (NOM 1/2); co ½ ibid Leeds Mercury 6 March 1841 described Normanton as an ‘additional station’, the expense of which had not been foreseen (meeting previous August had made no mention); Leeds 29 August 1841 said a station for all three companies was then being built; The North Midland Railway Guide (R. Allen, Nottingham, 1842) said new station existed now for use of three companies. In earliest NM tts as N (Manchester & York Junction), perhaps suggesting that seen as interchange station rather than one for the locals. An agreement dated 23 January 1844 (NER 3/104) set up a joint committee to manage the station, though through lines remained NM property; RCH treated it as joint Mid, LY, NE station. Still open.

Emergency Second World War platforms on avoiding lines (on site of N Low), scheme completed June 1942, were used by diversions (East Coast trains sent via Tieside) until 1960s (JP McCrickard, Wartime Emergency Connections – the Northallerton Avoiding Line, in WW II, May and July 1992 issues).

N Town op 25 May 1852; clo 1 January 1856 (see N Low, below).
N Low op between 31 July 1854 (when Bill permitting its building was passed) and 2 September 1854 (GM’s speech implying it was in use). Brad December 1854 to December 1855 has trains on Leeds & Thirsk/Leeds Northern line calling at both TOWN and MAIN. New spur op 3 December 1855 allowed diversion of service from Stockton to main station here and then along main line to Thirsk (e.g. Leeds Intelligencer 8th); LOW then left as northern terminus of local service to Melmerby. Clo during afternoon of 9 February 1901 when new line allowed all trains to use main station (see R. Maund, Chron, October 2017). LOW not shown separately in hb before 1904, deleted by/before 1910a. After diversion, Brad referred to main station as N HL only for connection to Melmerby service.

Northumberland Park

Northumberland Park [GE] probably op April/October 1841 (see 1841); op as Marshall Lane, alias M L Tottenham. Probably closed for a few months end 1842/early 1843; still in Brad, notes, November 1842 (one train each way, 3.30 pm down, 2.30 pm up); trains involved did not stop at Tottenham or Edmonton; omitted December 1842 – 3.30 now stopped at Tottenham, 2.30 at Edmonton; back in tt June 1843, now in body of tt, some trains stopping at Edmonton and Tottenham as well as here. Renamed PARK 1 June 1852 (L), N P 1 July 1923 (hb ref 12th); still open. GE co tt 1914. P for North Tottenham.

N P Staff Platform (non-tt): London Transport workers; two platforms, one op 25 August 1968 with Victoria Line (probably staff training earlier), second 24 September 1995; second still in full use, former only one train per day.

Northwich 3 January 1863 confirms opening date and refers to temporary as station at Witton (shown somewhat east of town centre on map in Gazetteer of 1860s); note that CLC Portrait says original thought to have become goods – left as terminus of short branch. Non-tt. Temporary workers’ platform nearby to serve WD factory on Salt Branch No. 2 during W.W.I; factory op 1916 or 1917, clo. c.1919 (Alan Wilkinson, Scenes from the Past: 41 (Part One): Railways across mid-Cheshire, Foxline pp 10, 32).

Northwick Park [Met] op 28 June 1923 (Pall Mall Gazette 27th) as N P & Kenton; renamed 15 March 1937 (L); still open.

Northwood [GW] op 17 June 1935 (Cl 29); HALT. Would appear to have been summer only until 1942; co tt 1937-8 show ‘commences April 11th 1938’ and 6 October 1941 ‘commences March 30th 1942’; wtt supps give reopening dates for 3 April 1939 and 7 April 1941; co it beginning 5 October 1942 includes a few without restriction, others not to call until spring. Clo 9 September 1963 (T 9th); {Beadley – Arley}.

NORTHWOOD

London:

NORTHWOOD [Met/GC] op 1 September 1887 (L; co ½ RAIL 1117/58: line) by Met; GC use began 15 March 1899; electrification meant line had to be quadrupled with new lines here to east of original so station had to be moved to these (quadrapling completed 17 June 1962 – station perhaps moved earlier) (S. Smith, Chron July 2014); still open.

N HILLS [Met/LNE] op 13 November 1893 (T 11th); still open.

NORTON near Doncaster [LY]; line op 6 June 1848, nd, September 1848 (Topham); clo 10 March 1947 (CI).

NORTON near Runcomb [Birkenhead]: trains first shown in tt March 1852; clo 1 September 1952 (RM October). Runcomb East here/near later. Became N CHESHIRE 1926 (20 March according to LNW dates and hbl July but 17 September according to GW circular 3011); Brad added C briefly – dropped 1932/3.

NORTON near Worcester

Norton [GW] originated as a ticket platform: Worcester Herald 26 September 1857 said new station had been constructed here about three miles south of city, still not quite complete but would open on 1 October; *ibid 3 October still not complete but expected that most trains from London and intermediate stations on the OWW would stop here, as well as Midland trains from Gloucester. This is only instance so far seen of press announcement of opening of a ticket platform. Likeliest interpretation is that it would be available for public use, but only northbound (joining / or alighting?), which would explain why it did not appear in Bradshaw until October 1879. First certain passenger use so far found is a special excursion from Shrub Hill to here on 18 August 1862 for the Bromsgrove Literary and Mechanics' Institution fete at Spetchley Park (their notice Worcester Journal 16th 4b); this was also scheduled to return from here (arrangements?). First in Brad as N JUNCTION; renamed N HALT 7 September 1959 (CI; hbl December); clo 3 January 1966 (RM February). Also see WORCESTERSHIRE PARKWAY.

NORTON [Mid] op November 1841 (Mid); last in Brad August 1846; [north of later GW station].

NORTON-ON-TEES [NE]

N JUNCTION: lines through here opened 11 July 1835 (Clarence) (see 1835 A) and 10 February 1841 [Stockton & Hartlepool (NE maps). Probably primitive stopping arrangements on both, from start or soon after; perhaps briefly two stations; if so arrangement short-lived since S&H soon took over working of Clarence; early timetables lacked detail; first tt evidence seen is March 1850 (Topham). According to C Fox, An Illustrated History of Norton, The Iron Road, Fearn & Co, 2000, original Norton Junction 'station' was south of triangle of lines, in what would be the angle formed between line to C/coxeox and East Curve of 1870s; it was replaced around 1837 by stone platforms a little further north, in angle between Coxhoe line and original East Curve. In the sketch-maps later only shown on Coxhoe line, others presumably added later on East Curve. Topham only shows stops to/from Coxhoe; by June 1853 Brad was showing stops on Hartlepool line as well; however, given sketchy nature of early tt information for this area, might not be whole story. Early 'stations' might well have been more for use of railwaymen brought to the area by the creation of the junction than for general public. Replaced about 5½ mile east, thus losing service towards Ferryhill, by >

NORTHWOOD

NORTHWOOD [LNW] op 4 July 1837 (co n Gore’s Liverpool General Advertiser 29 June); re-sited about 300 yards south 14 October 1876 (LNW minutes); temporarily closed 23 May 2004. Became N B for ECCLESHALL 1907? (hbl ref 3 July) and thus NS co tt 1910 and Brad to 1955, but not LMS tt 1930; hbl 1938 applied this to goods only.

NORTHWOOD BRIDGE [NS] temporary station op 17 April 1848 (NS; co n T 13th); clo 1850 (NS).

NORTHWOOD FITZWARREN [GW] probably opened Monday 2 June 1846 (no exact date found but Wellington 5th ‘now open’; first in Brad June; no Sunday service); clo 30 October 1861 (RM December).

NORTON ROAD Swansea [SIT] first in Brad March 1878 (see 1860 July 25); re-sited on deviation line 26 August 1900; last in Brad February 1910; back April 1910 only – error?; back April 1929 (reop 2 March 1929 with electrification?), but not back in hb until 1938 (absent 1912 to 1929, inclusive); clo 6 January 1960; [map 88].

NORTON-IN-HEELS [NS] op 1 February 1870 (Staffs Advertiser 5th); clo 7 May 1956 (RM June).

NORWICH

Norwich [GE] op 1 May 1844 (T 14 April; re-sited adjacent 3 May 1886 (CI); N THORPE from a little after opening until 1969/70 – last in public tt for May 1969 to May 1970 but dropped from tickets before end of November 1969; temporarily during electrification work 1986 – see TROWSE below; still open.

Ticket platform(s), only references seen: leaving this to try and avoid payment, train from Swaffham (Norfolk News 15 October 1859). Accident when platelayer tried to jump onto ‘new’ ticket platform to avoid being hit by train going to Wells (ibid 11 January 1873) [addional or replacement?]. About quarter mile from station; evidence at trial of railwayman, following serious accident previous year (Norfolk Chronicle 10 April 1875 Supplement).

N CITY [MGN] op 2 December 1882 (co n Norwich Mercury 2nd); clo 2 May 1959 (T 2nd).

N TROWSE [GE] op 30 July 1845 (co n T 2nd); new station on extension to Thorpe 15 December 1845 (CI); last in Brad 1848; back September 1851; in the only local press its so far found (for October and December 1848) it was included without trains. However, there was clearly use during this period. Advertisement for residential property (Norfolk Chronicle 2 September 1848) said there were several daily conveyances to and from Norwich. Duke of Cambridge arrived here by a special train on 11 September 1848 (Globe 12th). Nearest station for sale 27 March 1849 (Norwich Mercury 24th). Advert (Norfolk Chronicle 5th) said that Pilot Coach from Southwold would start on 14 May ‘for the season’ to meet trains here on Monday, Wednesday and Saturdays. Morning Post 17 July 1849 advised visitors to the Royal Agricultural Society’s Show (18th & 19th) to get off here, though EC notices for special trains only referred to ‘Norwich’. Pilot Coach began again 27 May 1850. Eclipse Coach from Halesworth advertised to connect Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday (Norfolk Chronicle 12 July 1851). Was it open all / most of the time, with one ‘Norwich’ time left to cover both (see e.g. Stockton and Yeovil)? Back in Brad as result of opening of Trowse branch on 8 September 1851 (N Chron 30 August)? Also unusual use: item 8 February 1851 said that some passengers detained here when level crossing gates were closed got out and walked on to terminus to avoid stench from abattoir here (Norfolk News)… 322
Temporarily extended for Royal Agricultural Show, week beginning 12 July 1886; clo 22 May 1916, reop 1 April 1919 (RCH); clo 5 September 1939 (Tuesday) (CI). Initially just N in it (was briefly terminus), then N T, then usually just T – thus Brad and GE co tt 1914. Used for Royal Norfolk Show at Crown Point in June 1946 (Divisional Manager’s Report, RAIL 390/1276). Later used in 1950s for Norwich City F C home games; and during electrification work 1986 – used 28 to 31 March 1986 (inclusive) for all ‘Thorpe’ services, 26 April and 3 May for evening coast services (stopped to set down for connections then continued to main), evenings 3 August and 13 September (GE Journal July 2006; G Kenworthy).

N VICTORIA [GE] (non-tn): op 1 December 1849 (T 11th); clo 22 May 1916 (GE minutes 4 May said had reached agreement with corporation for this); [still shown IA]. Was V station at N in notice of formal opening (Ephemera) but Brad only added 1854/6.

Ticket platform. only reference seen: item Norwich Mercury 6 August 1856 – welcome given to General Wyndham (Crimean hero).

NUNEATON
NUNEATON [LNW] op 15 September 1847 (co n T 13th); became N TRENT VALLEY 2 June 1924 (Rly Gaz 23 May), N 5 May 1969 (CI); still open. N HINCKLEY ROAD in Brad 1867 to 1878/9.

N ABBEY STREET [Mid] op 1 November 1864 (Mid); re-sited 7 chains west 1 September 1873 (Mid); clo 4 March 1968 (Mid). Co tt and Brad called it N until renamed 2 June 1924 (Mid); hb called it N ABBEY from 1873 and RAIL 393/151 amended it from ABBEY to ABBEY STREET 2 1924.

N BRIDGE [Mid] op 1 March 1866 wtt (Mid); clo 1 October 1887 wtt (Mid). Main evidence for existence comes from working tt – did not appear in public tt. Also appears ‘P’ in hb 1877 to 1895 (present 1872, when no facilities were shown; deleted 1896 appendix – inertia involved?) and on late 1870s Airey Map of Staffordshire District (clearly added as afterthought so no distance information available). Exact site and purpose unknown (passenger use cannot be guaranteed); was between Abbey Street and South Leicester Junction; also some LNW trains shown calling until 1 April 1868 wtt (Mid). Perhaps provided fairly easy passenger interchange with LNW station, perhaps only mail/parcels exchange point.

NUNHEAD [LCD] op 18 September 1871* (co n T 16th); clo 1 January 1917 (RM February); reop 1 March 1919 (T 22 February); re-sited slightly north 3 May 1925 (CI); still open. N JUNCTION 1904 hb, J deleted hba May 1950 but not seen thus Brad.

* = junction station for line to Blackheath Hill, which opened this day. Intention had been to open line on 1st but delayed so contractors could ‘finish line more completely’ (T 2nd). This would not have prevented opening of Nunhead on 1st but notice makes it clear that would open with line on 18th;

O CENTRAL [LY]

First station of this name opened with line to Mumps, 1 November 1847. Inspection report, 16 October (MT6/4/71) says Mumps was the only station and no tt seen included it until it appeared in Brad July 1861; however, LY and some local historians say it opened with the line and Manch 3rd refers to the ‘dissatisfaction ... at the amount of the advance which has taken place in the fares from all the three stations at Oldham’ and local expectation that there would be kept the same for ‘the old station’ [compiler’s emphasis], though there is no direct reference to a CENTRAL station. Manch, of 23 October 1847, says that ‘Town Station would be of a temporary character and would be improved later; said was situate at the bottom of Clegg Street, then under construction and, until that completed, road to station would be along front of gas works and through Greaves Street’.

It was not on LY Distance Diagram 1851, nor in LY co tt January 1854, RAIL 942/2 (which gives just Werneth and Oldham), nor on Macaulay’s maps prior to 1861. Furthermore a duplicated booklet, The First Railway to Oldham, produced by TA Fletcher in 1972 makes no reference to Central; the 6 inch OS Map of the area, dated 1863, does not include the station and shows that the area around Clegg Street was still undeveloped (a station there would have been no nearer to the Market Place than Mumps). Thus the probability is that this was something of an experiment, perhaps resulting from threat of a competing line (The Oldham Alliance) which did not then materialise, attracted little custom and was soon closed. Manch 15 January 1848 contains report of the prosecution of man for an incident between Werneth and Mumps stations on 11 January; does this mean Central now closed – or not significant enough for mention?

Second station op 1 July 1861 (co n Oldham Chronicle 29 June). LY says first station, just beyond tunnel from Werneth, was replaced by one at junction with OAGB (Junction Diagrams show station just west of junction, handy for passenger exchange with Clegg Street); architect for this announced 23 March 1864, final cost published 15 August 1866. Clearly there was a link between its opening and coming of Clegg Street. N Fraser in Rly Obs June 1963 says aim was to prevent OAGB from extending further into Oldham as they first intended. This would suggest that ‘first’ was really the second and it was probably a temporary, replaced 1864/6 by one at / near site of first. (Oldham press information from E. Breede, general local information A. Brackenbury.) Clo 18 April 1966 (RM June).

Also see The Oldham Loop, Part I, (J Wells, Foxline, 2002).

O MUMPS [LY] op 1 November 1847 (co n Manch 3rd, which said line extended from Oldham station known locally as Werneth to Mumps and item in paper said for the populous suburb of Greenacres Moor); clo 4 October 2009.

O WERNETH [LY] op 31 March 1842 (Manch 2 April); clo 4 October 2009. Though the line was closed for conversion to Manch, this station was not replaced.

Brad did not provide separate mentions for Mumps LY and Werneth until March 1849; inspection report (MT6/4/71) just called Werneth ‘Oldham’ but did use ‘Mumps’. Co tt January 1854 (RAIL 942/2) has just WERNETH; OLDHAM.

Extra stop: Oldham Standard 24 August 1861, included notice from The Cow Hill and Hollinwood Tonic Sol-fa Association that certain trains from Mumps would set down at the bottom of the Werneth Incline (west of Werneth station) to set down passengers for the Second World War stop for a prisoner-of-war camp between here and Lees, name unknown; no supporting evidence has so far been found – see R. Coulthurst, Chron January 2019.

PARK HEAD [S&D]: Services shown under CRAWLEY [S&D] would have gone through here; early S&D ticket exists, P H to Bishop Auckland and back, covered carriages (JB). It is unlikely that Park Head was served by public passenger trains after December 1846, closure of line to Crawley. Article by Dr TM Bell, NE Express, May 2002, refers to unsigned and undated lease, filed under 1862, to let R Cordner of Crawley House use a line from junction on Weatherhill & Rookhope, 3 miles from Park Head on ex-Stanhope & Tyne, to Low White Heaps (to north-west). Conditions included provision, weather permitting, of passenger train to Park Head and back on Darlington and Bishop Auckland market days. Not certain service actually ran, but evidence for this area is very patchy. Line to Low White Heaps probably closed before 1883, when lease would have expired. Mountford gives support and further detail: ‘reported’ passenger service three times a week from Rookhope [= Low White Heaps?] to Parkhead; old carriages bought from NE 1863 and 1871 but inclines probably travelled in open trucks; he suggests taken from Parkhead to Stanhope by horse-drawn waggons, to avoid further rail inclines, for shopping at Stanhope but, in view of earlier information, more likely that went on from Stanhope by train – would fit opening of its branch. Later usually Parkhead; surviving goods BLANCHLAND (Cl) – renamed to this 1923. [IA, goods].

PENDLEBURY [LY] op 13 June 1887 (co n March Cour 11th†); clo 3 October 1960 (RM November).

PENDLETON [LY]
PENDLETON (a); op 11 June 1838 (see 29 May 1838); usually P BRIDGE early. At first seems to have alternated with Windsor Bridge: P B in Brad 19 October 1839; present until about August 1841; back December 1842. Clo 5 December 1966 (BR leaflet).

PENDLETON (b) op 13 June 1887 (co n March Cou 11th) as P BROAD STREET; briefly P NEW (thus Brad 1887-96 and still thus LY co tt 1899); renamed P 6 May 1968; damaged by fire 18 July 1994 (BLN 817), clo later officially backdated to this – could have been repaired but only two trains each way, weekdays, and authority presumably did not feel worth it.

PENGE
PENGE [London & Croydon] op 5 June 1839 (co n T 6th); clo 13 June 1839 (see ANERLEY, second entry, which effectively replaced it). Site? According to CI same as later Penge West – assumed?

PENGE [WELCP]; according to P Kay, LRR, July 1999, there was a short-lived station between Beckenham Junction and Norwood Junction on the line op 3 May 1858 which faded out of use by end of 1860. A station at the site suggested is shown on both OS and Stanford’s maps, well away from the village (though that is also true of known stations of the time: perhaps used because Penge was the nearest place without a station). S E Gazette 11th(a Maidstone paper), covering the opening of the line, said line went via Penge without specifying that there was a station here; no supporting evidence has been found in any timetable. All opening notices seen only referred to Crystal Palace; all adverts for premises in Penge cite Anerley and / or Sydenham as the nearest station(s). Too insignificant or service too poor for other mentions (Crystal Palace was main station on this section of line)? Misinterpretation of evidence such as that in paper cited, where perhaps journalist’s error? Others in print refer to this as Beckenham Road, which would have been a more appropriate name, but no contemporary evidence seen for use under this name either. A. Jackson, (RCHS Journal July 1995), suggested it was built in case they were denied use of Beckenham (Junction) but this did not happen because so P / BR was never used. The Croydon Tramlink station of this name now on site.

P EAST [LCD] op 1 July 1863 (T 2nd); EAST added 9 July 1923 (hbl 26 April); still open. P LANE in Brad 1864 to 1869 and in hbl 1867 only.

PENISTONE

PENISTONE [MS&L] op 14 July 1845 (co n Sheffield 12th). LY service began 1 July 1850, joining MS&L at junction east of station, so had to reverse into MS&L station (evidence of 1860s accident report)*. Became P (THURSTLESTONE) 1847/8, P & T 1848/50, P 1861/3 (Brad); JUNCTION sometimes added 1850s. Replaced > 1 February 1874 (GC dates) by joint station [GC/LY], at junction, avoiding LY reversal; still open. Brad added ‘The new station’ until 1886/7.

* = supported by local Directories of time which only show MS&L stationmaster; JN Dransfield’s A History of the Parish of Penistone, Don Press (Penistone), 1906, which refers to opening of both companies’ lines but only to MS&L and ‘New’ stations – and a description of wool merchants from Thurstone intended to go to Huddersfield appears to relate to MS&L station; National Gazetteer (1868) – ‘it is a station on the Manchester and Sheffield Railway’. Brad, November 1871, shows most trains allowed 10 minutes from Denby Dale to Penistone; December 1876 6 minutes to Penistone ’new station’. Macaulay’s maps (1850s and 1860s) and Junction Diagrams of 1870 and 1872 show LY station here, in addition to MS&L, but this was an error – result of someone at the Clearing House basing maps on what he thought ought to be the case, rather than the actuality? Included in 1851 LY Distance Tables as a ‘station’ but tables did not list any junctions; diagram just has ‘Penistone’, without any separate mileage for junction with MS&L, so probably ‘station’ = ‘junction’.

1850 6 inch OS map and press evidence show that originally line curved smoothly to junction further east than later one – change probably made in connection with 1874 station.

Ticket platform, only mentioned seen: wooden ticket platform, theft case (Sheffield Daily Telegraph 21 September 1875). On Sheffield side; accident to excursion 1 January 1885 (Leeds Mercury 2nd).

PERTH

From south to PERTH [Scot Cent; Cal/NB/High], op 23 May 1848; original temporary station replaced by permanent 2 August 1848; see PRINCES STREET, below; still open. GENERAL was added in Aberdeen table by 1848 Brad but it was some years before this was done in all tables; ceased to be P G 30 June 1952.

Ticket platforms:

North or Glasgow Road: see P GLASGOW ROAD, below.

South. Earliest reference seen: accident to passenger who had arrived at ticket platform by a Scottish Central train Montrose ...

Advertiser 4 November 1858, copied from Perthshire Advertiser. Then many more references (it seems to have been an accident-prone area). Most useful ones: Accident between Carscroft and Perth General (Scotsman 30 May 1872) - other papers e.g. ‘Carr’s Croft’. About 200 yards south of General station (ibid 30 July 1883). Wooden staging which runs for nearly 100 yards alongside down rails (Dundee Courier 31 July 1883). 303 yards south of south end of platform (Dundee Evening Telegraph 14 January 1884). Plans for enlarged station include two new ticket platforms; that on south 700 ft. Work to begin about end of next month, to be finished July 1885; also mention of suite kept for use of Queen and Royal Family (to be enlarged) (Dundee Evening Telegraph 13 September 1884). Probably rebuild rather than new site. On Caledonian down main line opposite ticket platform at St. Leonard’s Bridge (official notice of public enquiry into fatal accident on 5th, Perthshire Advertiser 11 August 1897). Still ticket platform at south end (Aberdeen Press 21 October 1913). True Line, October 2005, p 25 mentioned use of Ticket Platform 31 December (only) 1934 and 1935 by one northbound train; unlikely for ticket check since believed practice had ceased about ten years earlier – for New Year revellers to alight? Perthshire Advertiser 11 December 1937: has been demolished. Passenger use for alighting not established.

Barnhill – see next entry.

Temporary platform in Friarton gasworks 26 April 1901 for special train to take those involved in opening ceremony to luncheon at Station Hotel (Perthshire Advertiser 29th); Friarton Junction shown on Cobb Atlas.

From Dundee to P BARNHILL [DPA] op 24 May 1847 (Perthshire Courier 27th); referred to as Whitehouseled Mansion (opposite Barnhill signalbox) in True Line, October 2004, p 16 – at one stage first-class passengers from Dundee carried in omnibus to General, others had to make own way (also true after 1849 extension?); clo when line extended to PRINCES STREET, below. See Glasgow Herald 17 October 1876 referred to accident at ticket platform near Barnhill – site of temporary station (below) or nearby? Only reference seen. See Put -Barnhill

P PRINCES STREET [Cal] op 1 March 1849 (Perthshire Advertiser 8th); clo 1 January 1917 (RM February); reop 2 June 1919 (RCH); clo 28 February 1966 (Cl). This was at first a platform; through service on to General first in Brad October 1862; this had to use ‘Dundee Dock’, a terminal platform which required reversal and then running on to main line south of General for trains going further; article in Perthshire Advertiser 17 April 1862 described changes being made at General and implied that not yet in use by Dundee & Perth (‘wooden ticket offices ... giving place to elegant stone structures’ for the D&P); at Special Co Meeting called to support raising of extra money, 11 August 1862 (ibid 14th) reference made to extension of line to General and provision of a covered platform there, implying that recent but not specifying that actually in use. General rebuilt for through running 1885/87 (G Biddle, Great Railway Stations of Britain, D&C, 1986).

At some stage, before the opening of the Dundee Dock at P General, platform was provided at KING STREET, between Princes Street and General, from which passengers made their way by road between stations; this is shown on the map included with a Note on Perth General Station provided for visitors to the Centenary [of rebuilding] Exhibition in 1897. The Caledonian wtt for October 1883 includes PERTH ORCHARD BANK, 35 chains west of Princes Street. Its use was variable: not all stopped here, some stopped at General and/or Princes Street as well; terminus for some trains from west: 12.35 p.m. from Buchanan Street stopped at ticket platform south of General (no passenger use known) and then next called at Orchard Road; 1.30 p.m. from Waverley and 2.0 p.m. from Buchanan Street (combined at Larbert) apparently contrived to arrive at both General and Orchard Bank at 4.5 p.m. and at latter split into express and stopping portions for Dundee; those arriving at General at 8.15 a.m. apparently had to walk to Orchard Bank, leaving there at 8.25. Brad September 1883 and April 1885 (nearest presently available) give times involved as if for General. Likeliest explanation is that it was temporary provision used in connection with rebuilding of General station, Possible that it was the King Street platform brought back into use. Sectional Appendix March 1937 lists signalbox at Orchard Bank.

P GLASGOW ROAD [Scottish North Eastern]: temporary terminus set up during dispute with Scottish Central about charges for use of General station and 320 yards of track north of it (also belonging to Central). On 8 August 1859 ScNE stopped its trains at G R on its side of boundary, leaving passengers to make own way ¼ mile through streets between stations (T 23 August). Through traffic restored by 25 August 1859 thanks to intervention of Caledonian (Perthshire Courier 25th) but dispute not finally settled until early 1860 (ratified by Special Meeting of ScNE Shareholders on 26 January – T 27th). Possible ScNE had already resumed use of General, relying on ratification as automatic.

Later use: probably survived as a ticket platform at which southbound passengers could alight. According to T 6 December 1859, ScNE intended to retain it as extra stop, more convenient to city centre and it is in 1862 hb, though at that time no facilities were shown so not certain it was passenger station in use; not in 1867 hb (tempting to think casualty of Caledonian take-over of lines); no firm evidence of use/non-use. Brad clouds in use rather than resolves the issue: did not add G R until November 1859 (northbound only), left it there at least until 1865; cannot be used as evidence of continued use since it was applied to terminus.

Many press references have been found but continuity of use cannot be guaranteed. Examples: at ticket platform north of Perth it is customary for some passengers to alight (in this case from Meigle) (Paisley Herald 15 January 1870). Plans for enlarged station include two new ticket platforms; that on north 655ft. Work to begin about end of next month, to be finished July 1885 (Dundee Evening Telegraph 13 September 1884). Dundee Advertiser 21 and 23 April 1886 said old ticket platform to north had been replaced and included map for part of information; this shows new north one alongside Glasgow Road and suggests rebuilds on “if nearer earlier sites. There is a reference to ‘Perth Ticket Platform’ (on line from north) in RM July 1905, p 14. LMS advert for special train to here for St Johnstone v Hibernian 25 December; return by any train from Perth General (Perthshire Advertiser 22 December 1926). Picture of floods here (Sunday Post, Lanarkshire. 14 August 1927). Perthshire Advertiser 8 April 1939: to be closed for a few weeks to allow new stairway to be built; making start early next week; in interval trains will call at Muirton Halt. Ibid 20 May 1939: will be reopened for public use on 1 June. Railways Illustrated, March 2001, p 8, has photograph of passengers alighting ‘at the old Perth ticket platform … on 23 March 1957’, using exit to York Place (near Glasgow Road). Use ended? – probably well after tickets had ceased to be collected there.

P YARD (non-tt): open days; 13 April 1985 and other days (@JF).

PETERBOROUGH [GN] op 7 August 1850 (T 6th & 8th); NORTH 1 July 1923 (hb 12th) to 1966; still open. P PRIESTGATE 1865-1901, P COWGATE 1901-12 (Brad) – only thus in GN tables.

Excursion Platform: only references found: Bury Free Press 23 April 1887: accident on 19th; collision as Midland train for Leicester was leaving GN excursion platform. Stamford Mercury 13 September 1901 – reference to one in item about accident on 9th; victim was GN employee.

Ticket platforms:

North of station, only reference seen: two men from Spalding had a fight and damaged carriage, left at ticket platform to avoid its side of boundary, leaving passengers to make own way ½ mile through streets between stations (T 23 August). Through traffic re-opened for public use on 1 June. Railways Illustrated, March 2001, p 8, has photograph of passengers alighting ‘at the old Perth ticket platform … on 23 March 1957’, using exit to York Place (near Glasgow Road). Use ended? – probably well after tickets had ceased to be collected there.

PIMBO LANE – see UPHOLLAND.

PIMHOLE [LY]: op 1 May 1848, as HEAP BRIDGE (co n Manch Cour 3 May). Sparse information available. It only appeared in Brad November 1848, when shown as PIMHOLE, in small local table Manchester – Heywood – Bury; in December this was absorbed into larger table; experience with other tables at this time suggests possibility of longer survival of P. Possibility increased by fact that it appeared earlier in Topham (July 1848), also in local table, and stayed there at least until April 1849, though last two months’ tables marked to show that no recent information sent by company; not present March 1850, but local table had also gone by then. Not on LY Distance Diagram 1851 so existence probably short. Note that Pimhole was on main line and later Heap Bridge on a branch. [Bury – Broadfield].

P LAIRA GREEN [South Devon] op 5 May 1848 (Woolmer 13th); temporary terminus (just L in Brad but L G South Devon co tt November 1848); clo when line extended to >

P MILLBAY [GW] op 2 April 1849 (Trewman 5th); MILLBAY added 1 May 1877 (CI) though GW co tt 1886 just P (1891 P M); clo 24 April 1941 (wtt supp) – closed by bombing. GW op notice for Ingra Tor 2 March 1936 had P MILL BAY but this seems to have been isolated use.

Excursion platform: old goods shed converted, originally for Royal Agricultural Show, 12 to 21 July 1865 (Royal Cornwall Gazette 23rd) co notice for use during Bath & West Show here 4, 5 and 6 June 1873 (Exeter Flying Post 28 May); co notice for tickets 12, 13 and 14 August 1874 for a variety of events including opening of new Guildhall; platform said to be between goods and passenger stations (Isib 8th) [Millbay].

Ticket platform: earliest reference: sailor found dead here (Western Daily Mercury 4 January 1862). Adverts said it was in Buckland Street. After accident Western Morning News, 31 October 1887, referred to Colonel Yolland’s accident report of August 1884. This had said that ticket platform began at side of down line about 355 yards from buffer stops; 180 yards in length and about 72 yards from start of down main line arrival platform; at first very narrow, varying in width from 3 ft 6 ins to 6 ft 6 ins for 33 yards, total length about 84 yards. Last reference seen: pensioner killed when jumped out just before ticket platform, presumed because he had no ticket (London Evening News 15 September 1887).

P MILLBAY DOCKS [GW] (non-tt): from 1882 passenger trains ran into docks, terminating at East Quay, next to boat passengers’ waiting room – previously walk/cab to Millbay station. E.g. GW Mag October 1909 says that 30 August 1909 passengers taken from Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse by tender and joined their train at Millbay Crossing. Great Western Ports (1928) says main landing-place at south end of Millbay Pier, waiting and refreshment rooms adjoining, plus additional landing point to north of this. Last train called midnight 18/19 October 1963. Use of Millbay Docks by GW was continuous (apart from war interruptions) to closure (e.g. detailed description of arrival there 9 September 1955) (Kittridge).

Separate OCEAN TERMINAL used 1952 to 1965 (U).

PLYMOUTH [GW] op 28 March 1877 (W D Merc 29th) as P NORTH ROAD though GW co tt 1886 just N R (1891 P N R); provided so that through trains from Cornwall to the east did not have to reverse at Millbay; N R dropped 15 September 1958; still open.

POLESWORTH [LNW] op 15 September 1847 (co n T 13th); clo 23 May 2004; reop 12 December 2005 but only for one northbound train, daylight only; still open – same service 9 December 2007 tt.

POLLICOTT [GW/GC] (non-tt): Possible that at one time trains stopped hereabouts. A typed document (GW & GC Jt Misc 717) signed by Albert and Pellie Heard, 26 May 1936, frees railway from any liability arising from their using, daylight only, auto-cars stopping near their cottage, although there was no station there. Their address not given but witnesses gave Pollicott addresses. Perhaps locals had asked for Halt but were offered this instead (unlikely that offer was made to one ordinary couple only). If a stop did result it would have been at SP 697128, immediately south of Ashendon Up Line Junction, where footpaths from Upper and Lower Pollicott met and crossed line. Perhaps Dorton Halt, about ¼ north was opened instead or that this was a brief arrangement that ended with the opening of Horton, 21 June 1937. No other information available.

POLLOKSHADOWS (at first POLLOCKSHAWSHS inhb). P EAST [Cal] op 2 April 1894 (co n Glasgow Herald 21 March); still open. Always P East (Kenahan makes no mention of change; certainly thus Brad 1895 reprint).

P WEST [GBK Ji]: op 27 September 1848; WEST added 5 May 1952 (JS from RCH records); still open.

POLLOKSHIELDS (POLLOCKSHIELDS in hb early).

POLLOKSHIELDS [GP Ji] first in Brad September 1862*; amalgamated into Shields Road 1 April 1925 (Cl).

* = was first station to be added in Brad between Glasgow and Paisley so perhaps op earlier (line op 14 July 1840), but evidence contradictory. Not in Murray September 1844, when it did include short lived Moss Road and Bellahouston. Still not shown Murray 1852 or Cornwall 1860, specialist Scottish timetables. However Macaulay’s map 1851 shows station at Shields/Shields Bratg. 1852 station at station at Shields/Shields Bratg. 1852 station at.

PORT EDGAR [NB]

PORT EDGAR (public) op 2 September 1878 (co n Scotsman 31 August); clo 5 March 1890 (Wednesday) (Falkirk Herald 1st); (neither South Queensferry).

PORT EDGAR (non-nt): Port Edgar was requisitioned by Royal Navy 31 May 1916 as base for Torpedo Boat Destroyers of the Grand Fleet, commissioned as HMS Columbine. Line was upgraded to passenger standards and trains began running from Edinburgh to new workmen’s platform - presumably immediately after the BoT inspection on 5 September 1916 (MT 6/2443/17) as work was urgent. During War there were daily scheduled short-leave trains to and from Edinburgh. In addition, ambulance trains were run as required for Royal Naval hospital at Butlawn, just west of Port Edgar. Also return working each day between Port Edgar and Crombie and Dunfermline; base put on care and maintenance basis after 31 March 1928 (Scotsman 23 February). Clo 14 January 1929 according to LNER weekly circular but most unlikely that any passengers would have been carried after 1928, or even earlier; [nearest South Queensferry than previous public station]. See D Cattanach’s article in From Scotland to the Somme... Scottish Railway Preservation Society, 2018.
PORT ELPHINSTONE ([GNS]: generally regarded as goods only but appeared in Brad October 1854 (line op 20 September 1854, GNS), one train each way; in November one southbound only (northbound train had been early morning one, no longer operating); inspection report of 7 September 1854 said platforms incomplete; letter from engineer to BoT 11 September said would not be used as passenger station – change of mind or were platforms for railwaymen working at goods depot? – times of trains would fit; error* GNS wtt 5 September 1857 has note that Fridays and Saturdays 1st and 3rd class carriages are attached at Huntly to goods due Aberdeen about 7.40 a.m.; this stopped here – any possibility of use by occasional passenger?; [south of Inverurie].

* = also included in co n Aberdeen Journal 20th and still present in all September wts in local papers seen; also in description of formal opening on 19th, Dundee, Perth 22nd, without any indication that not ready – Kinmauld e.g. was so described. Co n e.g Aberdeen Press 27 September had one goods train to Aberdeen and one mixed and mail from there; note said that goods trains stopping at all the stations would start to run on 12 October.

PORT GLASGOW [Cal] op 31 March 1841; still open. Accident report, 19 October 1857, said dangerous condition of station had been reported on 6 May 1856 but nothing done, though a new goods station was being built and new passenger station planned on site of existing goods sidings (Rtn) – ever done? (Ironically accident unconnected with state of station – child had stepped off platform to see oncoming train.)

OLD DOCK HALTS (non-tt) [PT]; from engineer’s reports (RAIL 1057/1528): temporary platform for DR David’s Tinplate Works to be erected by railway company here on road which crossed GW at Port Talbot East box, with platforms near Water Street Bridge (NEWLANDS) and CRIBBWR FAWR COLLIERY HALT (thus July 1924 wt) to be erected by Baldwin’s; work begun by 15 March 1918; workmen’s service started 1 May 1918; it ran along PT Omgore Valleys Extension line towards Waterloo Junction. According to BoT inspector’s report (MT29/79) only intermediate at time of inspection December 1918 was then called NEW SINKINGS (for new colliery that became Newlands). Clo before July 1928 when Cribbwr Fawr colliery closed – although not shown in GW wtt as long ago as January 1921. (Part from Simmonds, A History of the Port Talbot Rly & Docks Co and the South Wales Mineral Rly Co (Vol. 2, p. 365).

PORT VICTORIA [SE] op 11 September 1882 (St James’s Gazette 11th); line beyond Sharnell Street closed 1 December 1902 (probably – Maidstone Journal 27 November said that service for December would be same as October except that trains from Gravesend would not run beyond S S) – Admiralty was thinking of taking over line. There was frequent Royal use of line (e.g. 8 November 1902 a special train took Emperor William II of Germany to Shorncliffe) and this continued: 12 August 1903 King Edward VII travelled ‘incognito’ as the Duke of Lancaster, though the receptions he was granted suggest that the alias had failed, 7 August 1903 Queen Alexandra used on a visit to her father in Denmark and others were recorded. In November 1903 the only definite public service was to connect with Flushing night boat (diverted from Queenborough Pier following 1900 fire); latter returned to Q P 3 May 1904. Line fully op Sunday 6 September 1904 for the day only because bridge over Shale was closed and passengers normally going to Sheppey were taken here and on to Sheppey by steamer. In November 1903 the only service fully restored? (clearly by July 1906 when extra halts opened); clo 11 June 1951 (CI), to allow oil terminal to be expanded. Original station was on the pier - gradually retreating along it as its condition deteriorated (Hart Hundred of Hoo Railway, 1899) until 1932, when it was replaced smaller one on shore.

[WH use but Festiniog owned] began 1 June 1923, to station south of crossing with [Cam/GW] line, sited for easy transfer to GW and line opened between two (Cambrian News 8 June – R Maund); supposed to be replacement to be used by both companies but in practice trains stopped at both sites (regarded as single station by company) by end of 1923 (perhaps slight gap in use of [Festiniog] station); [Festiniog] now P OLD. [WH use] P NEW. OLD and NEW used in wtt and Brad but not at first elsewhere.
February 1929 Brad: P HIGH STREET HALT [Festiniog] added, with note that trains between P and Blaenau would terminate there – it was on through line at town end of Britannia Bridge; not in co’s tts – but whence Brad’s information?
8 July 1929: Trains now terminated at platform north of crossing but 1923 buildings continued in use, passengers having to walk between them and new platform, escorted by railway staff; NEW 2 is used as a convenient shorthand for the latter on the map. See article by R Maund in December 2009 issue of Welsh Highland Heritage, which details various doubts about what happened here.

Ticket platform: Earliest reference: notice about intention to build new railway joining LSW Gosport branch about 60 yards south of Portsmouth ticket platform adjoining Bishopstoke (later Eastleigh) station (London Daily News 21 November 1861). To be dispensed with and from Monday; tickets to be collected at Cosham and Havant (Hampshire Telegraph 13th August 1889) (JS); there would undoubtedly have been many more than were recorded in the press, particularly in later years:

Earliest seen was ‘a platform’ for Queen and Albert 12 November 1859 when they had come to launch new ship (Globe 12th); there were many later instances of use for Queen’s visits abroad; e.g. 18 December 1870 when privacy such that troops embarking for India were ordered out of sight (Penny Illustrated Paper 25th); to Germany 27 March 1876 (Morning Post 28th); last use by her seen 30 July 1898. Also 13 August 1878 when train from Victoria brought various visitors including representatives from China and Japan to see Spithead Review (Morning Post 14th); used for receiving body of Duke of Albany 4 April 1884 (London Evening Standard 4th); 24 July 1885 for inspection of Light Camel Corps by Prince of Wales (Portsmouth Evening News 24th); for visit of MPs 11 June 1887 (Isle of Wight Observer 18th); for Duke of Edinburgh 28 April 1889 (Southern Echo 29th); 15 July 1902 for King Edward VII’s departure on convalescent trip after removal of appendix (Daily Telegraph 16th).

Others perhaps at different sites:

One for Lords and Commons. 1,200 feet long extending to No. 7 Dock for ship to take them to see Spithead Review 17 July 1867 (Hampshire Telegraph 13th); one near contractor’s mould loft for visit of party from Institute of Civil Engineers, led by Mr. Vignolles, to inspect progress on enlargement of Dockyard, 31 July 1871 (Hampshire Telegraph 13th); another such for Coronation Spithead Review 26 July 1887.

Non-tt Variety of temporary platforms in Dockyard, reached by branch from Harbour station, not always clear from press accounts which was involved; the North and South Railway (alias Watering Island) Jetties were those most specified; the following is merely a selection designed to show the variety of usage; there would undoubtedly have been many more than were recorded in the press, particularly in later years:

Earlyest seen was ‘a platform’ for Queen and Albert 12 November 1859 when they had come to launch new ship (Globe 12th); there were many later instances of use for Queen’s visits abroad; e.g. 18 December 1870 when privacy such that troops embarking for India were ordered out of sight (Penny Illustrated Paper 25th); to Germany 27 March 1876 (Morning Post 28th); last use by her seen 30 July 1898. Also 13 August 1878 when train from Victoria brought various visitors including representatives from China and Japan to see Spithead Review (Morning Post 14th); used for receiving body of Duke of Albany 4 April 1884 (London Evening Standard 4th); 24 July 1885 for inspection of Light Camel Corps by Prince of Wales (Portsmouth Evening News 24th); for visit of MPs 11 June 1887 (Isle of Wight Observer 18th); for Duke of Edinburgh 28 April 1889 (Southern Echo 29th); 15 July 1902 for King Edward VII’s departure on convalescent trip after removal of appendix (Daily Telegraph 16th).

Others perhaps at different sites:

One for Lords and Commons. 1,200 feet long extending to No. 7 Dock for ship to take them to see Spithead Review 17 July 1867 (Hampshire Telegraph 13th); one near contractor’s mould loft for visit of party from Institute of Civil Engineers, led by Mr. Vignolles, to inspect progress on enlargement of Dockyard, 31 July 1871 (Portsmouth Times 5 August); opposite iron foundry 27 April 1876 for visit of Princess Alice (Marchioness of Bute) to launch HMS Inflexible (Hampshire Telegraph 22nd, 27th); Platforms near Chief Constructor’s Office and Iron Foundry for Queen to launch new warships 26 February 1891 (Portsmouth Evening News, detailed advance programme, 5th). Array of platforms beside ships used to take guests, including foreign royalty, to view Diamond Jubilee Review at Spithead 26 June 1897 (HampshireAdvertiser 30th); another such for Coronation Spithead Review 16 August 1902.

WATERING ISLAND JETTY put out of use when access pier damaged by enemy action during heavy air raid of 10/11 January 1941 (T Cooper)

CLARENCE PIER [Landport & Southsea Tramway]: op 15 May 1865 (S.E. Harrison, The tramways of Portsmouth, author, 1954); included in Brad but was a tram terminus that ceased to be relevant to railway use after opening of P HARBOUR 2 October 1876.

P ROYAL NAVY BARRACKS PLATFORM (non-tt): branch from original terminus into use 15 March 1857 (T 18th), use exclusively for government; clear from paper that intention from outset was to use when appropriate for moving troops. Out of use ? UNICORN GATE in 1920s (U), later P DOCKYARD; [branch ran north of South Jetty line].

PORTSMOUTH & GOSPORT TRAMWAY & FLOATING BRIDGE: though in Brad same dates as Clarence Pier it was advertisement for chain ferry which took passengers from Broad Street Portsmouth to Gosport Hard, about ½ mile from station; not owned by LBSC but perhaps promoted by them to gain custom from LSW rail service to Gosport.

Also see Section 7, 2 for internal Dockyard services.

PORTSMOUTH ARMS [LSW]: op March 1855?; letter (25 July 1854) from engineer to BoT – do not intend to open for public traffic at present. Timetable ‘corrected to March’ (co n Ex & Plymouth 24 March) has note that time between Umberleigh and South Molton Road included stoppage at P A Coal Siding when required and it was in that month that ‘new station’ here first appeared in adverts for sales; not in tts in February papers, but they were headed ‘corrected to September [1854]’; first in Brad September 1855; still open.

PORTSOY [GN/G] op 30 July 1859; re-sited when line extended 1 April 1884 (CI); clo 6 May 1968 (co n Aberdeen Express 5 April).

PORTSWOOD op 1 May 1861* (Hants Advertiser 4th); clo 5 March 1866, replaced by St Denys about ¼ mile south (B Moody, Southampton’s Railways, Waterfront, Poole, 1992), *= earlier ticket platform here (company agreed to provide this 16 September 1858); LSW implies this was available as stop to passengers on local trains.

PRESton {map 44}
Opened from south to PREston [NU] 30 October 1838 (co n March 27th); still open. Early references to PENNY STREET (LPJ); later FISHERGATE (JOINT); LY co tt 1899 had P F for Longridge service, P for rest. LNW, LMS co ts seen: just P.
Sometimes P regarded as two adjoining stations: Hb 1904 to 1956 shows P BUTLER STREET as a separate LY/LMS station, ‘P’, ‘near Fishergate’: RCH Junction Diagrams show P B S as goods only. Preston G of 30 August 1902 seemed to regard it as a station on its own; in its description of the arrangements for Guild Week it mentioned the Central Station and Butler Street, though the latter somewhat ambiguously. It said that had been found necessary to call into play for next week ‘the excellent platforms at the L & Y goods station. The ordinary service of trains will start from the bay sidings as usual, but the specials will be dealt with either on the main platforms or in the goods yard. The passengers carried into the latter will leave by the entrance leading into Corporation-street’; also see ‘other’, below.
Line from north [LPJ] op 26 June 1840 (Lancaster 27th) to main station, above. Inter-company dispute over charges for use of line between stations caused LPJ, from 1 August 1842, to stop at DOCK STREET, at boundary of LPJ line, north of main station. There was no station at Dock Street; trains carried on to main station, but any passengers staying on had to pay toll so many alighted at Dock Street and walked to main (LPJ). Ultimate intention of LPJ was to switch to >
MAXwell HOUSE [Bolton & Preston] station, but B & P did not open it, running through main station on the way, until its line was complete, 22 June 1843 (D&C 10); even then it remained a terminus, not directly accessible from north >
LPJ position weakened when B & P joined LNW so dispute settled; M H clo and D S fell out of use, 11 February 1844 (Sunday) – last day? All involved used main station. Later excursion use of M H (U).

Excursion Platform, Charles Street: Sunderland Daily Echo 10 July 1885 – co advert for trip to Royal Agricultural Show here on 17th – return from Charles Street excursion platform. Lancashire Evening Post 22 May 1904 – progress report on changes here included references to excursion platform previously approached from Charles Street. First, last use?
Non-ff: when Prince of Wales came to lay foundation stone for Albert Edward Dock 17 July 1885 he was taken by road to Strand Road near Victoria Warehouse, then for the ceremony by rail from a temporary platform to site; on return went from Strand Road to central station (Preston Chronicle 18th).

Preston & Wyre
P MAuldlands (a) op 16 July 1840 (co n T 13th); clo 11 February 1844 (Cl) – service diverted to main (in practice most trains already using it); later excr (U).

Preston & Longridge
Opened from P DEEPDALE STREET 2 May 1840, 1 November 1856 services diverted to new station, P MAuldlands bridge but a couple of Saturday market trains called at DEEPDALE STREET 5 minutes after Maudland Bridge (co n Preston Chronicle 1th), January tt 1857 (ibid 10th) again had ‘DEEPDALE STATION’ as terminus; it was explained at co ½ meeting on 28 February that M B had been closed for the winter (exact date?) so that sleepers in tunnel could be replaced and that it would be sensible to move the old station to Deepdale Bridge, to save reversal (ibid 7 March). 1 July 1857: P MAuldlands Bridge again terminus, with trains calling on way at DEEPDALE BRIDGE (D STREET in one of notes) (co n ibid 27 June). Both clo 2 June 1930 (LNW Record).
Intermediate station was P D in Brad but just D LY co tt 1899.
One train daily (first and second class) was at one time noted to leave from DEEPDALE GOODS. This was first shown in Brad October 1867; last included October 1872; in LNW co tt added by March 1868, removed by January 1874.

West Lancashire
PREston [W Lanc] op 4 September 1882 for Guild Week, full service 16 September 1882 (LY; Southport Vis 5th); clo 16 July 1900 (Cl); reop 1 to 6 September (inclusive) 1902 for Guild Week (Preston G 30 August); later excr (U). Name FISHERGATE HILL seems to have been popularly used, though officially not applied until later, when goods only.
Other

PRIZE-FIGHTS: The following used public lines but nature of service makes it impossible to fit material under exact headings.

There were occasions when trains were chartered to take spectators to illegal prize-fights. To try to evade authorities, no destination was announced in advance and passengers were put down between stations, often near county boundaries so that if police of one county tried to intervene they could flee to another. More than 40 of these are listed in an article by G Guilcher in the RCHS Journal, July 1986. The Eastern Counties and the South Eastern seem to have been the principal participants. Also see letter from A Gray, RCHS Journal March 1987, p 53, which added three others; his SE gives details of some instances of prize fights by rail. (moved from Section 7.)

RAINTON {map 41}

RAINTON (a) alias R MEADOWS [Durham Junction] op 9 March 1840 (NE maps); sited so that passengers from Gateshead, Shields and Wearmouth could be transferred to road coaches for journey to Durham. This service has not been found in Brad, though it was in Robinson’s (versions for about August and October 1841 seen), included in Brandling Junction table. Logically it would have clo 15 April 1844, when line to Durham opened. Shown on Bell (1843) at 323478, it was served by a road which joined West Rainton’s system at 319478; before first OS map of area, both station and road had disappeared.
RAINTON (b) [Newcastle & Darlington Junction] op 19 June 1844 (co n T 24 May- line; in description of formal opening, 18th in Leeds Mercury 22n) only appeared in Brad August 1844, so presumably soon closed.

RAINTON (c) shown on OS maps mid 1850s between Hetton & Pittington (S Bragg); according to National Gazetteer, Virtue & Co, 1868, West Rainton ‘is a station on the North-Eastern Railway, which is here joined by the Durham Junction’; probably survival of outdated information rather than reliable for 1860s.

RAINWORTH – see BLIDWORTH.

RAMCROFT COLLIERY [Mid] (non-tt): miners; op 16 September 1918 (Special Traffic notice S 30 RAIL 95777); clo 3 October 1927; {branch from Palterton} [Mid].

RAVELRIG [Cal] first used non-tt 29 March 1884 for special rifle regiment of Edinburgh Rifle Brigade (Volunteer Services Gazette ... 12 April); used mainly by Volunteers, served by Balerno branch and main line trains; poor patronage so reduced to one train each way per day along main line; first in Brad May 1889, Wednesdays only, when branch trains again stopped here (Balerno); variously R JUNCTION, R PLATFORM (in IA as HALT), R J P; last in tt June 1920*; reop, non-tt, 1927, only lasting a few years (D Yuill, True Line 71) – in hb 1938 as HALT; clo January 1945 hba but inertia perhaps involved.

* = was service now withdrawn, or just considered unworthy of inclusion? – officially recorded as closed 1 July 1921. According to Balerno some sort of service existed in 1920s, via Balerno branch with reversal at Ravelrig and return via main line. Brad August 1924 includes a service that could fit this, though it no mention of Ravelrig; this service had not been shown April 1923. Were there any surreptitious calls by other trains so that travellers could make a return journey? Map p. 60 Bailevors shows cottages between lines east of junction, apparently without any road access; was any provision made for people living in them? – likely to be railway employees? Opening of Golf Club about a mile away in 1927 gave it a boost – only a few Felix previously likely to use. N. Ferguson & D. Stirling, Caledonian in LMS Days, Pendragon. 2007 said 1927 use on new site, at junction – earlier a short distance west, but The Signalling Record 92, p. 69, no authority quoted, says in 1927 platform upgraded and nameboard erected and finally ceased to be served early 1930s. This later service not found in Brad; neither was it included in LMS tt 22 September 1930.

RICHBUROUGH
C H Ellis's British Railway History vol. 2 (1959), p. 307: 'From a small depot in 1916, Richborough rapidly grew into a port ... with 60 track miles of railway. During 1917 the Richborough Military Railway ...[had] ...17 carriages, the latter enough to work eight passenger trains daily for men travelling between the camp and the barge works and other installations.' Exact details unknown – local press often called it 'the mystery port'; following entries give other basic known details. By February 1919 had been handed over to SEC for supervision and control (SEC half-yearly, Dover Express 28th). Port ran down over period late 1920 – early 1921. Remaining staff given notice of dismissal, effective end of April 1921 (Thanet Advertiser 2 April).

R MILITARY HALT [SEC]; January 1919 tt shows workmen’s trains (altered timing) and soldiers’ leave trains to Ramsgate Town and Margate Sands; sited between Minster and Sandwich for military use only. Workmen’s tains still running to ‘Richborough’ in August 1920 – Dover Express, 20th, reported workman found eating breakfast in train left overnight in side platform at Deal. Earlier ibid, 28 May, reported that children had been brought from famine area (Austria) to Britain for a year’s holiday; they were landed at Folkestone on 26th and taken here by train for three weeks’ quarantine. Another batch (from Hungary) reported by Thanet Advertiser, 28 August.

ROCHER [LCD] op 1 March 1892 (RCG); replaced by new station about ¼ mile west 13 December 2015 (AB Chron April 2016); still open.

R BRIDGE [LCD]; LCD notice for opening of extension linking its Kent line to Victoria 3 December 1860 included ROCHESTER, no trains calling (had been thus in Brad by January 1859). Although link to SE at Strood was closed for most purposes, table showed one mixed train Strood to Rochester by early morning, reverse working in evening (T 3rd). This ran until ? LCD notice T 21st said that a temporary station would be opened at STROOD on Monday 24 December 1860; another notice gave ’Timetable for December’ which omitted ‘Rochester’ but had all trains calling at ‘Strood’. Confusingly this table still included the mixed trains to/from ’Strood’ without any indication was using SE station, though timings same as before, making it likely that this was so. No information found about ’temporary’ station – perhaps only buildings, same site for permanent. Also see SE pp 99-101. When ’Toomer Loop’ (owned by LCD) reop Monday 2 April 1877 (SE notice T 31 March – ’arrangements have been made with LCD for through booking’) LCD ran trains from Strood [SE] to connect with their line along Kent coast; some ran to Chatham, others made connection here (depended on whether connecting LCD train stopped) and the May 1877 co tt shows that in the latter case passengers had to change twice, at Strood and here. Brad confusingly showed the service in SE table (presumably for convenience). Correspondence between Railway Commissioners, BoT and LCD shows that platform and cross-over road had been built on short line connecting SE and LCD and a train consisting of tender engine and two carriages would run between the two Strood stations eight times each way per day [not what actually appeared in Brad]. Map in LCD, p 99, shows that a platform had been added to the LCD station on the westbound line to Strood, with a cross-over allowing eastbound trains to reach it. In Brad was R BRIDGE in SE table but R & STROOD in LCD’s. March 1890 Brad shows that only occasional connecting train was using this station. However, June 1890 a separate Strood – Rochester Bridge – Chatham table was added, trains now taking only 1 minute Strood – Rochester Bridge, 4/5 minutes on to Chatham, suggesting improved arrangements – probably the elimination of the extra change here. Trains involved also stopped at LCD’s Rochester after that opened. According to the (incorrect) table headings the SE still operated the service in January 1892 but by January 1893 they had been corrected to show that LCD was doing so. Last trains from ex-SE station shown stopping June 1904. Still served via Sole Street until clo 1 January 1917 (RCH). (Co tt information and copy of correspondence from D Banks.)

South Eastern Gazette 28 August 1860: LCD have decided to erect station for here on waste ground at bottom of Free School Lane; also ticket platform on Strood side of early morning Bridge. [Did they?]

R DOCKYARD (non-tt):
Dundee Courier 20 March 1909 said that arrangements had been made with NB to bring platform used at Scottish National Exhibition at Edinburgh to here (for possible future use of workmen building the base, though then policy to houseworkmen locally, or for use within base?), Work on building base had begun 11 March (Scotsman 12th).
From 22 July 1912 workmen’s trains ran daily each way between Dunfermline (Upper and Lower) and Dockyard for Messrs Easton Gibb & Son, contractors for construction of Dockyard; ran via Inverkeithing and North Queensferry branch to Naval Base Junction(on original plans as ‘Jamestown’) and then to Admiralty Exchange Sidings, where company requested platform – not known whether this provided or whether it was the end of their journey or point of transfer to Dockyard’s own trains over network within it. Dockyard was still incomplete when war started so during whole of war, 24 Workmen’s trains per day, conveying workers from Edinburgh, Dunfermline, Lochgelly, Cowdenbeath, Dysart, Sinclairstown and Kirkcaldy were run to and from dockyard; four workmen’s trains each way to and from Edinburgh carried some 4000 workers daily. Also a return working each day between Crambie and Dunfermline; and leave specials from Rosyth Dockyard throughout war for ships’ companies going on leave when their ships were refitting and daily scheduled short-leave trains between Rosyth Dockyard and Edinburgh as required. Initial arrangements within Dockyard unknown. BoT gave approval on 31 August 1915 fora new junction at Limpet Ness where workmen’s trains would be handed over to the Admiralty contractors’their engine working the trains forward to Rosyth Works either on the branch line or on the main line …’ (MT 6/2434/7) to Dockyard’s own station, opened 1 September 1915. NBR plan in file shows original exchange sidings on the branch line.

Edinburgh to Dockyard service withdrawn at start of 1923 (see Dundee Courier 5, 8 January). Ibid 13th: as a result of the outcry against withdrawal of workmen’s service into Dockyard, Admiralty had made certain concessions (stressed as temporary): apprentices resident in Edinburgh and travelling to Rosyth (Halt?) would have fares paid until indentures ended and ordinary workmen would be taken to Limpetness (Junction, see Railscot internet item for site; sometimes two words) and thence by Admiralty trains into Dockyard. Ibid 28 September 1932 signal box at junction destroyed in fire previous afternoon, line now disused.
No passenger services shown 1 May 1939 wtt; workmen’s and leave trains included in 4 October 1943 wtt; last regular service on Friday 24 November 1989 (BLN 620 p 305); specials from Edinburgh, for Open Days 17 July 1959, 10 June 1962, 6 and 7 June 1981 (Railway Magazine February 1990 p 132) and 16 June 1984 (photographs, Dennis Lovett & Allan McLean, Edinburgh to Inverkeithing ... Rotton Park Road [LNW] op 10 August 1874 (LNW Officers 11616, 11692); clo 26 November 1934 (Birmingham Daily Gazette 26th – last train 24th).

Roudham Junction [GE] op 18 October 1869 (item, co n Norfolk Chronicle 23rd); from 1 October 1902 officially exchange only (note in tt that tickets not issued to/from); GE co tt 1914 noted it as exchange only, no tickets issued, and included it only for one train, from London; after 1 March 1920 only included on branch (main line stop briefly reinstated during coal strike 6 April to 2 October 1921); all advertised stops withdrawn 1 May 1932 (Sunday) (Cl); unadvertised use ceased 15 June 1964 (Cl). Hb 1904 to 1929 inclusive included station but no facilities shown; ‘P’ restored 1938 – as HALT. Its inclusion in public tt 1921 to 1932 would seem to have been pointless if it was exchange only, since there would apparently have been nothing to exchange with – unless there were unadvertised stops on main line (TTS May 2001, p 118-9 confirms wider use, by railwaymen’s families e.g.).

Roughton Royal [GNS] op 20 May 1985 (AZ); still open.

ROYAL GARDENS [NE] only in Brad from June 1857 to October 1857 (inclusive) but used over a longer period; earliest use found was for a Temperance Gala 16 & 17 May 1853 (Leeds Mercury 14th), then every day, including Sundays, from June to September (inclusive) 1853, for the general public; this pattern, or some variant of it, was followed until the gardens closed for most purposes 1 July 1858 (Leeds 12 June). There was at least one later use, for a Temperance Gala, 13 and 14 June 1859 (Leeds Times 18th). The service varied in detail: most trains were regarded as excursions and came from the Wellington goods stations of the NE and GN but advert 9 May 1857 (ibid) referred to Sunday trains from Midland and Holbeck stations, at times there were stops on regular services (thus in Brad) and the Galas attracted excursions from all over the NE’s system. {Leeds – Headingley}. Burley Park here/ near later.

ROYAL GROUP OF DOCKS (LONDON) [PLA].

Temporary platform 24 February 1879 in Victoria Dock for 17th Lancers on way to Zululand (London Daily News 25th).

Boat trains ran to various destinations over the years. They were running to Royal Albert Dock by ?; included ‘P’ in 1883 hb; earliest specific evidence 16 December 1884 (Special Order R 1731, GE and London St Katharine’s Docks Railway), which shows arrangements for trains from Custom House to SOUTH SIDE and NORTH SIDE of Dock, to come into force on 17th. Running to Victoria Dock from ? – shown ‘P’ in hb 1890. Running to King George V Dock (opened 1921) by ? (certainly by 1925 when there were references in PLA documents). No platforms; temporary arrangements at individual berths for dealing with passengers. Before about 1965 all trains stopped at Custom House to pick up PLA pilot and ran via High Level line over Connaught Road swing-bridge and PLA lines to dock berths. After High Level line closed from Albert Dock Junction to PLA boundary, they ran via Victoria Dock, picking up PLA pilot in the Exchange Sidings and going on to King George V and Royal Albert Docks. These services ceased 1966 when passenger liners stopped calling at these docks (but arrangements still included in No 1 Supplement August 1967 to Sectional Appendix of 1 April 1960 – inertia). Oddly, Royal Albert Dock and Royal Victoria Dock last shown ‘P’ in hb 1895 – result of lack of ‘stations’ as such? (Material from GE, PLA and BR sources provided by R Green.) Also see GALLIONS for special early use.

ROYAL OAK op 30 October 1871 [HC] (GW notice T 24th); [GW] service first in Brad June 1878; GW use ended 1 October 1934; see 2010 July 24*; still open for [HC].

* = clearly shown 11 September 1933 wtt; 30 April 1934 wtt and thereafter all calls eastbound were noted as calling only for single-line working purposes; a decreasing westbound service, culminating in the 29 April 1935 wtt with a Saturday only stop, was shown without this note; in 4 May 1936 wtt all stops were noted; the probability is that all services both ways should have been thus noted from 1933; a one-way service would have made no sense (R Maund).

Pier & Tramway. Was in Brad. Op Pier Head to Pier Gates 29 August 1864; extended to Castle 28 January 1870; to St Johns Road 7 August 1871 (IoW co ½ T 28 August). Pier Gates station replaced to west 1871 (T Cooper) often in Brad as PIER TOLL GATE. Initially acted as a link between the ferries and the railway service. Pier Gates (i.e. Esplanade) to St Johns Road closed 5 April 1880 when the ‘main’ line covered that stretch but the original section kept until 26 January 1969 to provide extra capacity to that of the parallel ‘main’ line, especially for ferry passengers not going beyond Ryde by train, (IoW). BR issued tickets for PIER GATES but that not shown separately in Brad.

Station built at Simeon Street about 3/8 mile north of St Johns Road by Pier company, intending that Ryde & Newport Railway would also use but BoT refused approval; was opened about March 1876 as tram station and closed in 1880 (Ryde, p 67 on).

Clear from inspection report dated 2 May 1855 that Londonderry did have own station here at start, but OS maps of 1855/57 show one station, about 11 chains north of site of East, placed as if to serve both Londonderry and Durham & Sunderland lines (S Bragg); thus some unrecorded re-siting must have occurred – perhaps of 1836 station, with OS failing to keep up. Would have been logical for both companies to share (or have platforms alongside each others) at start – Londonderry line to Seaham op for minerals Seaton to Ryhope 1 January 1854, using Durham & Sunderland line; own line to Sunderland opened with passenger service (NE; T 21 January 1854). 1858 is likely time since Brad January 1858 says the 12.55 from Seaham ‘meets the Durham & Sunderland trains at Ryhope’ and the timing would not have allowed for anything beyond a change of platform; note not present Brad January 1859 (was in Intelligible Guide June 1858).

SCARBOROUGH op 8 July 1845; still open. CENTRAL 1926 (hbl ref October) to 5 May 1969. An excursion platform existed by 2 November 1869 when Leeds Intelligencer (3rd) said it was used to despatch a regular train because the Prince of Wales had arrived at the ordinary station. Leeds Mercury (10 August 1883) said it had been completely arched over and was capable of holding 6,000 persons. Site? – York Herald (13 June 1894) reported that derailment just at the end of this had blocked lines to platforms 1 and 2 of main station; Yorkshire Post (13 August 1900) said that the Lord Mayor of London and his party had left by the excursion exit into Westborough on the 11th; private adverts for letting rooms in Belgrave Road said they were opposite this platform. When used for soldiers going to camp on 7 June 1908 it was the ‘old’ excursion platform. It certainly had at least one use after its replacement: on 4 August 1908 the Duke & Duchess of Connaught arrived here.

The new one was first used 8 June 1908 (Yorkshire Post 9th), which called it the new excursion station, Londesborough Road). All company notices, co ½ (Yorkshire Post 8 August) and most press references seen initially referred to it as the Scarborough excursion platform; ‘Washbeck’ seems to have been a local name. Beverley & East Riding Recorder (22 July 1911) called it thus in connection with excursion planned for Minster Boys’ School on the 29th, as did Sheffield Daily Telegraph (4 August 1919) – used for first time since war to cope with traffic on 2nd; both called it ‘station’ rather than platform. It was renamed SCARBOROUGH LONDESBOROUGH ROAD STATION on 1 June 1933 (U, supported by Yorkshire Post, 3 June – is now to be this to help visitors find it). First in Brad July 1933 ss; Scarborough Excursion Platform used for relocation of children from West Hartlepool to Scarborough during the week-end (Hartlepool Daily Mail, Monday 11 September 1939). S CENTRAL and S NORTH op 4 October 1976 (Mid); actually clo 17 May 1993 (RM April 1994), but taxis continued service when needed. NORTH in public tz but only for Qualcast and Internal Combustion factories. Reason originally given for closure was that no trains left in use were able to operate track circuits reliably (Midland Society Journal Summer 2003); objections delayed official closure (ending need for taxi service) until letter from Department of Transport dated 23 September 2002 (R Maund, Chron October 2003).

SINGER

SINGER [NB] GM circular 184 of 19 October said new passenger station would open 3 November 1907 but this was a Sunday and is likely that a station mainly for workers would have had a service then? Brad April 1910, nearest to hand at present, does not even show a Sunday service for the line. Thus first trains would have used it on 4th. Still open. Became S for KILBOWIE & RADNOR PARK about 1913 according to RCG ref July and hb 1914a and reverted to S May 1948 hba but only S seen in Brad.

S WORKMEN’S [NB]: NB special advice dated 22 June 1914 refers to Football ‘Advertised Excursion’ from Springburn to here and back 21 June. Was this the original Kilbowie, kept in use for workmen after diversion came into use?

SOUTH HETTON [NE]; line op April or May 1837 (NE), nd Brad until February 1858 but see 1836 A and a platform adjoining line was mentioned in accident report dated 19 July 1844 (Rtn); clo 9 June 1952.

Report of inquest (Newcastle Courant 14 March 1845) referred to death on Saturday, 8th, when a passenger on the Durham & Sunderland had got off the market train at the FALLOWS-FIELD station, hitched a ride on a wagon to Haswell but fallen off on the way. ‘Fallowfield’ is shown on OS maps south of South Hetton; was F-F a local alternative for South Hetton or did market trains go on a little further? – report only makes sense if F-f was terminus or passenger off earlier than intended – drunk? No other reference to market trains on this line has so far been seen.

SOUTH HOWDEN [HB] op 27 July 1885 (op tt NER I); SOUTH added 1 July 1922 (hbl 13th); clo 1 August 1955 (RM September); later excursions, last 30 August 1958 (M Bairstow, Railways in East Yorkshire, Bairstow, 1990, p 60).

SOUTHAMPTON [LSW]

S (NORTHAM ROAD) op 10 June 1839 (Salisbury 17th); temporary terminus made necessary by dispute over crossing Northam Road (Hants Adv 16 May 1840); relation to later NORTHAM (under ‘N’) not known; clo when line extended to >

395
S TERMINUS op 11 May 1840 (Hants Adv 16°); paper called it ‘new terminus at the Marsh’; clo 5 September 1966 (CI). Opened as S, renamed S DOCKS 1858, S TOWN & DOCK 1896 tt; S TOWN for DOCKS 1912 (and thus LSW co tt 1914), S TERMINUS for DOCKS 9 July 1923 (SR); S T 1955 (Brad).

S WEST END op 1 June 1847 (Salisbury 5°) as S BLECHYNDEN (spelling as in Brad, confirmed as local version by T Cooper). Provision of station here was condition of building line but nothing had been done until just before opening; local Council threatened legal action to stop opening so in week prior to opening company hastily put up temporary station at Blechydend Terrace (after the inspector had gone home?). In the event Council had helped them since a tunnel fault meant line to Dorchester could not open from main station and this was used as a terminus; engine and carriages for makeshift opening day service were horse-drawn through the tunnel since it was considered too dangerous to use steam power. First passengers carried through tunnel on what was essentially a test train on 29 July 1847 (Hants Chron 31°); regular passenger use began with night mail of 5/6 August 1847 (LSW). Permanent S B op 1850 (LSW). Renamed 1858; placed, on west side of level crossing by S.

S CENTRAL op 1 November 1895 (Hants Adv 2nd) as S WEST; renamed 7 July 1935 (GW General Instruction Circular, CI pap); CENTRAL dropped 10 July 1967 (BR circular CI pap) but kept, it only, for a while to prevent confusion with Airport, restored 19 April 1994 (AB Chron); still open.

Ticket platform: earliest reference: man without ticket had attempted to make a run for it (Hampshire Advertiser 27 February 1847). Had been moved to bridge under Northam Road (site of original temporary terminus?) (ibid 15 May 1872). Previously between the Marsh and the Itchen Bridge-roads (Christchurch Times 8 June 1872). See NORTHAM, under ‘N’ for rest of story.

S ROYAL PIER: from 26 September 1871 carriages horse-drawn from (Terminus) along pier tramway; 21 September 1876 steam-hauled; 5 mph limit (LSW); report in low CP, 25 May 1889, dealing with arrival of new paddle steamer Solent Queen said that a new curve allowed railway carriages to go alongside steamers; first in Brad January 1891; rebuilt pier op 2 June 1892 (formal) (LSW); clo 1 October 1914 (CI) (Thursday). Prior to 1904 was S TOWN PIER in hb.

Boat trains

Over time many sites in docks used by boat trains. Many changes as facilities extended and improved. Southampton Docks 1933, official handbook issued by Southern Railway, shows large range then. 1947 edition of handbook provided opening dates of Docks (but first passenger trains likely to have used later) and changes since 1933: Outer Dock sufficiently completed for first ships 29 August 1842; completed and officially opened for traffic 1 July 1843. Inner Dock op 1851; much used for troops to Crimean War (1854-6). Newly-married Prince and Princess of Wales taken along dock lines, direct to ship, 10 March 1863 (T 11th).

Old Extension Quay op 1875. Empress Dock op 26 July 1890; cross-channel vessels to be concentrated here, with some bomb-damaged transit sheds to be rebuilt for passengers.

Channel Islands Shed (LSW wt 1909). Union Castle Line Shed (Brad 1909).

Ocean Dock op 1911; used for largest liners; plans for new passenger reception station, berths 43/44. 1933 map shows more than 20 sites marked ‘Cargo and Passenger Sheds’ around Outer, Empress and Ocean Docks as well as on quays along Test and Itchen rivers; more mentioned in description of plans for Western Docks, then being built. Special mention made of Marine Station, serving berths at Quays 7, 8 and 9 Outer Dock and Tender Station at no 50 Berth. Last was for passengers transferred by tender to and from ships calling at Southampton Water but not coming into the port.

New Dock Extension Quay (berths 105-108) finally completed 1934; three pairs of sheds furnished with waiting-room blocks. Pre-war: specials from Waterloo and other SR stations for parties to view docks – refreshment facilities provided within docks. Much troop usage WW II; obviously interruption to civil use.

Plans for future of berth 50 described in 1947 book. U calls this Flying Boat Terminal, used 1948 to September 1958. Regular cross Channel boat train (for St Malo), using Eastern Docks berths 7/8, last 27 September 1964 (SLS Jour, June 1969), after which Eastern and Western Docks only used on ad hoc basis.

Last trains to Western Docks 10 January 1992, by when renamed Mayflower Terminal (berths 105/6). Queen Elizabeth II terminal (previously White Dock/Ocean Dock/Ocean Terminal/Eastern Docks) – berths 38/9 – had a ‘last’ use 14 December 1991 (planned for 16th but IRA bomb at Clapham Junction meant buses used then); used again from 8 May 1994 (BLN 739) for occasional Cunard sailings. Eastern Docks last used for Cunard sailings’ connections in 2004 season but continue to be used as a rail passenger station for VSOE (and other) excursion trains; in current wttts. Western Docks resumed use with temporary platform at Mayflower Cruise Terminal Berth 106 for occasional chartered specials, starting with connection to Queen Victoria on 11 December 2008 (Rail Professional January 2009 and official information via R Maund); last boat train ran 15 December 2012 (BLN 22°).

Internet sources give information about terminal buildings rather than berths, but presumably represent use for boat trains:

- Eastern and Ocean Docks: Ocean Terminal opened 1950, demolished 1983; QEII Terminal (Berth 38/39) opened 1966, modernised 2003; Ocean Terminal (Berth 46) opened 2009 to augment QEII Terminal; Western Docks: Mayflower Terminal (Berth 106) opened 1960; City Terminal (Berth 101) opened 2003.
- Naval Reviews – specials to different sites for official spectactors (S Spec).

SOUTHAMPTON AIRPORT PARKWAY op 1 April 1966 (CI 29) as S A; on site of earlier Atlantic Park Hostel; became S PARKWAY 29 September 1986; S A P 29 May 1994; still open.

SOUTHCOTES (a) op 1 June 1853 (co n Hull Packet 3°); clo November 1854 (Cl).
SOUTHCOATES (b) op 1 June 1864 (item ibid 3rd); new site; clo 19 October 1964 (Cl). Became HALT 4 January 1960 according to RM January but not thus tt; note was added that no staff were in attendance.

SOUTHEASE [LBSc] op 1 September 1906 (LBSc) as S & RODMELL HALT; HALT dropped 5 May 1969 (SR App), & R dropped 12 May 1980; still open.

SOUTHWOLD Swansea [SIT]; op 6 May 1893 (SIT; see 1860 July 25); according to description of opening of Mumbles Pier the temporary station here had been ripped out and a new line provided from Dunns (= Oystermouth, which see) to the Pier (South Wales Daily Post 10 May 1898) so presumably resited alongside then; aot request; clo 6 January 1960; [map 88]. First in Brad as MUMBLES (SOUTHWOLD); M dropped on extension to Pier, 10 May 1998.

SOUTHEND-op-on-Sea

S AIRPORT op 18 July 2011 (RM September); still open.

S CENTRAL [LTS] op 1 March 1856 (co n T 1 March) as S; became S-on-SEA 1 June 1876 (L); CENTRAL added 1 May 1949 (Mid); shortened to S C 20 February 1969 (JS – BR ER commercial of this date said ‘forthwith’); still open.

S VICTORIA [GE] op 1 October 1889 (co n Essex Newsmen 23 September); VICTORIA added 1 May 1949 (RM May); still open. Was S-on-SEA until renamed 20 February 1969 (as above). About 1915 (hbl ref April) became S-on-S for WESTCLIFFE and THORPE BAY; thus LNE tt 1933; ‘for W and T B dropped’ hb 1949a.

SOUTHERNWOOD ROAD [Barry] op 1 December 1897 (co n S Wales Echo 1st); clo 23 October 1961 (RM December).

[Brad May 1913 listed ‘Southernwood bk’ in new openings list and table, where says ‘starts 22nd inst’. However, this was a clerical error, probably started by clerk of Barry Company including horse-brake service from station to village, completed when track converted it to a station.]

SOUTHFIELDS: op 3 June 1889 (Pall Mall Gazette 4th); still open. Op by [Dist] service, though station owned by [LSW]. LSW use began 1 July 1889, ended 5 May 1941, probably, (L); station transferred to Dist 1 April 1994.

SOUTHFLEET [LCD] op 10 May 1886 (Kent Messenger 15th); clo 3 August 1953 (RM September). Hb: 1890 S & BETSHAM (not seen elsewhere); 1904 S for SPRINGHEAD (was thus Brad always).

SOUTHPORT (map 45)

At times its and RCH sources omitted SOUTHPOR from names below; in other cases entry was just SOUTHPORT. E.g.: Brad first added CHAPEL STEET 1855/3, and then only in some tables.

S EASTBANK STREET [Liverpool, Crosby & Southport] op 24 July 1848 (Southport Vis 22nd & 29th); replaced by >

SOUTHPOR [LY] op 5 August 1851 (Liverpool 5th); was S CHAPEL STREET until renamed 5 May 1969 tt; still open.

S LONDON STREET [East Lancashire] op 9 April 1855 (Southport Vis 5th); clo 1 April 1857 (Wednesday) (Southport Vis 2nd); later absorbed into Chapel Street (Cl) – see below for later excursion use.

S CENTRAL [LY] op 4 September 1882 for Guild Week use, fully 16 September 1882 (Southport Vis 5th); clo 1 May 1901 (Wednesday) – Manchester Evening News (10th); Derby Road station closed since first of month, so extra pressure on Chapel Street.

S LORD STREET [Mid; co ½ T 13 August- line]; SHIELD added 1 September 1884 (Manchester Cour 6th); clo 1 January 1917 (T 23 December 1916); tnt for races at Aintree in March 1919 (CLC Portrait); fully 1 April 1919 (RCH); clo 7 January 1952 (RM February).

S ST LUKES [LY] op 1 July 1883 (Ormskirk 5th) as BARTON STREET; renamed S ST L ROAD October 1883 tt (Cl) – according to RAIL 345/282 was renamed ST L 17 July 1883 (correct date but ROAD omitted in error?); S ST L 1 March 1902 (Cl); clo 8 September 1968 (Southport Visiter Saturday 7th – last train tonight). Since 1914 was strictly just ST LUKES. Extended 1902 by adding platforms on loop lines (see S Ash Street, below).

S WINDSOR ROAD [West Lancashire] op 10 June 1878 (Preston G 12th); replaced by >

SASH STREET: Southport Visitor 18 July 1882 said that in about a fortnight the new station at Ash Street Bridge would be completed and the existing Windsor Road station would be taken down, to allow the line to be extended to Central*. According to JS, S WINDSOR ROAD was renamed SASH STREET 4 September 1882; did this represent completion of new station or did latter open as S W? After about 1887 was usually just ASH STREET in tts. During week ending Saturday 23 March 1901 this was replaced by a temporary platform, still called Ash Street in inspection report, short of earlier station, on opposite side of St Lukes Bridge, alongside St Lukes but with separate entrance, plus a temporary connection on to Chapel Street (MT6/1011/9; Southport Visiter, 23 March – ‘this week’); further changes undertaken piecemeal later. RCG gives opening date of 1 March 1902 for Ash Street, presumably meant to be date of completion of work – when temporary platform taken out of use and trains used part of rebuilt St Lukes? Southport G suggests this was gradual process, nearing completion late February 1902.

* = Southport Visiter 2 September 1881 described Ash-street station, generally known as Windsor-road, as formerly terminus and now used as ticket platform and for convenience of passengers resident in this district. Suggests locals saw former as continuation of latter and that changeover was more gradual than dates given suggest.

Excursion platforms: press references erratic in names given but suggest normally only one in town at a time, with one change of site. LONDON STREET / CHAPEL STREET. First / last uses unknown.

Barnsley Chronicle 7 June 1879 used by Sunday school trip 3rd. Just excursion platform at Southport.

Manchester Evening News 9 September 1879 – mention of LY excursion platform in item about theft of watch.

Manchester Courier 2 June 1890 – special train taking Volunteers home to Manchester left ‘the excursion platform’ here (i.e., Southport) on 31 May.

Yorkshire Post 15 April 1899 – advert included reference to London Street excursion platform

Manchester Evening News 10 May 1901 – Miners’ Demonstration tomorrow, many will arrive at London Street excursion platform.

Manchester Courier 17 May 1915 – new excursion platform some distance from Chapel St used for troop departure 15th.
Redcar, to 2 June 1963 or later (C Ryder, Steam Days, May 2000) – not known whether these stopped at intermediate stations; [map 33]. Hb (1862 only) SPENNY MOOR.

SPETCHLEY [Mid] op 24 June 1840 (Chelt Chron 27th); clo 1 October 1855 (Cl); later used for excursions to Spetchley Park e.g. 18 August 1862 for the Bromsgrove Literary and Mechanics’ Institution fete at Spetchley Park (their notice Worcester Journal 16th); [IA goods].

SPETTISBURY [SD Jt] op 1 November 1860 (Dorset Chron 8th); clo 17 September 1956 (T 13th). SPETTISBURY until 1863/4 (Brad); HALT by 1935 (RCH dist ref 2 June) but not thus until July/October 1939 Brad body, though its notices and index July 1938 gave it as such.

SPEYBAY [GNS] op 1 May 1886 (GNS) as FOCHABERS-ON-SPEY; renamed F 1893 tt, F & S B 1 January 1916 (hbl 27th), S B 1 January 1918 (hbl 24th); clo 6 May 1968 (co n Aberdeen Express 5 April).

SPINKS LANE [Norfolk] op 30 July 1845 (Norfolk News 2 August); last trains shown December 1845 Brad. Alterations notice for through service 15 December 1845 (Norfolk Chronicle 13th) omitted it from table but note said first down train would stop on Saturdays to take up passengers; no reference in later press tts seen but possible that market service of sorts did continue. Item in Bury & Norwich Post 13 May 1846 described the adventures of an accident-prone train twice running over bullocks which had jumped out of their trucks, once being near Spink’s Lane station; by the time Stamford Mercury (15th) had the story the station had acquired a clerk, Mr. Wilby; were passenger trains stopping? Unrecorded goods use, needing services of clerk, as at Beam Bridge (hardly needed clerk for occasional passenger service shown in tts?) Press error? Norfolk Chronicle (22 July 1848) described inquest on trespasser killed on 16th near the level crossing at Spinks Lane so unlikely any station there then. [Wymondham – Hethersett].

SPITAL [Birkenhead] op 30 May 1846 (co n Liverpool Mail 30th); moved about 110 yards north between 1877 and 1912 OS maps – with quadrupling of line in 1891? STOCKPORT

For first station see HEATON NORRIS.

S (EDGELEY) [LNW] on 15 February 1843 (Stockport 10th) – see entry on Heaton Norris for more detail; still open. The Manchester & Birmingham company’s notice in the paper said that trains would ‘commence running to and from the SOUTH END of the STOCKPORT VIADUCT’; The Railway Times of 3 June 1843 referred to it as ‘The Edgeley Station’ but no LNW co tt seen added EDGELEY; LY co tt 1899 included it in table showing LNW trains. Brad added it 1953; it was dropped 6 May 1968 (CI);

S PORTWOOD [CLC] op 12 January 1863 (co ½ T 26 February); P added later 1863/1864 (Brad) in Marple table; clo 1 September 1875 (Wednesday) (CI). A little east of TIVIOT DALE, which effectively replaced it. According to Stockport 1 December1865 it would only be a ticket platform after that date but it continued to be shown in Brad without comment.

S TIVIOT DALE [CLC] op 1 December 1865 (Stockport 1st); S TEVIOT D in Mid co tt prior to July 1874 and Brad until 1876 (Mid) but Stockport called it TIVIOT D from start; clo 2 January 1967 (BR leaflet EA49).

STOCKSFIELD [NE]; op 10 March 1835; still open.

STOCKSMOOR [LY]: line op 1 July 1850 (T 5th), in earliest tt seen Huddersfield Chronicle 10 August 1850; clo ?; RM August 1919 said ‘has been reopened’; but trains still shown February, May, June and July 1919 Brad so closure very short, or error – perhaps had been briefly reduced to ‘halt’ status and now full station again; still open. STOCKS MOOR in Brad until 1879/80.

STOCKTON: all companies eventually part of [NE]; hb usually called it S-ON-TEES; [map 39].

Stockton & Darlington

S on 10 October 1825, horse-drawn (co n S&D; see 1825); steam-hauled service began 7 September 1833 from Bridge Road, short of point used earlier; proper station provided 1836 (S&D). This station was used by trains from Darlington until 1848.

Line to Middlesbrough opened at end of 1830 from Bowesfield Junction, on Darlington side of 1833 station; thus trains from Middlesbrough would have had to reverse to reach latter. Evidence from S&D minutes, RAIL 667 series, is that a separate site was used for Middlesbrough trains, usually in minutes as GUISBOROUGH LANE but just STOCKTON in timetables, thus indistinguishable from terminus. It was at/near the site of what is usually described as the ‘1848’ station at Stockton. Stockton town map of the time shows the southward continuation of Bridge Street as an un-named road leading ‘to Guisborough’ (S Bragg). NE, top line p 427, refers to accident at Guisborough Lane, near present Thornaby station. On 29 April 1831 orders were given for a warehouse and cottage to be provided here; minutes imply that it was already in use for transfer of goods to road transport for delivery locally. It would have been fully in accordance with S&D practice for this to be used by passengers before any facilities were provided.

Until 7 April 1834, Middlesbrough passenger trains were horse-drawn; likely that they operated on ‘stop anywhere practicable’ principle used elsewhere on S&D. In such circumstances it would have made sense for some at least of the passengers to alight at Guisborough Lane and walk across bridge to town, rather than go past it to Bowesfield Junction and come back again. Some at least of the trains would have gone on to BOWESFIELD LANE (where a waiting-room had been provided by 11 March 1836) and passengers wishing to go to Darlington would have changed to trains coming out of terminal. Not known whether the option was available for passengers from Middlesbrough to stay on trains to Bowesfield Lane and then be taken to terminus – it would have been easy to reverse ‘train’ by taking horse to other end.

Once steam-haulage was introduced committees seem to have been continually debating how to organise service here: result was much chopping and changing. At least twice they discussed adding a curve at Bowesfield to enable direct running to 1833/6 station, but nothing came of this.

S&D still ran its line in separate sections, each of which had its own ‘coach engine’; only in 1846 did Brad show through trains from Redcar to Darlington. This would have required re-organisation at Bowesfield Lane – either carriages from Redcar would have had to be attached to train from terminus for journey to Darlington, or carriages from terminus to train from Redcar.

Service on Middlesbrough section more frequent than that on Darlington one; thus some trains from former connected at Stockton with first-class trains westward, some with mixed trains and some made no connection. Possible that last sort terminated at Guisborough Lane – on 25 August 1843 they discussed question of bringing Middlesbrough coach trains direct to Stockton station instead of stopping at Guisborough Lane. No evidence has been seen in support of usually-quoted idea that horse-drawn service took Middlesbrough to Stockton passengers on from Bowesfield Lane, but neither does anything seen refute this.

Guisborough Lane was altered/rebuilt several times. Plans for a waiting-room here were ordered 26 February 1836 and on 2 September 1836 they agreed to spend £33 19 11d on providing waiting room at ‘Stockton’, which is likely to mean Guisborough Lane, given the earlier orders and that they had provided facilities at the terminus earlier that year. Waiting-rooms at least had to be re-sited 1838/9 to make way for ‘spouts’ for delivery of coal to William Smith’s pottery. A ‘new station’ was opened 22 May 1846* ‘for the general purposes of the line’ (does this imply through running to Darlington from Middlesbrough? – coincides with tt on this). By 13 August 1847 they were already considering plans for a replacement ‘on the site of the old’. 7 January 1848 orders given for moving redundant wooden station from Middlesbrough to South Stockton for use as temporary; this appears to have been on opposite, west, side of road from the others. Its life during transition from 1846 to 1848 stations must have been brief since on 1 May 1848 they were still debating exactly where to put it. New station probably opened 1 July 1848 – minutes of 16 June said every prospect of it being opened then, but habits of S&D such that this can only be given qualified acceptance. Entrance to this station from lane on south side of line – minutes imply that previously on north side. 1833 terminus was now closed, to the evident displeasure of locals (certainly closed by 28 July 1848 when Stockton Overseers were to be told that station ‘is now closed’).

In its turn, 1848 station was soon ‘inadequate’; in 1853 platforms were widened, but still not enough. 26 August 1856: draft contract agreed for new station to east. This was opened by February 1858, when they were looking for new use for old one. From 1852 stations here generally known as SOUTH S/S SOUTH/S SOUTH SHORE. 1882: replaced again, by station later renamed THORNABY, which see.

* = there is a mention of this as date given ‘by local sources’ in NE Express May 1899, though implication seems to be that this was regarded as alternative to 1848 date usually quoted.

Excursion Platform, only reference seem: Yorkshire Herald 16 August 1862 – letter complaining about Thornaby being overlooked for Yorkshire Show next year said excursion platform there, 337 yards from regular station, 30 or 40 carriages could be unloaded.

Clarence; Stockton & Hartlepool

Some information from NE Express May 1899, and November 1899.

Clarence service began 11 July 1835 (NE: see 1835 A) from point unknown; November 1837, station opened in Norton Road; very soon closed, when service suspended. From 1 May 1838 to (?) there was a contractor’s market day service to and from Haverton Hill/Port Clarence; site used at Stockton end unknown. In June 1838 a steam hauled service to Coxhoe was provided by Stephen Walton under three year contract, again initial Stockton site unknown; station reopened November 1838.

S&H arrived 10 February 1841; by September 1841 (inspection report, Rn) both companies using passenger station built at expense of S&H on land owned by Clarence.

Most services transferred to Leeds Northern station, (below); some use to 1865 (Cl).

Leeds Northern

Station op 25 May 1852; station about ½ north of S & Hartlepool’s, at junction with Hartlepool line; until 1893 generally S NORTH/NORTH S/S NORTH SHORE; still open, as STOCKTON.

Ticket platform, sites and company unknown, only references seem: fatal accident at ‘Stockton’ 23 January 1866 (Durham County Advertiser 26). Minor mishap blocked ticket platform at north end of ‘Stockton’ station; train from Middlesbrough had left passengers at station and went on further so it could reverse to appropriate platform (Daily Gazette for Middlesbrough 27 January 1897).

According to P Horn, Pleasures and Pastimes in Victorian Britain, Sutton, 1999, there was a special ‘halt’ beside racecourse so Lord Zetland and party could alight without meeting ordinary racegoers; would have been east of what became Thornaby.

STOKE CANON [GW]: a market service, Fridays only, to Exeter and back began 13 August 1852 (Western Courier Wednesday 18° – ‘Friday last’); last shown in t Exeter & Plymouth Gazette 28 June 1856 (but last in t Trewman’s 24 April 1856 – no tt 1 May, omitted 8 May tt). Tuesday service to Tiverton added 16 June 1853 tt; last in tt 1 November 1855 (Trewman’s). However, former probably continued, left to local knowledge, as was common with market services: Western Times of 8 February 1862 said that locals had asked BE directors for increased [compiler’s emphasis] service in the form of daily passenger trains; on 22 February it said directors had agreed that ‘for the future’ stations would stop all days. Full service began? Perhaps March? Mentioned in advert Trewman’s 16 April but not in tt until 21 May 1862 – not there 7°. 14th no tt; not in Brad until September 1862. Re-sited ¼ mile south, at junction with Exe Valley line, 2 July 1894 (wtt supp); clo 13 June 1960 (Cl). Hrs: S CANNON (1872 only).

STRANRAER [GWW Jt]

STRANRAER op 1 October 1862 (Northern Whig 2nd) as S HARBOUR. Early use erratic: clo 1 January 1864 as a result of end steamboats sailings to Larne (LW; Thorne, Rails to Portpatrick, 2005). Steamboat sailings and rail connection began again 4 December 1865 (Cal notice Glasgow Herald 24 November); ceased again abruptly in January 1868 – on 28th passengers had already arrived by train and were on ship when telegram from Caledonian head office ordered cessation of service so passengers were unloaded and sent via Glasgow (Newcastle Journal 3 February). Began again 1 July 1872 (item and Cal notice Galloway Advertiser 4th). Still open. STRAP LANE [GW] op 18 July 1932 (GW Mag August); HALT. According to (CI) this closed 6 October 1941, rop 16 December 1946; however, a note amongst his papers in his corrected (but not published) copy of CI 29 says ‘unadvertised stops made for school children’, without making it clear whether this was before or after public closure. Reference to the local press shows that an extra train for winter t from 7 October 1946 would not stop at Bruton or Strap Lane suggests that others must have been since, if it was closed, there would have been no need to say this (Taunton Courier21 September 1946). Furthermore, an item in Wells Journal (27 December 1946) said that following a request from Lt. Col. Boles, M.P. the company had agreed to provide extra trains from Monday 16 December (start of school holidays?). Thus some sort of service must already have been in existence; not known whether it ran just in term-time or all year, at times suitable for schools but available to all. Clo 5 June 1950 (CI); [Witham – Bruton].

SUNDERLAND all ultimately [NE]; {map 29}

S MOOR op from Hetton 19 October 1836 (see 1836 A); service cut back to >

S HENDON op 1 May 1858 (Durham Chronicle 30 April) >

S FAWCETT STREET op from Penshaw 1 June 1853 (T 6th) >

S HENDON BURN [Londonderry] op from Seaham 2 July 1855 (Durham Chronicle 6th); service diverted to Hendon 1 October 1868 (Cl).
HENDON and FAWCETT STREET replaced by >

SUNDERLAND: evening train from Bishop Auckland arrived Sunday 3 August 1879; full use began 4th (NE Express November 1898); Newcastle Weekly Chronicle of time said ‘virtually opened’ (because one train previous evening or because it was a Bank Holiday?). Still open. S CENTRAL in hb 1883 but not seen thus Brad.

Names used above are ones to be found in modern works. The evidence seen defies any simple treatment. Brad called all just S until 1856 or later. HENDON was added for trains from Hetton by 1859; also added by 1865 for [Londonderry] use – modern works say H BURN; Fawcett Street remained in Bishop Auckland table until 1893/94; it used S NEW for Seaham line. HB 1867 had S NORTH SIDE from Boldon (station really Monkwearmouth) and S SOUTH SIDE from Penshier; later, to at least 1938, it showed a separate S terminus for Seaham service. ‘P’ only, (but a through service Seaham to Newcastle was shown in Brad from December 1911, by when Seaham line had been extended to Hartlepool.

Ticket platform, only reference seem accident: stop at entrance to station where tickets collected, then on into station (Sunderland Daily Echo 3 November 1884).

ST PETERS used as temporary station from Sunday 25 February 2001, while engineering work carried out in tunnel; south of MONKWEARMOOUTH (closed 1967); used up to and including 14 April 2001 (Rly Obs June 2001 p 225); op permanently [TWM] 31 March 2002.

S FULLWELL (non-tt): football traffic; letter dated 8 February 1909 (MT 76 1779 7) shows that it had been inspected and approved subject to being advertised in company’s weekly notices, not being in Brad, and being used daylight only; ceased to be used after opening of Seaham, 3 May 1937; [North Dock signal box – Wearmouth Junction signal box]. Special arrangements (non-tt) for Earl of Durham to open High Level Bridge; train from Sunderland stopped at centre of railway bridge for him to declare it open, then to temporary platform at south end of bridge for Earl and guests to walk down temporary staircase to road on lower level, walk to centre of that and declare it open. 9 June 1909 (Newcastle Evening Chronicle 10th).

THE AVENUE [BT]; {map 26}

Perhaps site of station used for service on branch to Seaton Sluice, which see, (BT); however this might have run from Dairy House junction, more than half a mile south (A Young).

THEA op 1 April 1861 (BT) as DAIRY HOUSE; renamed October 1861* (Brad); clo 27 June 1864, and 1872 and 1874 tts (co tts?) show summer Sundays use – perhaps other times (BT).

* = however, it remained D H for Seaton Sluice & Delaval Hall in Wansbeck Co’s tts in Morthop Herald until its closure. There seems to have been some flexibility in use hereabouts: a letter of complaint in Newcastle Daily Chronicle 5 September 1861 said that they had been promised that his party would be dropped off at Crow Hall (about half way between Dairy House and Brierdene Junctions); this promise was broken but on the way from Tynemouth some had been dropped at Hartley Avenue (site?) – would have had to be south of Dairy House since complainant alighted there and found stationmaster unhelpful) and on the way back someone was picked up in the woods somewhere beyond the Dairy House.

THORNTON ABBEY [MS&L; GC]
THORNTON CURTIS / ABBEY: according to Clinker a station called T Curtis last appeared in Brad November 1848 and was replaced by T Abbey ½ mile north August 1849; Col Cobb’s atlas follows this, placing T Curtis in middle of a cutting with no means of outside access apparent on modern map. Evidence seen would suggest that station was always at later site, in continuous use, renamed during gap in tt evidence (relevant tables in Brad were reorganised at both dates, with some detail missing in between).
It opened on or before 18 May 1848 (a Thursday), date on co n, Hull Packet 19th; ... a passenger station has been opened ... at Thornton Curtis, within a Quarter of a Mile of the OLD ABBEY, the magnificent Ruins and Pleasure Grounds of which the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Yarborough [company chairman] has been kindly pleased to throw open to the Public’; clearly aimed at tourists since later adverts emphasised availability to picnic parties. A monster Temperance Gala was held there on 14 August 1848; those arriving by rail ‘sped down a leafy lane’ to the abbey (Sheffield Independent 19th). It was still shown in tt headed alterations for 17 October in Hull paper (20th), which would suggest wider than tourist use but then disappeared from there also, no detailed tables appearing in Hull paper until 1851. The next mention found was for another Gala on 9 July 1849 when Hull paper (15th) described ‘Thornton’ station as a small roadside one (i.e. stopping trains only). Nowhere was there any mention of this as a special use or a new site, though journalists were more interested in the event itself. In any case it would have made no sense for a tourists’ station to be out of use for the time suggested by Brad. Added strength is given to suspicion by hb, which in 1862 just had T, in 1867 T ABBEY OR CURTIS; Macaulay’s maps showed T CURTIS 1851, T ABBEY 1854. Still open.

TRENT [Mid] op 1 May 1862 (Mid); clo 1 January 1968 (RM February).

Earlier there were plans to put a most unusual (unique?) platform for the use of (male only) passengers here. According to a letter to the BoT dated 11 April 1842, following an accident at the junction where the trains from Nottingham waited for those from Derby to join them (on the 9th a man had left a waiting portion and been run over and killed), the Directors of the Midland Counties planned to put a pen around the area where the wait was made so that passengers could not get onto other lines; a platform and urinal were to join them (on the 9th). Other special use included nine trains from Liverpool each day, Tuesday and Wednesday 5 and 6 July 1938 (LMS Railway Centenary, reprinted from The Times of 20 September 1938). Sunday services usually ran from Tunstall. Bank Holiday use to 1942; T PARK until renamed 7 October 1946 (LNW Record); last advertised excursion, from Birmingham area, 25 August 1957 (BR Magazine LM, Staff Journal, December). UPHALL UPHALL (a): A station was built here in 1850 but never used. Returns for 1850 include report of inspection on 18 September. Branch 1,574 yards long; not directly connected with main line at Houston, later Uphall (b); effectively separate line with own platform at Houston, shunting needed to link with main line. At Uphall ‘rails terminate close on the main street’. Safety deficiencies resulted in delay but these were remedied and on 8 November Railway Commissioners sent letter to company saying no further objection to passenger opening. Line was ‘opened for traffic’ (= available for use in this case) on 20 November 1850 but Edinburgh & Bathgate refused to accept it from contractor, who removed rails and sleepers in 1855. The intention had been to treat this as a mainly mineral line, to the stone quarries at Binny / Binnie, but Edinburgh & Glasgow (operators of Bathgate line) and Union Canal had got together to arrange that line stopped at Uphall so that canal would continue to carry stone traffic. The result was much legal argument (also see 1851 November 21). It was included in a BoT Return as not open on 30 June 1858. Line was shown on e.g. Macaulay’s Station Map of 1851. Ordnance Survey, corrected to 1902 for railways, (Caledonian Books reprint) shows a mineral (oil shale) line going a little west of north from beside Uphall station (ex-Houston), skirting Uphall village and then heading off to Winchburgh. There appear to be the remains of a line going straight to Uphall, that would have fitted Wynne’s description, suggesting that mineral line took over part of route. See Caledonian Mercury 14 March 1850, North British Mail 2 April 1852, Morning Post 16 September 1852, Caledonian Mercury 1855, North British Daily Mail 16 February 1856.

UPPER GREENHILL [NB]
Some sort of station here would logically have op 1 March 1848 with line to Stirling (co ½ T 4 September- line); first evidence for it is June 1848 Topham, first time it included line, as SCOTTISH CENTRAL JUNCTION; this was name in Edinburgh to Glasgow table, where it was last in Brad May 1854. Thereafter there were footnote references to connections for the north at Greenhill. December 1850/January 1852 it appeared in Scottish Central tables as G JUNCTION* and it reappeared in the body of the Edinburgh to Glasgow line under this name in August 1855. Intermittently in tt, usage depending on whether connection needed between E&G and Scottish Central services; perhaps, at least at times, exchange only; shown in August 1864 E&G wt as point where carriages for Scottish Central attached/detached; disappeared from Edinburgh to Glasgow table 1861/3 but continued in Scottish Central table, where it was last in Brad September 1865, by when it had appeared as G UPPER JUNCTION/G UPPER – result of that company’s amalgamation with Caledonian?; [map 11].

* = note that Caledonian’s GREENHILL JUNCTION at first appeared in Scottish Central tables, Brad and Murray, as CALEDONIAN JUNCTION.

UTTOXETER [NS] {map 58}
At first three stations, which Brad did not show separately until approx 1866; its one entry was usually U JUNCTION after 1849; same in co tt reproduced in The North Staffordshire Railway, Manifold, 1952.

U BRIDGE STREET op from Stoke-on-Trent 7 August 1848 (Staffordshire Advertiser 4th); paper said station not begun, at present using lodge [for level crossing keeper] at Marchington Road, a little south-east of town; assume station built here later.

U DOVE BANK op from North Rode via Leek 13 July 1849 (Staffordshire Advertiser 14th) >

U JUNCTION op 13 July 1849 (assumed date, line as above) – needed as interchange but also general use according to local press; closed in May 1881 - article in Staffordshire Daily Sentinel 22 September said new curve allowing trains to run to Bridge Street had been passed by inspector and brought into use in May, ‘since which time trains have run from the Churnet Valley line ... to Bridge-street’. Curve opened 6 June (Churnet Valley Railway, B. Jeuda, Lightmoor, 1999) so paper apparently ran inspection and opening together. Co n ibid 27 June of alterations for July said ‘has been closed for traffic’, presumed to be a reminder, no earlier notices seen.

Bridge Street and Dove Bank listed separately in hb and shown on Junction Diagrams; no mention of Junction in hb and only physical junction shown on diagrams (exchange only/mainly?).

All replaced by UTTOXETER op 22 September 1881 – Daily Sentinel (evening paper) 22nd ‘opened to-day without ceremonial’, supported by Derby Daily Telegraph Saturday 24th ‘opened Thursday’; still open.

According to WL perhaps temporary [HC] station here, alias NORLAND, about 1864; shown on Crutchley’s London area map about this time, at/near site of later Latimer Road. HC co ½ (London Evening Standard 24 February 1865) said that temporary station had been ready since middle of August [1864] but not opened because GW not prepared to provide service; letter West London Observer (10 March 1866) said station near Norland Road had been built but when GW took over it had been removed to help build one at Westbourne Park (which see).

WALSALL

For first ‘Walsall’ station see BESCOT BRIDGE.

WALSALL [LNW] temporary in Bridgeman Street, op 1 November 1847 (Rtn); replaced by permanent 9 April 1849 (Cl); see 13 August 2017; still open.

Ticket platforms, both sides, alighting allowed to both at least part of time:

West of station: earliest reference seen – Walsall Free Press Saturday 27 February 1864: last Sunday just after train from Rugeley had passed wall on west or down side of line fell; ticket platform crushed. Ibid Saturday 22 March 1873: on Monday evening train from Wednesbury at ticket platform near Bodley’s Crossing (replacement on same or different site?) hit by train from Birmingham. Walsall Observer 4 October 1902: memories of an old railwayman – there was a ticket platform between here and Ryecroft; many would feel the loss of the indulgence of being allowed to alight here (Walsall Observer 19 March 1881). Probably permanent: Ibid 25 November 1889 – some years ago ticket platform here.

Both used in time of floods at main station, then prone to this: e.g. at Ryecroft (main station); floods; passengers by road from station to Bodley’s Crossing on the south and to ticket platform in Littleton Street (Staffordshire Advertiser 24 July 1875). Also seen: references to ticket platforms at New Mills and Long Street – assumed to be alternative names for one / both of above.

Was original station at Bridgeman Street kept for this purpose?

WALSALL WOOD [Mid] op 1 July 1884 (Mid); clo 31 March 1930 (Mid).

WALSDEN

WALSDEN (a) [LY] first in Brad October 1845; south of level crossing; clo 7 August 1961 (RM September).

WALSINGHAM

WALSINGHAM [GE] op 1 December 1857 (Norwich Mercury 5th); clo 5 October 1964 (RM September).

W SHRINE [LNE] (non-tp): used 1930s for pilgrimages; [Walsingham – Fakenham] (U).

1950s excursion trains for visitors to shrine ran to W itself; however, on return passengers picked up at W and SLIPPER CHAPEL HALT. Latter was occupation crossing near shrine; no station, passengers joined via portable steps; only evidence in Special Traffic Notices (B Wilson, memory from days in Central Timing Office at Liverpool Street).

WALSOKEN

[EC]: op 1 February 1848 (Stamford Mercury 4th); last in tt August 1851; {map 66}.

WALTHAM near Grimsby [GN] op 1 March 1848 (co n, item Hull Packet 3rd); W & HUMBERSTONE until 1852/3 (Brad); clo 11 September 1961 (RM September).

WALTHAM CROSS [GE] op 15 September 1840 (T 16th) as W; became W C 1 December 1882 (Cl); re-sited from north side of Waltham Lane 1885; was W C & ABBEY 1 May 1894 to 20 February 1969 (Cl); still open.

WALTHAM-ON-THE-WOLDS [GN] (non-tp): in GN tt for 11 years from May 1883 (and briefly in Brad, e.g. July 1883) but no trains ever shown calling. It was used for specials for the Croxton Park Races, usually held one day late March / early April: earliest use was 30 March 1882 when ‘the new slip line to Waltham’ carried many hundreds (Grantham Journal 1 April); this continued through to 1914, same paper (4 April 1914) reporting use on 2nd; most years many excursions ran but in 1912 only one long train from Grantham, carrying at most 50 people ran, to the detriment of the attendance (ibid 13 April). GN II p 100-1, III p 139; specials authorised by BoT for Waltham Fair 17-19 September 1882; these continued for many years. 4 April 1889 at least eight specials were provided for races, from Nottingham, Grantham, Leicester and Northampton (G Goslin, Goods Traffic of the LNER, Wild Swan, 2002); occasional use for military training camps at Croxton (Leic.).

Hand-books have ‘P’ from 1883 on; 1941 appendix, first since 1938, now parcels only (inertia?).

Sources suggest correct railway usage was as above: Brad September 1883 index, GN wt 1 July 1888 (-WOLDS x 12, -WOLD once), earliest Junction Diagram seen (1885?), AvonAnglia facsimile (published ?) of GN’s *Table of Stations, Signal ..... and all press adverts seen; –WOLD version seems to have originated in lack of space and copying this form thereat.

WALTON JUNCTION [map 50]

WALTON JUNCTION (a) op 5 May 1857; clo 15 October 1857. Dates of Manchester Art Treasures Exhibition; station in Brad May to October (inclusive), service to Exhibition from Chester and back via Warrington Arpley.

WALTON JUNCTION (b): Warrington Arpley to Chester service started 1 March 1858 (T 4th); part of inter-company warfare between LNW on one side and GN and MS&L on the other – latter intended to provide route linking Chester with their service from London to Manchester; hampered by direct and legal action by LNW who did not want competition, so one cannot be sure how regularly service ran. Service appeared in Brad May (when things had settled down?) to August (inc) 1858, only in Warrington & Stockport table, not Birkenhead. W J only intermediate station shown. Clo 1 September 1858. Warrington & Stockport notice (T 30 August) said service would be suspended in consequences of ‘obstructions put in way’ and ‘false information constantly given to passengers’ to Birkenhead company. No evidence that it ever resumed.

During first use might have operated predominantly as exchange station. Cannot have been so in 1858, when it must have represented said service would be suspended in consequences of ‘obstructions put in way’ and ‘false information constantly given to passengers’.

During first use might have operated predominantly as exchange station. Cannot have been so in 1858, when it must have represented attempt to tap custom of its thinly populated area. Would have been at/near junction between line from Arpley and the Birkenhead line. Probably [Warrington & Stockport] station; perhaps joint with [Birkenhead]; least likely that latter were sole owners.

W BANK QUAY HL [LNW], on West Coast Main Line, op 4 July 1837 (T 6th); re-sited to act as interchange with line from Widnes to Broadheath 16 November 1868 (co n Liverpool 14th); still open. LNW co tt included B Q erratically (1852 W JUNCTION); in Brad it was added 1870/1 in east-west table, later in main line table.

W BANK QUAY LL [LNW] op 16 November 1868 (co n Liverpool 14th); only night mail after 10 September 1962 but unadvertised use continued until diverted from this route 4 January 1965 (wtt; PSUL).

HL and LL not always used for BANK QUAY; were on e.g. Junction Diagrams; in hb 1872 but not thereafter.

From Widnes to temporary W WHITE CROSS [St Helens] op 1 February 1853 (T 16th) > From Broadheath to temporary W WILDERSPOOL [Warrington & Stockport] op 1 November 1853 (T 17 October) >

Gap between two lines above closed 1 May 1854 and W ARPLEY [LNW] opened, replacing both temporary termini (co n Warrington Guardian 29 April). However 16 November 1868 WILDERSPOOL (had been kept as ticket platform – Need) reop to passengers* and ARPLEY closed (Bank Quay LL opened now); ARPLEY again replaced WILDERSPOOL 1 October 1871 (LNW Officers 6924 – Sunday, but was Sunday service). ARPLEY clo 15 September 1958 (LNW Record).

* = LNW Officers 4728, 20 October 1869, recommended that 7.50 and 1.55 from Manchester London Road should call at ‘Warrington Ticket Platform’ for ticket collection and passengers for Warrington should be allowed to leave the platform. This suggests was not regarded as full station.

Not found in sample of LNW Officers 6924. Possibly WILDERSPOOL closed 22 June 1963 until 5 September 1964 (last); later excur.

WAVERLEY – see EDINBURGH.

WAVERTON [LNW] first in Brad November 1846 but mentioned as first station when others in carriage could tell staff that a man had jumped out on 4 February 1846 (Bradford Observer 12th; BoT Rm listed accident but did not give location); re-sited 41 chains west 6 June 1898 (co ½ Rly Times 13 August); clo 15 June 1959 (RM July). Pre-opening Black Dog.

WAVERTREE [LNW] op 1 September 1870 (LNW Officers 5672); clo 5 August 1958 (LNW Record). Originally to be called Wellington Road but minds changed before opening. Hb 1891a renamed to W & EDGE HILL but 1895 book confined this to goods station.

WAVERTREE LANE [LM]: line op 17 September 1830+, nd, 1 January 1831 (possible that it opened after practice of taking passengers by road to Edge Hill, first site, which had ceased ?); logically would have been replaced by Edge Hill (second site), 15 August 1836, when service diverted to Liverpool Lime Street; however, Freeing gives impression that it did last a little longer and company minutes 29 August 1836 said it was to be discontinued, so both apparently briefly open together.

WAVERTREE TECHNOLOGY PARK op 13 August 2000 (Rly Obs October); still open.

WEAR VALLEY JUNCTION [NE] would logically have opened with Wear Valley branch 3 August 1847; earliest mention found is September 1847 co tt (not in Brad until July 1848). However, evidence suggests trains stopped here before branch op – normal for S&D and to have some sort of stop before proper provision made for passengers. Line through here op 1844 (see 1843, references to Crook). Minutes of Bishop Auckland & Weardale, line owners, 17 October 1845, say they thought a shelter should be put up at ‘the Valley Junction’ for passengers from ‘Witton-le-Wear and places adjacent’, suggesting trains already stopping to pick up people who had walked down from Witton. S&D deferred decision until course of Wear Valley line had been marked out (implies willing to provide shelter before branch actually built). Also, 29 April 1847 S&D (operating company) minutes gave instructions for painting nameboard for here; other boards ordered then were for stations already open, and doing things like this three months in advance (case if W V J opened with new line) was not normal S&D practice. Clo 8 July 1935 (Cl). At first JUNCTION in Brad;
1861 became WITTON J (GW); 1874/5 Brad added a separate line for branch line departures, keeping WITTON J for main line, using WEAR V J for branch; 1882 settled on W V J. In NE co t 1880 was WITTON J in branch table, W V J main line.

WEARMOUTH DOCK (non-tt): some passenger use, full dates not certain; Brandling Junction notice headed ‘WEARMOUTH BATHS AND DOCK’ (Newcastle Courant 19th) said that there would be two trains each way from Gateshead to the Dock Branch Sundays 14 August 1842; co n ibid 2 September said that service would continue on 4 September (last?) owing to its popularity. Presumably trains divided at junction since travellers to Wearmouth were also carried.

WEARMOUTH op 19 June 1839 (NE p 327; co n Newcastle Journal 22nd) – notice and item in paper called it MONKWERMOUTH; clo 19 June 1848, replaced by Monkwearmouth (co n Newcastle Journal 17th); [map 29].

WEASTE [LNW]: line op 17 September 1830, no early detail; this/nearby site briefly open 1831/32 as GORTONS BUILDINGS; (re)op autumn 1832/1 September 1838 (Drake), perhaps use intermittent; clo 19 October 1942 (Cl). Early Brad, LNW co ts was WASTE LANE/WEASTE LANE/W L GATE; settled 1856 tt (JS).

WEAVERTHORPE [NE]: line op 8 July 1845, op as SHERBURN; renamed WYKEHAM 1 April 1874 (Cl), WEAVERTHORPE 1 May 1882 (RCG); clo 22 September 1930.

WESTBOURNE PARK
Ticket platform for Paddington probably hereabouts (would have been nearer to original Paddington than present one). Earliest reference was to start of express service from Exeter: yesterday covered 194 miles in 4 hours 53 minutes to ticket platform, and reached station in prescribed 5 hours (London Evening Standard 11 March 1845). Building new engine-house at Kensal Newtown, about half mile from terminus and but a short distance from ticket platform (Morning Post 10 October 1853). Certainly one hereabouts in 1857, when mentioned in connection with a fire in a GW carriage on 9 October; ‘Salamander’ (letter T 12th) referred to stop ‘near Kensal Green’ and there was a reference to one (un-named) in Col Yolland’s report on the incident. Children of Westbourne Schools allowed to use ticket platform near school to watch train of Princess and Princess of Wales pass after their marriage (Birmingham Daily Gazette 9 March 1863). Since 1st had been through carriages from Windsor to Metropolitan line; attached to London train at Slough and taken on by Metropolitan from ticket platform to Farringdon Street (Windsor & Eton Express 3 October 1863). An application for license for house adjoining GW ticket platform in the Great Western Road (Morning Advertiser 20 March 1869) would suggest slightly different site from station proper, given information about that in entry below; or did this become the temporary station?

WESTBOURNE PARK [HC]: temporary station was ready for use mid-August 1864 but GW would not provide service and it did not forthwith); still open.

WESTON RHYN [GW] first in Brad November 1871 as PREESGWEEENE, on site of earlier ‘PRESGWYN’ (and that in Brad for first month) but almost certainly opened earlier: ‘will be opened shortly’ (advert Wrexham Advertiser 20 May), certainly used 20 July for laying foundation stone of Welsh Presbyterian Chapel (advert ibid 15th) and 10 August for fete at the Quintin (item ibid 12th) and no indication in either case that this was a special use so probably in regular use by then. Renamed by 25 February 1935, when change advised by GW General Instruction Circular. Cl pap); clo 12 September 1960 (CI). GW co t 1902, 1932; P for W R. Hb 1877 and 1883 PREESGWYN. WESTON-SUPER-MARE [map 123].

WESTON-SUPER-MARE [GW]: first station was branch terminus on Alexandra Parade op 14 June 1841 (GW; Taunton 16th main line); replaced 20 July 1866 (Weston 21st) by new terminus on opposite side of road from later Locking Road (behind Odeon Cinema of later days); replaced again by new through station on loop line 1 March 1884 (Bridgwater Merc 5th); still open. GENERAL added 21 September 1953 WR b. Cl pap, dropped 6 May 1968 it (office).

W-s-M JUNCTION [GW] op 14 June 1841 (GW; Taunton 16th line): often just W J in tts (space?). Early tts tended to include just ‘Weston’ in the tables; inspection of mileages and timings shows that this sometimes, especially westbound, equalled ‘W Junction’. Most branch ‘trains’ horse-drawn until 1 April 1851. Clo 1 March 1884 with branch.
W-s-M LOCKING ROAD [GW] excursion platform here will be ready for Whitsun excursions (W-s-M Gazette 3 June 1854); 1,120 feet in length, will take 46 carriages. New one provided when loop line built. Bristol Mercury 26 February 1884 said about 430 yards long, approached from Locking Road, about same distance from town and beach as old one. First used Easter Monday, 14 April 1884 (Western Daily Press 15). Increasing patronage (15,000 detrained here Whit-Monday, ibid 2 August 1904) meant that it became inadequate; ‘miserable accommodation’ (W-s-M Gazette 12 August 1905), complaints about lack of cover from rain (W D Press 12 August 1905). In case concerning claim for damages for being pushed off in crush (Bristol Mercury 4 July 1908), the assistant divisional engineer said it was 1,104 feet long of which 764 feet was 24 feet wide, rest 11 feet 9 inches. Although it was not given a separate name by officialdom until much later, even when a new excursion platform and lines opened 8 April 1914 at Weston (Bristol District diary, RAIL 253/534), it is clear that locally it was regarded as a separate station since adverts in the local press (premises for sale in Locking Road were ‘opposite the excursion station’) and a complaint about wet feet as a result of the road from it to the town not being made up; it had its own conveniences (soon added), booking office and refreshment room (provided in 1861). Will be used today for first time since outbreak of war (Western Daily Press Monday 6 August 1945); later used as overflow for regular services in summer (when L R added?); last train Saturday 5 September 1964 (only Saturday trains advertised 1964).

W-s-M ASHCOMBE ROAD [WCP] op 1 December 1897 (Bristol T 2); clo 20 May 1940 (Bridgewater Merc 22) A R was added 1905 (Brad). Non-tt platform for Bristol Aircraft workers; op 16 April 1941; clo ?; [on main line just west of site of earlier Junction station] (Maggs).

OS 1 inch (sheet 61, 1933, revised 1938) shows Halt beside next road to west of site shown in Cobb; this would fit position shown for Stretton Westwood Quarry signalbox, RAC Atlas, p. 71. Was this really Stretton Westwood, with map-maker confused and so adding it wrongly as new Westwood Halt? Sheet 129, published 1947 had it in right place.

WINWICK QUAY [GJ] op between June 1831 and 4 July 1837. Not in Brad until about August 1840 (final attempt to find custom for poorly used station?) but existed from line opening (Drake, 1838). Drake’s statement is ambiguous because W Q is on section of line opened as Warrington branch in 1831, but he was writing about Grand Junction, which incorporated this stretch, 1837. Since casual nature of station was more in keeping with habits of LM, which operated line until 1837, probably safe to assume it opened before 1837 but not safe to say in 1831. Decision to close taken 25 November 1840 (RAIL 220/3) and immediate closure could have occurred; main committee was rubber-stamping suggestion from sub-committee. Cl says clo 28 November 1840 (Saturday) – last day!; it was still shown in Brad early 1841 – inertia?* {map 50}.

WIRKSWORTH [Mid] op 1 October 1867 (Mid); clo 16 June 1947. WOKING [LSW] op 21 May 1838 (Salisbury 28th†); still open. W COMMON in opening notice; in early days that and W used indiscriminately, e.g. – in December 1842 Brad W in table but notes have reference for passengers going west of W C. JUNCTION was used similarly; there were occasional references early in Brad: e.g. W J one way November 1848. The hb made it W J in 1904, back to W 1914a and there are RCH references to a return to W about April 1913 but it was not thus in Brad at that time. It was W J in wtt 1909 but not wtt 1857, public tt 1914. Brad 1913/14 to 1955: W for CHOBHAM.

WOLVERHAMPTON (map 98)
For first station of this name see WEDNESFIELD HEATH.

WOLVERHAMPTON [Shrewsbury & Birmingham] temporary at Wednesfield Road, on down running line just outside LNW station, op 13 November 1849 (see 1849); continued to be used until opening of Stour Valley line as ‘drop station’ for passengers wishing to continue journeys by GJ (M Hale, Chron December 1996) but effectively replaced by >

WOLVERHAMPTON [LNW] op 1 December 1851 (co n Aris 1st†) by [S&B]; also used by Stour Valley trains from 1 July 1852 (Staffs Advertiser 3rd†); still open. Originally W; QUEEN STREET added September 1853 in announcements and fare tables but not always public tts – was in LNW co tt 1875; alias W GENERAL (local press); Hb added erratically – in LNW co tt from 1875/82 while LMS tts at times W in main line tables, HL for connections; HL dropped 7 May 1973 (LMR WON). Hb: 1862 W; 1863a Q STREET same as W; 1895 W MILL STREET but this should have been applied to goods only; 1904 W HL.

Ticket platform: earliest mention seen – Chester Chronicle 15 July 1834, item about LNW obstruction of Shrewsbury train. Birmingham Daily Post 8 July 1863: collision at ticket platform on 6th, light engine into back of train from Liverpool. *The ticket platform at which the train was standing, although at the down or end of the station, was known as the up platform’ [result of stopping before station]. Last seen – Manchester Evening News 29 July 1884: item about stone on line.

W LL [GW] op 1 July 1854 (Wolv Chron 3rd); LL added April 1856 co tt (W Mid), 1872 hb; clo 6 March 1972 (RM April).

Ticket platform. only reference seen: Wolverhampton Chronicle 28 May 1862: man fell out of carriage between Priestfield and here – just before tunnel opposite the old ticket platform. [Had any replacement been provided?]

W STAFFORD ROAD [Shrewsbury & Birmingham] first in Brad October 1859; probably clo July 1852 following accident, though isolated reference in Brad March 1854 (error?); [probably at site of later Stafford Road Junction].

Also at/near Stafford Road from November 1854 to end 1859 there was an exchange platform for attaching carriages from HL to northbound trains from LL (no service in reverse direction); no public access and no reason for passengers to alight here.

WOLVERTON [LNW]

WOLVERTON op 17 September 1838 (T 18th); re-sited 17 chains south early – inspection report of May 1843 refers to ‘the new Wolvertone station’ – dealt with alteration of access roads desirable after re-siting; again re-sited, on deviation, 1 August 1881 (Cl); still open. LNW co tt 1875; F for STONEY STRATFORD. LNW co tt 1882, LMS tt 1930 and Brad/BR tts W for STONY S; for S S dropped 7 May 1973 (LMR WON).

EARLSTOWN (non-tt): U; p 14, refers to running of workmen’s trains to Wolverton railway works here but gives no details.

WOOMBOURN [GW] op 11 May 1925 (hbl 56); clo 31 October 1932 (RM January 1933); perhaps later annual church excursions*, certainly ambulance trains 1944-5 (Woombourn); [map 96].

* = book refers to these for ‘1930s’ but no explicit post-1932 mention.

(Non-tt): Temporary platforms:

Summer 1865 Queen Victoria went to Continent, embarking (7 August) and returning (8 September) at T Pier, Woolwich Arsenal. Train taken from just east of Plumstead to pier on line laid during Crimean War. Chief officials of SE worried by state of track and tried to dissuade from using on return. Paper said permanent line would be laid for her use (was it?). (T 7, 9 August, 5, 9 September).

One opposite Royal Gun Factories for visit of Tsar Alexander II 20 May 1874 (Globe 21st). According to John Bull (23rd) it was so that he might not be shocked by the disreputable character of the other stations. Another 7 March 1879 ‘close to pier’ for embarkation of troops from Aldershot to replaces losses in Zululand (Salisbury & Winchester Journal 8th).

Another would be at Dial Square on 22 March 1900 for Queen Victoria to alight on visit to various parts of the Arsenal; she would leave by road to visit the Herbert Hospital at Shooters Hill where many casualties of the Second Boer War were being treated before/with 11 September 1961 wtt onwards). YEALAND [Lancaster & Carlisle]: stop here for Saturday market trains to Lancaster and, more briefly, Kendal; only in notices of local press, where tts tended to be erratically shown, especially for market trains. This entry assumes that gaps in appearance were the result of this. First seen in tts Lancaster Gaz May 1848, at first service both ways, soon reduced to one from Lancaster only (walk home from Carnforth? Stop if required?). Westmorland Gazette showed latter service to November 1852; in December 1852 relevant service terminated at Carnforth. Yealand did not get its trains back when service again extended to Oxenhome April 1853, but continued to be shown without trains for some time after. Also shown for Lancaster Races 5 and 6 July 1848. Site unknown; would have been north of Carnforth (Yealand Conyers about two miles north, Yealand Redmayne about three). (See article by C Holden, Cumbrian Railways, vol 7 no 8). Probably source of error that made Carnforth into ‘Carnforth-Yealand’, though local press tts sometimes used this form.

Line notes in chronological order

These notes are intended to cover two sorts of items, though inevitably there is some overlap between them. One consists of early lines that had passenger services of a kind that would not be classified as ‘normal’ by later standards; the other of lines where it makes sense to put notes once here rather than enter them for each relevant station. The notes are arranged in chronological order so that the addition or deletion of items will not upset or complicate the whole arrangement. Some of the early items have more in common with those in Section 7 than those in Section 4 but they are included here to illustrate the way rail services evolved – a further justification for chronological order. In order to provide some sort of reference date, approximations have sometimes been given; the text gives more exact information. Where a year-only reference is given in Section 4, the item here will be found at the start of the relevant year. Some of these are arbitrary dates in that they cover a selection of matters that are most conveniently dealt with in one place: ‘1904’ and ‘1905’, covering erratic use of ‘Halt’ are examples. Stops mentioned here that never had a ‘normal’ service are not always included in Section 4.

Occasionally, there is more than one item for the same date. These are only brief ones so no attempt has been made to give a separate reference with a, b, etc since there should be no difficulty about finding the one needed.

Here the company cited is normally the one that opened the line.

1807 March 25. Oystermouth: Swansea to Mumbles. Based on G Gabb, The Life and Times of the Swansea & Mumbles Railway, D Brown (Cowbridge), 1987. The date above, usually quoted as the opening date, was the date from which Benjamin French contracted to pay rent for a year for the use of the line for a horse-drawn service from the Brewery Bank, Swansea, on the Swansea Canal, to Castle Hill, Oystermouth. 25 March is a conventional quarter day so that the service might actually have begun on a different day – perhaps somewhat earlier, with payment on an ad hoc basis. The contract had been drawn up in February 1807. No evidence on stops; presumably anywhere convenient. Gabb shows service was maintained by various contractors until at least 22 July 1826 when S Llewellyn advertised reduced fares for his ‘Tram-Road Car’. The fare-cut was probably the result of increased road competition as new turnpikes made road travel easier. As a result the service probably ceased within a year or two of the advertisement. A couple of Prussian mining specialists, C von Oeynhausen and H von Dechen visited this country in 1826-7; according to them ‘in the summer months a kind of coach runs on [the line], in which about 20 passengers are drawn by one horse’ (English translation of Railways in England [sic] 1826 and 1827, published for the Newcomen Society by W Heffer & Sons, Cambridge, 1971). For reopening, see 1860 July 25, below.

1809. Severn & Wye. Opened for goods 1809. Little detail known but in 1817 it prohibited people from riding on the wagons, except unloaded ones. In 1821 it fixed a toll for Samuel Holder & James Ward to run a ‘Pleasure Tram drawn by one horse’ and this seems to have kept running for several years (Baxter, work listed end Section II).

1812 August 17. Opening of first part of Monmouth Railway; probably completed early 1817 (Companies). 3 ft 6 in horse-drawn plateway linking Howler’s Slade in the Forest of Dean with Coleford and Monmouth. Act of 1810 included rates for passengers; however, no evidence, e.g. from trade directories, that any service was ever available (H Paar, RCHS Journal July 1965). Part later used by Coleford, Monmouth, Usk & Pontypool Railway.

1818. Kilmarnock & Troon (see GSW). Opened for goods 6 July 1812. Passengers were carried by 1818 when an irregular horse-drawn service was being run by William Wright of Kilmarnock. According to PP 1 (1838-9) company had never run passengers on own account and Act did not allow them to levy duty on individual passengers. ‘A few carriages for the conveyance of passengers travel on the line and a small tonnage is taken for each time the carriage passes, estimating so many persons to constitute a ton’. Also see Robertson, pages 21-5. Service ran from what was later called St Marnocks Depot at Kilmarnock to Troon Harbour. Intermediate stopping arrangements unknown. Closed 20 July 1846 for conversion from original 4 ft 6 in gauge to standard. Reopened 1 March 1847 (Greenock Advertiser 9th), with deviations. See Section 4 for details of separate stations.

1822. Sirhow(e)y Tramroad. 4 ft 2 in line from Newport to Tredegar. Private carriers provided horse-drawn service from 1822. By 1826 a scale of charges had been laid down. All services ceased after company said that it would haul all traffic with its own steam engines (notice given 13 May 1850). In 1851 company probably ran a short-lived service of its own from Tredegar to Nine Mile Point. Route later used by standard gauge service, station details in Section 4. See GW and 1850 December 23 (below). 1850 notice given by Monmouthshire company: until then, two had been effectively treated as one; would only have applied to common stretch, south of Nine Mile Point.

1825. Stockton & Darlington (Basis – S&D; S&D Pass). Celebrated steam-hauled run from the foot of the Brusselton Incline, near the Masons’ Arms, Shildon, via Darlington to Stockton on 27 September 1825 was really a publicity stunt, combined with the exercise of legal rights and should be treated as a formal opening. Immediately after this, line was goods only, much horse-drawn. Regular passenger service only began on 10 October 1825, between Stockton and Darlington, horse-drawn. Darlington to Shildon added April 1826. At first services were provided by contractors, different operators starting from different inns at the two ends; for example, an advertisement for The Union coach said it would start running on 16 October 1826 and would utilise the Black Lion Hotel and New Inn Stockton, New Inn Yarm, Black Swan near Croft Branch Darlington (4th). The first ‘trains’ consisted of a single coach designed for 6 passengers inside and 20 outside (on top). Early stopping places were mostly where line crossed roads: e.g. Aycliffe Lane, Fighting Cocks, Goosepool and Yarm branch end. At or near the site of the later Aycliffe Lane / Heighington station S&D built a house big enough to include booking-office and space to deposit parcels; they advertised for a tenant for this ‘new-built’ dwelling in Durham Chronicle 12 May 1827, promising to apply for a license; this was let to Mr. Turnbull but the licence was refused (ibid 15 September 1827) although many were said to be waiting for coaches there; licence was granted following an appeal (ibid 24 October 1829). A similar request had been made (and refused) in 1827 for a house built at Skerne Bridge, Darlington, opposite the company’s depot.

Extension to Middlesbrough from Stockton was formally opened 27 December 1830 (steam-hauled); public services began soon after (see MIDDLESBROUGH, Section 4); horse-drawn, provided by contractors.

There were so many accidents caused by unofficial use (riding on engines and empty coal wagons in defiance of rules and earlier warning notices) that a stern public notice was issued in The Durham County Advertiser on 27 April 1834 saying that men would be stationed along the line with power to haul offenders before J. Ps.

In 1833 contractors were bought out, preparatory to introduction of steam-hauled services. Trial steam-hauled services began 7 September 1833, Stockton to Darlington; regular steam services began 1 October; extended to Shildon and St Helens (later West Auckland) in December 1833 (S&D says 1 December but that was a Sunday and earliest timetables seem show no Sunday service) and to Middlesbrough 7 April 1834. Even when these were introduced, passengers continued to be picked up and set down at any convenient point; proper stations were only introduced after a year or two.

Some horse-drawn private contractors’ services lingered in addition to the company’s. The 1840 Return (RAIL 1053/1) says that most trains were loco-hauled but also mentions ‘Horse coaches worked by different individuals – number uncertain, principally on Sundays’. The last of these was a Middlesbrough to Stockton and back service for church-goers; this ceased in 1856.

Details of stops were still not given for some time after services had become ‘regularised’; even company’s own tts (RAIL 981/477-8) seem to lack detail. Even the minutes are often unhelpful. Fare table for ‘1840’ (RAIL 667/611) lists: Middlesbrough; Newport; Stockton; Yarm branch [end?]; Fighting Cocks; Darlington; Aycliffe; Shildon; St Helens. S&D and linked companies often opened a ‘station’ then added platforms, passenger shelters and other facilities piecemeal so there are references that could be interpreted to mean provision of a new station or improvement of existing one.

Shildon was not in Brad until about August 1840, then only in reference to a Monday market train for ‘passengers and cattle’, though trains to St Helens could have served it; it was included for all services from about October 1840.

Two temporary stations were used by visitors to 1925 Centenary celebrations. FAVERDALE (Darlington Works) used July 1 (for opening ceremony of Exhibition) and July 2 (for visitors to Historic Procession). GRANDSTAND (about half-way Dinsdale/Uralay Nook) used 2 July only (from programme issued by LNE). See 1843 for note on service beyond Shildon.

1826 A. Brecon to Hay; Brecon Forest Tramroad (separate lines, included together for convenience).

Brecon to Hay opened goods 7 May 1816. By 1826 company had laid down rate of passenger tolls.

Brecon Forest Tramroad ran approximately from Sennybridge to Gornos with branches and the connecting Palleg tramway from Cwm Twrch; built 1820s onwards; parts at least were used for trips to market. (S Hughes, The Brecon Forest Tramroad, The Royal Commission on Ancient & Historical Monuments in Wales, 1990).

1826 B. Redruth & Devoran. Line opened 30 January 1826 for goods. Closed ? (Still in use Cornishman 24 June 1915; in past tense Western Morning News 30 June 1931.) Built to carry tin and copper. Miners carried to and from work, often riding on the wooden blocks which acted as buffers. Visiting mining agents and other officials allowed to travel in goods wagons, being made honorary traffic inspectors to get round rules (DB Barton, Redruth and Chasewater Railway, published by author, Truro, 1960). Accident on ‘Truro railroad’ (probably this line) in July 1838 when man who had been travelling on top of wagon loaded with copper jumped off before it stopped; his frock (smock?) caught in wheel, he was dragged under and cut in half (T 25 July/Exeter Flying Post).

1828 A. Duffryn Llynvi & Porthcawl. Maesteg to Porthcawl and Bridgend; opened to goods 1828 – 1830 (formal opening on 27 September 1830). Company certainly allowed individuals to ride on their trams on top of their goods if they wished. On holidays and special occasions boards were placed across seats and trains run. No regular passenger service was ever operated. (HJ Rendell, Bridgend – The Story of a Market Town, Mid Glamorgan County Libraries).

1828 B. Monklands area railways. (Basis – MK and Garnkirk). There were a number of early short-lived services whose history has not been fully established, particularly in regard to ‘stations’, though the horse-drawn services are unlikely to have had any.

8 July 1828: trial horse-drawn service Airdrie Lea End to Kirkintilloch Basin. Not certain if it continued for any length of time.

8 August 1828: formal opening of Ballochney Railway by directors. They rode in the company’s one-horse passenger coach along MK and then own line via Kipps Colliery to Ballochney Colliery and also along Clarkstone [sic] branch. Two temporary stations were used by visitors to 1925 Centenary celebrations. FAVERDALE (Darlington Works) used July 1 (for opening ceremony of Exhibition) and July 2 (for visitors to Historic Procession). GRANDSTAND (about half-way Dinsdale/Uralay Nook) used 2 July only (from programme issued by LNE). See 1843 for note on service beyond Shildon.

1 August 1831: Airdrie Lea End – (The) Howes, near Coatbridge – Gargill, later Gartsherrie – Glasgow St Rollox. This was a combined MK and Garnkirk service. At first horse-drawn. After a few months locomotives used for Gargill – Glasgow part. Connecting service (perhaps added later in June) from Calder Iron Works to Gartsherrie. Latter was probably soon discontinued. Description of ‘full’ (formal) opening on 27 September (Caledonian Mercury 1 October) made no mention of intermediate ‘stations’ but habits of these early lines such that this does not prove none existed. Accident report (Scotsman 10 July 1833): after carriages parted from engine as usual at the eastern end of the line they were drawn by horses to Gartsherrie ironworks where they stop to leave passengers going in the direction of Coatbridge. Co n of same date (Caledonian Mercury) gave hours of starting to Gartsherrie Inn and Lea-end near Airdrie to Glasgow. On 27 December 1837 (‘Wednesday week’ – but since information copied from another paper, perhaps previous week again) one of the drivers of the [horse-drawn] passenger wagons between Airdrie and Glasgow was killed while passing Kipps Colliery (Inverness Courier Wednesday 3 January 1838/Glasgow Argus). Report of accident on 9 June 1842 said passenger trains were then being horse-drawn from Gargill for about two miles along MK line (Rt). Competition from new lines caused Howes (February 1843) and Lea End (18 May 1843) to be closed but Gartkirk to Glasgow portion continued in use; by now this was linked to the Wishaw & Coltness (see 1835 C).

Summer 1832: advertised weekly services from Cairnhill Bridge (near Calder Iron Works) and Clarkston to connect with the Airdrie to Glasgow trains. Discontinued by mid-October 1832.
In addition to the advertised services, more casual passenger arrangements also existed on this line. At one time (exact dates unknown) it was normal practice to attach a small passenger wagon to coal trains (laden and unladen) for the use of anyone who wished to use it; no timetable was involved. There were also workmen’s services: an accident occurred on the Ballochney Railway (later part of the Monklands) to one taking workmen from the coal and iron pits east of Airdrie to Rawyards on 10 February 1840 (Reading Mercury 22nd / Glasgow Chronicle). [Ballochney] The carriage of passengers was first shown in Returns for first half of 1845 but Robertson shows that passenger duty was paid every year from 1836; MK passengers were lumped in with those of Garnkirk and Slammanan companies. In a law case described in Caledonian Mercury 26 July 1849 it was stated that anyone could put wagons or other carriages on the line on payment of authorised dues.

Late 1839: horse-drawn service Lea End – Kipps – South End (probably alternative name for The Howes) – Chryston – Kirkintilloch Basin. This probably ceased 1840 or soon after.

5 August 1840: Glasgow – Causewayend.

26 December 1844: Airdrie Hall Craig – Kirkintilloch (exchange station with Edinburgh & Glasgow Railway).

The carriage of passengers was first shown in Returns for first half of 1845 but Robertson shows that passenger duty was paid every year from 1836; MK passengers were lumped in with those of Garnkirk and Slammanan companies.

1829 A. Aberavenny to Hereford. These two towns were linked by the Llanvihangel, Grosmont and Hereford Railways, opened in sections for goods between 12 March 1814 and 21 September 1829. By 1829 a rate of tolls for passenger use of line had been laid down; passenger duty paid 1838 to 1842 at least (PP 2). No locomotive engine; proprietors do not convey passengers; ‘there are on market days some tram-wagons which convey market people who live along the line’ (PP 1. covering 1838-9 – Hereford to Monmouth Cap described as tram-road, extension of Grosmont and Lanqua lines). Closed 20 April 1853 and later used as basis for orthodox railway (RA Cook and CR Clinker, Early Railways between Aberavenny and Hereford, RCHS, 1984).

1829 B. Caernarvon to Nantlle. 3 ft 6 in tramway opened for goods 12 July 1828. Irregular passenger service from Carnarvon Quay began –? – perhaps December 1829. Advert in North Wales Chronicle 4 November 1845 for sale of estate in the parish of Llanllynfi said it was within a few hundred yards of this line along which regular conveyances to and from Carnarvon ran several times a day. Official service began 11 August 1856 from Carnarvon Castle, with intermediate stations at Bont-Newydd; Pwlheli Road; Groeslon; Pen-y-Groes (G&Sc). Line closed 12 June 1865 for reconstruction. Notice Carnarvon & Denbigh Herald 17th said traffic transferred from that date to Mr John Morton of the Royal Sportsman Hotel who would run omnibus service from Carnarvon to Penygros, Nantlle, Llanllynfi and Portmadoc and back. Most reopened standard gauge 2 September 1867 (see below) as part of line to Afon Wen; Llanwnda replaced Pwlheli Road; Nantlle reopened later (full station details in Section 4).

1830. Pentewan. 2 ft 6 in line from St Austell Bridge to Pentewan Pier for carrying china clay. Advert in Royal Cornwall Gazette 4 July 1829 said it was complete and ready for transport of stone. On return journey passengers got off at Tregorrick, short of St Austell since wagons ran complete on under gravity, too dangerous to stay on. Certainly used by ‘passengers’ by 17 June 1830 when Trevanion has description of line in use: 20 persons sometimes seen riding on wagons at once. Annual Sunday School parties carried free in clay wagons to Pentewan (photograph p 8. A Fairclough, Cornwall’s Railways: a Pictorial History, D Bradford Barton, 1974). RM July 1399 has photograph of trip 8 July 1915 Wesleyan Sunday School trip; says line closed 1916.

Ceremonial opening 3 May, public 4th. Changing mixture of locomotive, stationary engine and horse haulage. At first ‘stop anywhere’ policy; fixed it introduced by manager Joshua Richardson (date ?); passengers could join/leave trains at Tyler Hill, Clowes Wood or Bogshole (had to buy tickets before joining (Hart); report of accident inquest (T 29 October 1840) refers to passenger joining train at Tyler Hill Engine House. Returns (RAIL 105/3) early 1840s say fare 6d for whole distance or more than half, 3d for half or less; no separate train for passengers. Taken over by SE: closed 6 February 1846 for relaying with stronger rails (I Maxted, The Canterbury & Whitstable Railway, Oakwood, 1970). Line reopened, fully locomotive-hauled, from SE’s own station at Canterbury 7 April 1846 (T 13th/Dover Chronicle) – but see note on Whitstable Harbour entrance, section 4.

1830 September 17. Liverpool & Manchester (Basics – LM). Ceremonial opening 15 September 1830 (T 17th – mostly concerned with accident to Huskisson). One train Liverpool to Manchester and back (full fare) on 16th, mostly used by members of the Society of Friends to and from annual conference. Regular use started 17th. However, there was some sort of partial earlier use: Manch Cour (3 April 1830) said that when directors gave pleasure parties permission to visit the ‘moss’ a horse-drawn carriage was provided.

No details exists for the initial intermediate stops; Walker’s Accurate Description of line at time of opening says fares for intermediate stops had not been settled, implying that initially there might not have been any. Walker makes it clear that Crown Street was terminus but said many passengers would start their journey from Edge Hill, to which they could be taken by omnibus from company’s office in Dale Street (to avoid incline from Crown Street, which was worked by a stationary engine). This arrangement cannot have lasted long because the omnibus services quoted in timetable below appear to converge on Crown Street.

Descriptions of the formal opening mention various stops for refuelling and setting people down but do not include mention of anything identifiable as a station (see LM for detailed description of day).

Earliest information is in co n Liverpool 24 December 1830 for service from 1 January 1831. Next is company’s tt for 1 March 1831; two versions of this are at Kew (RAIL 981/226, 227); former issued from Liverpool office, misleadingly catalogued as February (was issued 25 February, to come into force 1 March), latter from Manchester (also co n in local papers). Then come a list taken from company’s minutes of 26 September 1832, quoted in TJ Donaghy, Liverpool & Manchester Railway Operations, 1831-1845, D&C, 1972 and co n for alteration of fares from 11 October 1832 (result of imposition of passenger tax) (Gore’s Liverpool Advertiser 11th). None of these showed times at intermediate stops but did list stops in fare tables. Brad 19 October 1839 did give full list but then switched to outline tables; detail again January 1846; since when continuously available. Many early changes of stopping place and name, so the early history of intermediate stops is patchy. At first, trains stopped at, e.g., level crossings, where the gatekeeper issued tickets; perhaps a room of his cottage was available as shelter. Gradually the ingredients of a ‘station’ as we know them were added – e.g. in 1841 platforms and name boards were added to places lacking them.

Report of accident on 28 February 1835 (T 2 March) refers to ‘Chat-moss station’. Probably paper’s name for one of known stations (e.g. Lambs Cottage) but possible that it was used by LM itself at one time for one of its stations.
1831 A Edinburgh & Dalkeith. Includes material from: D&C 6; Ed & Dalk; Edin; MJ Worling, Early Railways of the Lothians, Midlothian District Libraries, 1981; articles by ES Lomax (original in Edinburgh Room at city’s library) and MJ Worling (1988); correspondence from D. Cattanach, D. M. E. Lindsay and D. Yuill. All press references from Scotsman unless otherwise attributed to CM (Caledonian Mercury) or another named paper.

Map evidence suggests might have incorporated part of the Edmonston (or Newton) Railway. G Dott, Early Scottish Colliery Waggonways, London, 1947, mentions talk of a possible purchase about the time the company got its Act but also says there is no clear evidence to show that it did buy. Map of Edinburgh & Environrs, 1838 shows Edinrgh & Dalkeith bulging to the west, just north of Millerhill, as in map showing the Edmonston in Dott’s book. It also seems that some alteration to the course of the line was made between 1838 and March 1844, when the NB produced a map showing its plans for line (a map derived from this is included in D&C 6).

It would seem that stretches of line were put into use as soon as they were available and someone had a use for them; the line was initially treated like a toll road rather than the railway it would gradually become. Anyone could pay toll and put his own vehicles on the line, without any distinction between goods and passenger use. Not enough evidence has been seen to provide a coherent history so the following is episodic in form.

All were 4 ft 6 in gauge. Services horse-drawn and railway noted for casual ways and frequent stopping places. Letter from Mr. Erskine, company’s manager in CM, 3 September 1832, said six operators were running passenger coaches. There were complaints of drivers racing one another and overtaking on double-line stretches; one such incident led to accident reported ibid 4 October 1832. Rivalry also meant that intending passengers were harassed outside the deports by drivers badgering them to buy tickets for their coaches. Services so profitable that company soon added its own and, then, took over completely.

Note that ‘station’ was now being added in some cases.

First section opened? – co n 23 April 1831 gave rates for use of line; it showed that more than 5 miles were in use and included carriages containing passengers. The basis was use to and from St Leonards Depot, with no other ‘end’ listed; however, special regulations were given for vehicles on the Fishersrow branch so part of that was in use; rest later 1831. Line extended to the Craighall Collieries, between Niddrie and Millerhill, 4 July 1831: co n 6th said line now open and made it clear that no coal other than that carried by the company would be allowed into the St Leonards Depot; not known if any other restrictions applied to use of this stretch. On to South Esk/Dalhousie in October 1831.

In 1839 evidence was given to Parliament that it did not then issue tickets because there were so many stops – and many passengers would not state their destination. Whishaw (about 1840): ‘Besides the terminal stations, there is a half-way stopping place, which is at the divergence of the Leith branch [presumably Niddrie]. It is to be observed that the driver stops to take up or set down a passenger wherever required’. Early Returns said of passenger trains: ‘All one class: accommodation much the same as common stage coaches but roomier’. Return for second half of 1840 mentioned Edinburgh; Musselburgh; Leith; Dalkeith as termini. Others referred to journeys as ‘passages’. Confirmation of line’s habits given in accident report about woman killed 20 May 1842 – she ‘imprudently leapt from the coach while in motion without having warned the driver to stop’ (Rin).

The condition last would suggest that irregulars would be denied access to St Leonards, ‘from where the line descended 116 feet by a 1 in 30 inclined plane 1100 yards in length ... partly in a tunnel 600 yards in length.’ (Ed & Dalk).

Co n 16 March 1833 said it was ‘proposed to run Light Carriages from the termination of the Company’s line along that of the Marquis of Lothian’s to the Arniston Estate, the romantic beauty of which is scarcely surpassed in Scotland’; was the last part of the trip by road or was there a short private line at Arniston? An article (17 July 1833) about pleasure trips: line had been extended almost to Arniston and many after leaving the South Esk station, coaches pass the Lasswade Road Bridge (one mile from Lasswade, half-mile from Dalkeith), seven minutes pass the North Esk, ten minutes pass Sheriff-hall. No certainty that this was start of service but previously adverts for Lasswade properties had mentioned road coaches only.

Service to Leith opened in instalments. Began? CM, Monday 24 April 1834 – ‘we understand’ line to Seafield will open in 14 days, presumably only first part. 11 August 1834: Fox put on ‘an extra coach’ from St Leonards to Portobello at 6 a.m., to return to St. Leonards by 8 a.m., at the request of certain gentlemen who wanted to go sea bathing (his advert + item 9th); this was discontinued after Saturday 13 September, as was service to Sheriffhall (advert 10th) – had latter always been summer only? Even if Fox stopped running on these lines, that possible that others continued to do so.

18 May 1835: Fox began full service to Portobello (5 each way) and said would run oftener once line to Leith complete (advert 9th).

17 July 1835: opened to Seafield station near Leith; to prevent delay, passengers asked not to straggle along the line but wait at Bonnyrigg Depot (only reference seen for this – goods depot, with South Esk as passenger station? Latter was shown as South Esk station in part of notice), Lasswade Bridge, Sheriff-hall, Millerhill, Redrow, Niddrie station or Portobello station; Annfield Inn and Bowling Green reached by stairway from railway at Lasswade Bridge (co n 15th). Clearly now all-year service (e.g. adverts for December 1835 service). Note that ‘station’ was now being added in some cases.

14 May 1838: Leith coaches start from end of Bath Street, South Leith (co n 12th).

Further opened early June 1838: during present week service extended to foot of Constitution Street (9 June) – but article in same paper said extended from Seafield. Line almost complete (14 July).

Co n, 1 August 1838 gave details of Sunday service, coaches now to The Shore South Leith. The Sunday service, which applied to the whole system, immediately fell foul of religious interests – co n 11 August: service will not run on 12th.
Line to North Esk/Dalkeith, opened 26 November 1838 (co n CM 24°) – ‘will land and receive Passengers at the High Street of Dalkeith’.

Various notices concerning goods and parcels in CM suggest developing arrangements but do not help determine passenger facilities. Caimie, shown on early maps as station, was probably a goods depot: only reference found was advert for sale of dung from Cairnie Depot in Edinburgh Evening Courant 1 December 1832; was Redrow the passenger equivalent? A coal depot was established at Sheriffhall by 23 February 1835; 8 July 1837 parcels were to be handled via Mrs Johnson’s (?) at Sheriffhall; 3 September 1838 parcels at ‘station’ Sheriffhall – but for Musselburgh at Miss Boughill’s (?) Library.

In 1847 (after the NB had taken over) line was converted to standard gauge. No exact information exists about the dates of closure of the various sections. Edin says that public demand led to maintenance of a roughly two-hourly service until June 1847. Co ½ 27 February 1847: traffic on Dalkeith branch much obstructed by alterations; trade almost stopped for a considerable period. On double-tracked line service could have been maintained by dealing with one line at a time, bringing the deviations into use as they went along. Some services could have been maintained by operating in sections, with change of train at Niddrie. If changes were made on a day-to-day basis, allowance has to be made for this in any interpretation based on monthly timetables. St Leonards had some use after regauging but most services now ran from Edinburgh Waverley. Item CM 28 June 1847 said that principal deviations were at Dalhousie and Millerhill.

Steam was introduced between St Leonards and Niddrie and Fisherton on 1 February 1847 (co n 30 January) and co n 27 March, complete with picture of steam engine, gave times for service from 1 April to Fisherton. This poses problems; would this have been the case for the latter, given that the last section of this would shortly be abandoned and change of gauge as well as motive power needed? None of the trains to Fisherton served Portobello, suggesting that junction with new connecting line from there had yet been made. Item in Edinburgh Advertiser 18 June 1847, said that up to then passengers had been locomotive hauled only as far as Stoneyhill; this can just be seen in Col Cobb’s Atlas on page 545, printed over by ‘FISHERROW JUNCTION’ and would fit such a contention, but the paper’s item treated extension as a way of taking steam closer to Dalkeith. Was an alternative means of transport provided for the rest of the way? Was short-lived station on main line (Fisherton b) regarded as alternative? Were Fisherton folk treated in the same way as those of Dalkeith later in the year? Was one track still available for horse-power (goods would have been more difficult to move from one means of transport to another than passengers)?

Co n CM 21 June 1847 gave details for trains to Musselburgh; Dalkeith and Dalhousie; Leith, from Wednesday 23°. Article Scotsman 26° confirmed that line to Dalhousie had opened to steam power then (but CM 28° said this had happened on Thursday, presumed error); also said line to Dalkeith had been given up and passengers were now taken further south and left to walk; still not connected at Portobello. Angry letter dated 28 June (7 July) said that on the Wednesday passengers had been left to walk to and from Gallowshill; this paper also carried co n for reopening to Dalkeith for goods on 7 July. Reopening to Dalkeith and opening to Gorebridge on 14 July 1847 given in co n CM 150°, confirmed by item 19°; Dalkeith passengers to North Bridge, Musselburgh still connected to St Leonards.

For later history, see individual stations in Section 4.

1831 B. Dundee & Newtyle, and associated lines. Based on: Dundee; Newtyle.

16 December 1831: passenger service began running from ‘The Engine House at the Law of Dundee’ to ‘The Engine House at Hatton Mill, near Newtyle’ (poster quoted in Dundee). These points were probably those later described as Top of Law and Top of Hatton/Hatton. Trains were initially horse-drawn, with a stationary engine working trains up and down the intermediate Balbeuchly Incline. After stationary engines had also been installed on the Law and Hatton inclines, a full service from Dundee Ward/Ward Street to Newtyle began 3 April 1832.Locomotives were introduced in 1833. Gauge was originally 4 ft 6½ in.

No continuous list of stops exists. Newtyle has list of advertised stops in July 1836 and a fare list for 1846; Topham gave detail in May and June 1848 only; Brad gave date from March 1851 but at times earlier (e.g. see March 1850) omitted or just gave passing mention as footnote to e.g. Perth and Forfar table. It is particularly difficult to determine stopping arrangements at the Dundee end. According to the description in Newtyle, Top of Law; Back of Law; and Crossroads were different points (all ‘offsets’ = halts), though all in a half mile stretch. They appear in the sources just quoted as follows:

Top of Law: at opening; 1846.
Back of Law op May 1833 ? (Newtyle); then present July 1836; May, June 1848; July 1854 to July 1855, Fridays only.
Crossroads op 3 April 1832 (Newtyle); then present 1846; May 1851 to April 1853.
One possibility is that there was some sort of alternation with Top of Law and Crossroads in use at some times and Back of Law at others. Another is that ‘Top of Law’ and ‘Back of Law’ were used indiscriminately for the same site; even if Newtyle is wrong about this, Top of Law; Back of Law; and Crossroads cannot all have been alternatives for one site. Position further complicated by fact that incline haulage would have made a stop necessary at Top of Law, even if one was not in tt.

Co n Dundee Advertiser 18 June 1847 said passengers points were Dundee, Offset at Back of Law, Baldovon Station, Baldragon Station, Foot of Balbeuchly Inclined Plane, Top of ditto ditto, Auchterhouse Station, Newtyle.

Further along line, matters more straightforward, but continuous use of particular stops not certain.

Bolton to Leigh opened formally 1 August 1828; some passengers carried; then goods only for a while. A party travelled at least part way along this line on 15 September to see the opening of the Liverpool & Manchester (report of accident to one of them, March Cour18°). RAIL 981/226 – see 1830 September 17, above, includes a table that would suggest the line was then open. However it is clear from a series of extracts provided by H Jack from The Bolton Chronicle that this was a premature entry. The line opened for goods from Leigh to Kenyon Junction on 3 January 1831; this was described in paper of 8°, which said that line would be open for passengers in about a fortnight. This was over-optimistic and another false alarm probably accounted for the March tt item. A party was taken to Newtyle Races on 2 June. Full public opening 13 June (paper of 11° had clear announcement to that effect, paper of 18° reported it; paper of 2 July gave total of passengers carried from June 13 to the end of the month).

Paper of 25 June quoted fares for Chowbent (= Bag Lane, Atherton) and (West) Leigh. Brad did not give detail until May 1847. See entries in Section 4 for Chequerbent and Daubhill; but Bradshaw Leach (later Pennington) was in use by the first half of 1846 (Huish List). Given the operating practices of the LM, there might have been other short-lived stops.
1832 A. Mansfield & Pinxton (article by JA Birks and P Coxon, RM July 1949). Service operated from about 1832 to 1848, from Mansfield Portland Wharf to Pinxton Wharf. At first, William Epperstone, landlord of the Boat Inn, Pinxton Wharf, advertised a Thursday market coach to Mansfield and back. Wheatcroft later became the chief carrier on the line and probably operated a fuller passenger service. Line was bought by the Midland, improved and part used for an orthodox service, opening from Nottingham to Kirkby 2 October 1848. From then until 9 October 1849, when the Kirkby to Mansfield section reopened, a two compartment horse-drawn carriage was run from Pinxton to Kirkby to make connections with the Midland line. See individual stations in Section 4.

1832 B. St Helens & Runcorn Gap. Probably opened for goods from St Helens Junction to St Helens 2 January 1832; to Runcorn Gap (Widnes) on 29 August 1833. The locals asked for a passenger service and in September 1832 terms were agreed for a horse-drawn service from the Junction to St Helens, which probably began later that year (list in LM’s minutes, quoted in 1830 September 17 above, included St Helens Junction, suggesting line was then in operation). In September 1833 Company hired two LM carriages for a locomotive-hauled service St Helens to Runcorn Gap. One carriage ran from St Helens to the bottom of Sutton Incline and the other from the top of the Incline to Runcorn Gap; passengers had to walk the Incline. If there were only two or three passengers they had to ride on the engine’s tender (LM). (Note: there were two Sutton Inclines hereabouts, this one and the one on the LM’s own line. No intermediate details were given in the tt until June 1852.

1833 A. Charlestown, later Elgin: see West of Fife. Dunfermline was provided with a link to Forth steamers; bidders also found this useful. Began 31 October 1833 from foot of Pittencrieff incline near Dunfermline to Charlestown, just short of the harbour. From 10 March 1834 (probably) it ran from the Dunfermline station at Nethertown. Returns for first half of 1842 (RAIL 1053/1), say ran twice daily in winter, four times in summer, no intermediate stops. Service was suspended during last week of October 1849 for conversion of gauge from 4 ft 1 inch to standard. All services horse-drawn until 1853, when steam was introduced for minerals. In June 1853 line was inspected with view to attaching passenger carriages to steam-drawn mineral trains; permission refused. The NB took over on 1 August 1862; their improvements to route meant that at Charlestown end a replacement station had to be provided half a mile from Charlestown, leaving passengers to walk the rest of the way along the old line (27 October 1862). This deterred custom and services ceased 30 September 1863 (last day). Line later used as basis for standard service – see Section 4.

1833 B. Stratford to Moreton. See J Norris, The Stratford & Moreton Tramway, RCHS, 1987. 4 ft line, horse-drawn. Opened from Stratford-upon-Avon to Moreton for goods 5 September 1826. Passengers taken by licensed carriers 1833 or earlier. According to PP 1, ‘the road is open to the public on payment of tolls … company are not carriers … Some of the waggons have a licence from the company to carry passengers, for which they pay £1 per month and I believe they generally receive about 1d per mile per passenger’. Duty first shown for year 1833 (PP 2).

Branch to Shipton opened to goods 11 February 1836; no evidence for early passenger use. Closed for improvement early 1853.

Reopened 1 August 1853 with ‘trains’ between Stratford; Shipstone [sic]; and Moreton (one each way, no intermediate stops shown in Brad). Still horse-drawn, contractors. Scheduled service probably ceased October 1858 but still some use by passengers in company’s passenger van attached to irregular goods trains; book includes description of trip about 1877 with passengers seated on a load of bricks. No stations as such: went via Ilmington (Junction); Newbold (Wharf); Alderminster; Alsport (Park). The Shipton section was later used as basis of an orthodox railway (see Section 4).

A Derby paper of 29 May 1833 said private carrier, Wheatcroft had taken license to carry passengers from Cromford to Whaley, Nottingham Review of 21 June 1833 said passengers were now carried and a carriage to Manchester was provided by same carrier – suggests a recent provision. Certainly still in use late 1839; on 7 December there was an inquest on the death of an infant killed when its mother jumped out in panic when the horse stumbled. The jury gave a verdict of accidental death but said that the carriages were not fit for the purpose and in future a heavy deodand (species of fine) should be levied (Derbyshire Courier 14 December). Perhaps this warned the carrier off. Certainly in 1842 the Board of Trade was assured they were not carrying passengers; not shown as paying passenger duty up to year ending 5 January 1846 (last figures seen).

Inevitably there was casual use. The Evening Mail of 11 October 1833 described an accident to a ‘mixed train’ of loaded and unloaded wagons: two passengers had been killed in an accident on the Middleton Plane. The ‘engineer’ had ordered them to walk the plane but they had jumped back into a wagon when he went off to work the machinery.

The Company began to provide a regular service, following a new Act permitting them to charge for passengers, in 1855 when it ran from Cromford to Ladmanlow, with a ‘bus’ connection to Buxton. This seems to have been preceded by at least one trial run in 1854. Probably summer only at first; passengers supposed to walk the inclines. Co½ meeting T February 1856: directors said did not intend to make much preparation for passenger traffic until Stockport, Disley & Whaley Bridge was opened. This would be 9 June 1857, but if timetables are any guide it did not make much change there.

The best way to show ‘stations’ (for want of a better word) seems to be to tabulate from the scattering of detailed information available. Marshall shows company timetables for 2 July 1856 (a) and 6 April 1874 (d); a revised timetable for 4 January 1869, following the opening of the Hurdlow Deviation Line, is included in LNW Officers 3916 (c). Some of the names listed in these tts might well have only been timing points. Sites along line were first included in hb 1863a (result of LNW taking over line?) and by definition would have been available to all ‘trains’, though at that time books only listed names, without indication of ‘goods’, ‘passenger’ etc (b).

The 1863 list also included Stone Company’s Junction and Middle Pit Junction Pits (both between Cromford and Longcliffe) and Horwich End New Wharf (Ladmanlow/Whaley Bridge). One or more of these might be in detailed list under another name.

All three timetables only show one train per day each way covering the full length of the line. The number of passengers was small and they were carried in a coach (the ‘Fly’) attached to goods trains. Returns were first provided in 1856; only in that year did the total of passengers exceed 1000 and by 1861, the last year independent returns were provided, the total was down to 121. No return was provided for 1862, and in later years any passengers carried would have been included in the LNW’s total. Service never in Brad and not sanctioned by BoT; passengers carried at own risk.

Closure resulted from collision between two mineral trains 17 December 1875. BoT report pointed out that carriage of passengers not authorised. Decision taken soon after but service allowed to continue, Mondays and Saturdays, to end of May 1876, for carriage, free of charge, of workers of Buxton Lime Co (to give them time to make other arrangements). See letters from G Webb and D Hodgkins, RCHS Journal, July 1989 p 415-6 and March 1990 p 5). Another book on the line, by A Rimmer, Oakwood, 1985, quotes a letter describing a journey in August 1877, saying that the service ceased soon after that, as the result of an accident. However, this was based on oral evidence given a little while later and speaker’s memory may have been at fault over date; some details are clearly wrong. Or just possible that far from Euston a little local initiative continued?

A third book, by IC Coleford, Irwell Press, 1996, says that there is some evidence for a service of sorts from Buxton to Friden 1892 – 1899.

The section from Parsley Hay to Hindlow was used, much improved, as basis for a proper service in 1894 – see Section 4.

18 June 1932 excursion arranged by Mather & Platt went from Manchester to Friden; special permission given for use of vestibule stock for section Parsley Hay to Friden.

1834. Ardrossan. Line opened by the Ardrossan & Johnstone Railway from Kilwinning to Ardrossan in 1831 for goods traffic (GSW). Passenger service began ?; duty first paid 1834. 4 ft 6 in gauge; horse-drawn. In 1840 it was converted to standard gauge and connected to main Scottish system, steam-hauled; Return (RAIL 1053/1) gives 17 August 1840 as date of opening (really, reopening). This was probably the re-start of a local service from Kilwinning to Ardrossan; report of accident (T 5 December 1840) confirms daily service then running Ardrossan to Kilwinning in connection with trains to Glasgow; Robinson, about August 1841, says “The trains of the Ardrossan Railway correspond with those of the Ayr Railway at Kilwinning”. It was also used then as part of a route from Glasgow to London; Glasgow to Ardrossan by rail, to Liverpool by steamer and on to London by rail again. Trains first ran in connection with this steamer connection on Thursday 20 August 1840 (GSW). No details of early stops known. Even after 1840, treatment in Brad is patchy; at first usually only mentioned in connection with through services from Glasgow, two or three days per week, even services to Glasgow being omitted (time dependent on steamer’s arrival?). First detail provided March 1850; even then years before Harbour and Town stations at Ardrossan were separately identified.

1834 March 24. S&D: Lands branch. Horse-drawn service began. Only irregular mentions have been found, so continuity until 1858 service cannot be confirmed. Indeed, references to ending in 1847 of service to St Helens/West Auckland, with which it was linked, would suggest that it was not continuous (S&D Pass).

1834 September 22. Leeds & Selby. Details of opening from Leeds Mercury (27th). Only one train each way on first day (only one track had been laid); most, if not all, passengers went to Selby and back for the novelty. No references to any stations, but gave times ‘exclusive of stoppages, which were nine minutes.’ Two each way on second day; on the second trip they stopped at Garforth to set down a man living there, the engine refused to restart and they were dragged back to Leeds by horses. Paper listed ‘places at which trains stop to take up and set down’, with fares; Cross Gates; Garforth; Roman Road and Micklefield [presumed two stops at same fare, second being Micklefield]; Milford; Hambleton. It did not give any indication of how these ‘places’ were marked. Said ‘real opening’ would come on 15 December when second track would be available and goods would be carried. Paper of 13 December confirmed that target date met. Co n for opening to York, 30 May 1839*: now ‘stations’included ‘At Junction near South Milford’, Micklefield, Garforth.

Line Leeds to Old Milford Junction closed 9 November 1840 (co n Leeds 7th); passengers sent via Methley (Hambleton not affected by this). Not back in tt until November 1850 (G&S) but probably reopened some time earlier. York & North Midland Board meeting on 17 May 1850 resolved that 3 passenger trains be run per diem, Sundays excepted, between Leeds and Old Milford Junction on Leeds & Selby line.

A market train ran earlier – see 1837 A, below. Start of this perhaps provided by a garbled item in The Eastern Counties Herald of 25 March 1841 (a Hull paper), which says that in a few days it was intended ‘to start a train from Sheffield, direct for Hull, to reach the latter town before market-hours, and to return after they are over.’ No route then existing would have allowed such running. However, it then says ‘for some time past, the trains from Leeds for York and Hull have left the station in Hunslet-lane together’ and the information would make sense if ‘Leeds’ replaced ‘Sheffield’.
* = date from n Leeds Mercury 18 and 25 May; in both issues a notice on another page gave 29 May but this said 29th was a Thursday when it was actually a Wednesday; it seems to have confused formal and public openings – Yorks Gazette (1 June) gave an account of what was clearly a formal opening on the 29th.

1834 October I. Bodmin & Wadebridge. On 4 July 1834, usually quoted as opening date (but correct date given by LSW 1968), all that happened was that an engine and carriage were tested by being run about 4 miles from Wadebridge and back (W Briton 11th).

Some ‘passengers’ travelling against the engineer’s wishes on another trial, 16 July, were injured when the carriage was derailled (R Cornwall Gaz 19th).

The first authorised passenger usage found was 15 September 1834, when about 150 of the people of Wadebridge were treated to a ride to Bodmin and back – they seem to have been used as guinea-pigs to test the working of the system (R Cornwall Gaz 20th); the same paper carried a notice that the railway would be opened to the public on 30 September (really a formal opening). The day’s proceedings involved a journey from Bodmin to Wadebridge, with a detour to Wenford Bridge and back on the way. Strictly, Wadebridge – Wenford Bridge was main line, but regular passenger services were confined to the Bodmin – Wadebridge line; however early activities of line not as simple as this.

The first fare-paying passengers were carried on Wednesday, 1 October 1834 (Company’s Day Book, RAIL 57/10). On that day 26 were carried ‘from the junction’ (with Wenford Bridge line, presumably); no destination given – to Wadebridge? – this would have been about 6 miles. On Thursday 4 passengers were carried 6 miles, Friday 1 taken 3 miles, Saturday 13 passengers; details rapidly diminished and figures last given for Friday 10th, when 191 were carried, far more than on any previous day. Thus initially passengers were carried all days and were clearly picked up and set down anywhere. The small numbers initially might have been due to people not wanting to travel the detour to Wenford Bridge and back (there is no suggestion in the minutes of a ban on such travel) and thus having to walk to the junction to catch their train. The great increase on the 10th was probably the result of providing a direct Bodmin to Wadebridge service for that day. A note in Return for 1840-1841 (RAIL 1053/1) says: ‘There is not any separate passenger train; the staple traffic is sand, and to the train is attached a single carriage. On market and fair days there is one or more carriages attached to the train for passengers’. This supports the idea that direct trains were run when it was worthwhile but otherwise would-be passengers were dependent on needs of the goods service. By definition, passengers on goods trains would have had the chance to get on or off at any goods depot at which train stopped, even on Wenford Bridge line, and perhaps on Ruthern Bridge branch as well, though potential custom on these would have been slight. In 1836 goods depots were listed in the Minutes, in connection with charges to Wadebridge, as: Bodmin; Borough Bounds (outsskirts of Bodmin?); Ruthern; Nanstallon; Helland; Tressarret; Wenford. (Helland and Tressarret were on the Wenford line). Report of accident at ‘Trevarrrett’ station on 30 July 1842 shows that passenger carriage was attached – children had got onto steps of ‘carriage’ (Rtn).

On 2 May 1844 Company resolved (Board Minutes RAIL 57/3) to run steam trains only on Saturdays, Fair Days, Bodmin Assize Days and other public occasions plus occasions when a special goods cargo warranted it; ordinary week-day work was to be done by horse-power when required. Passengers would probably have been limited to steam days since at other times provision of any sort of service would have been erratic. Probably another change fairly soon. Rtn PP, for first half of 1845, when 2,236 passengers carried, says ‘Passenger carriages accompany the traffic trains. If engine does not work on Thursdays, they are taken with horses’.

Line appeared in Bradshaw from September 1869 to October 1886, one train each way on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and two each way on Saturdays, Bodmin to Wadebridge, no intermediate stops shown. LSW says ‘stop anywhere’ policy persisted until line closed 1 November 1886 (R Cornwall Gaz). These shows that in 1873 the line only carried 4,826 passengers, less than 25 per cent.

Wadebridge – Wenford Bridge was main line, but regular passenger services were confined to the Bodmin – Wadebridge line; however early activities of line not as simple as this.

1835 A. Clarence (NE; S&D).

11 July 1835: horse-drawn service began from Stockton (on the line to the North Shore staiths) to the Clarence Tavern at Crow Trees (sometimes referred to as Quarrington), just north of Coxhoe (co n Durham County Advertiser). Initially provided by the company but on 1 January 1836 the Clarence Coach Company became exclusive contractors. Service ceased, last run Saturday 25 November 1837 (notice from Coach Company, *Durham County Advertiser*24th). It resumed 20 June 1838 (NE; PP 1), Stockton to Coxhoe only; at first steam to Ferryhill, then horse-drawn for the rest of the way; steam all the way from 1839. Evolved into orthodox service.

Also from 11 July 1835 there was a service from Stockton to Shildon via the Simpasture branch; probably intermittent; finally ceased 12 February 1842. Nothing known about the early intermediate stopping arrangements of either of these.

A line from Billingham to Port Clarence opened to goods 1833/4. Passenger service began? Site of pick-up point at Port Clarence uncertain but probably east of later station. In 1838 a market day coach was running Wednesdays and Saturdays to Stockton (R Sowler, NE Express, February 1990).

Co notices Durham Chronicle 14 March 1840 show that by arrangement between Clarence and Brandling Junction Companies two through trains each way daily would run direct from Middlesbrough to Port Clarence. An alterations notice (ibid 28 March 1840) specified the FERRY BOAT LANDING, PORT CLARENCE, opposite Middlesbro’.

In Brad a ‘coach connection’ from Billingham is mentioned intermittently May 1842 to September 1844. Though these references are in footnotes with other connections that had to be by road (Stockton to Whitby and Scarborough), it is safe to assume that they were rail coaches, perhaps horse-drawn – a road link would have been very tortuous. No further mention until November 1845, when it is listed in the main table, without comment. Note that this company’s tables were often marked ‘accuracy uncertain’, or something similar, at this period.

1835 B. Whitby & Pickering (see Potter).

6 July 1835: Ruswarp Fair Day: coach made 16 return trips between Ruswarp and Pickering, carrying children at a penny apiece, mammas and nurses twopence; allegedly not less than 1,000 carried in total.
By 18 July 1835: people could arrange private hire of ‘train’, going as far from Whitby as Beck Hole (NE); also service from Pickering to Raindale, again for novelty value.

26 May 1836: official opening throughout, from Whitby to Pickering. Tickets mostly issued in advance but an extra vehicle was set aside for the use of strangers who happened to be visiting Whitby that day. Service now seems to have operated continuously: references to its ability to get through in winter when roads impassable.

Detailed description of arrangements:

From Whitby: one horse to foot of incline at Beck Hole, at first operated as self-acting on principle later used by clift railways (carriages balanced by water tank going other way), later replaced by stationary engine; one horse from Incline Top to Fen Bogs (effectively line’s summit); thence downhill under own momentum to Raindale (at one point on the inaugural run it is supposed to have reached 30 m.p.h. – who measured and how?); finally one horse to Pickering.

From Pickering: single horse to Raindale; pair to Fen Bogs; one horse took train on to Incline Top, other sent back to Raindale; then incline – reputedly train was detached from the rope part way down so it could run as far as possible towards Tunnel Inn under its own momentum; horse met and took it the rest of the way to Whitby. In bad weather, or with contrary winds, extra horses sent to help.

This method of operation clearly gave many opportunities for passengers to join and alight; there would have been no stations as we know them. Company’s Return for late 1840 lists fares from Whitby to Russwarp; Sleights Bridge; Tunnel (later Grosmont); Beckhole; Incline Station (later Goathland); Fen Bog; Raindale; Pickering. These should be seen as akin to fare stages of modern bus service rather than exclusive list of stops: common-sense indicates that Levisham would have had a service; Potter includes plate showing passengers being waved off from South Dale, near Raindale Inn. Return also says: ‘A party may have a coach to any station on the line when 8 seats are engaged’. Normal service 2 each way per day.

Rapkin’s maps (early 1850s) show station at Saltergate Inn, about half way between Goathland and Levisham; probably left over in error from the stop anywhere days.

4 June 1847: locomotive haulage introduced except on the incline. Original ‘station’ at Whitby, near 1906 engine-house, replaced by one on site of two former shipyards.

First full detail provided by Topham, May 1848, and Brad, July 1848. Both list: Levisham; Goathland; Grosmont; Sleights; Russwarp. The same stations are shown in the fare-table in the first issue of The Whitby Gazette, 6 July 1854 (Potter).

No station ever appeared in it for Beck Hole(s) (indiscriminately spelled as one word or two), nor is there one on Macaulay’s maps of the period though hh 1862 includes it (1866a – closed). Goathland (at times G Mill) was last in Brad September 1857; back in tt April 1858, in footnotes as terminus of a summer market train from Whitby; shown full service again November 1863, though it remained on Macaulay’s maps. Clearly it does not tell whole story since trains would have been forced by the needs of incline haulage to stop at both; also, arrangements presumably existed to get people from Goathland to Whitby market – entry that appeared for the return journey was probably only included because the train terminated there.

1 July 1865: incline replaced by deviation line (co ½ T 15 August); Beck Hole closed; new station at Goathland.

Goods trains carried platelayers’ wives in the late 1940s to Farwhar/Farworth; Raindale; Bridge No 16 (at 14 m 9.62 ch); Newton Dale; Goathland Summit (U – but with Bridge No 16 corrected by P Howat, whose researches also suggest that Forestry Commission workers were involved in this use and that use of these stops went back further than the 1940s).

1835 C. Wishaw & Coltness. This was essentially a continuation of the Garnkirk & Glasgow and Monkland & Kirkintilloch lines, from Whifflet on the latter to Morningside, with a branch to Newarthill (at or near later Holytown station). As with others nearby, primary purpose was carriage of minerals. It later became part of the Caledonian. Cal quotes these dates for opening to minerals: to Holytown (near present day Mossend) 25 January 1834; branch to Newarthill 31 May 1834; extension of main line to Jerviston (between Mossend and Motherwell) 18 August 1838; to Overtown 20 March 1841; to Stirling Road 8 January 1842; to Morningside 9 March 1844. Cal did not give any dates for passenger use.

Lee AN implied that passenger services started at the same time as goods openings quoted for 1834, 1841, 1842 and 1844. Other evidence suggests that it was not as simple as this. Garnkirk quotes an advertisement of 6 March 1835 for a service whereby carriages from Newarthill Bridge and Holytown Bridge were horse-drawn to Gartsherrrie and there attached to the Garnkirk’s service to Glasgow, one each way on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays. It is not known if this was the start of the service. By 1837 the service had become daily. According to Robertson, the Wishaw & Coltness first paid passenger duty in 1835.

There would then seem to have been a significant gap in time before any other openings occurred.

The company’s Returns were made only spasmodically (given the complexity of some of those they did make, officialdom might well have shown more relief than regret at their failure to make regular ones). Returns do exist for the period July 1842 to June 1843. They show that in the second half of 1842 only horse-drawn passenger trains were run on two services, one of 2½ miles, the other of 4½; 312 were run on each route, carrying a total of 4,467 passengers. There were intermediate stops: anywhere practicable? This would suggest that Newarthill and Holytown, or nearby points, were still the termini. The return for the first half of 1843 was a complex affair: 9,593 passengers were divided between 23 sub-entries (they contrived 66 for goods). They included 216 short-distance trains with passengers travelling up to 12 miles (though according to Robertson the line was just over 11 miles long). On the face of it, this fits D&C 6 which says that a service started 8 May 1843 (Cl says 1 May), calling (after Gartsherrrie); at Cambroe Iron Works; Holytown; Motherwell; Wishaw; Overtown Road; Stirling Road; and Morningside. The date fits the Returns which suggest that steam took over, on a longer service, about two-thirds of the way through the period. Further support is given by the great increase in passenger duty paid by the company in 1843 – and that at a time when most were paying less because of a changed method of calculation. Early horse-drawn operations would have allowed much flexibility in services provided, and this might account for increased mileages in Returns.

An accident report of 11 January 1842 (Rtm) reveals something of habits. Three days previously a couple of waggoners had given rides from Overtown Road to two of their relatives, contrary to rules; these fell off and were run over and killed by the wagons after not more than 500 yards. The company assured BoT that they ran no passenger vehicles over this part of line and they asked for its approval of a new bye-law imposing £5 fine for any future breaches of rule.

However, t.t evidence available, admittedly scanty and almost certainly well in arrears, suggests that initially Carluke rather than Morningside was the terminus (fitting the goods dates quoted for these two places). Carluke (often called Stirling Road in modern works – see its entry, under ‘C’, in Section 4) was the connection point for a road service to Lanark. Brad first included the line about July 1841 when Houghton and Newrathill were mentioned in the Garnkirk & Glasgow’s table. Carluke, without any intermediate detail, was added in September 1843. The last certain reference to Newrathill was in May 1844. From June 1844 there was simply a note that certain trains took Wishaw & Coltness passengers; no destination was specified. In May 1845 detail was again given, apparently fully; Morningside was now the terminus, Newrathill no longer included. Further support to the later opening of Morningside is given by Murray (a Scottish timetable), September 1844, which makes Carluke the terminus. A company tt for October 1844, quoted in True Line, does include Morningside.

It was originally a 4 ft 6 in line. MK quotes notice dated 10 August 1847 warning traders and others that line would be shut on or about 26th for a few days. It was then converted so that parts could be incorporated into the Caledonian main line.

See 1848* for problems concerning the closure of part of this line.

1835 March 10. Newcastle & Carlisle (strictly Newcastle-upon-Tyne & Carlisle Railway, but full version rarely used). All information connected with the earliest openings is placed here for convenience, especially since it was only in July 1848 that Bradshaw provided a full listing of stops; the dates given below are those found in most modern publications, though later practice would suggest that some should be treated as formal openings. However most at or near opening were included in an issue of Scott’s Railway Companion describing the line, dated 1837, but probably relating to late 1836.

9 March 1835: first section, Blaydon to Hexham, opened. Co notice (Newcastle Journal 7th) said would open to public on this day; however description of opening day (ibid 14th) makes no mention of other than than the trains for the formal opening, though larger numbers were carried on the ceremonial trains than was usual and it is difficult to see how a regular service could have been fitted in (trains were supposed to leave each end at 8 a.m., 11 a.m., 2 p.m. and 5 p.m.); indeed, did the company have enough engines and carriages to do this? It seems reasonable to assume that the usually quoted 10th was the first day of public use. No arrival times and no intermediate stops were given; initially ad hoc arrangements? Co n dated 13 June (ibid 14th) gave list of fares to be charged from the 14th. The punctuation in the notice poses a question or two: sample lines read ‘Prudhoe, Ovingham, Stocksfield, or Bywell’ and ‘Broomhaugh, Riding Mill or Corbridge’. However, these names should probably be treated as ‘places served’ since no stations then existed; later terminology would probably have been ‘Prudhoe for Ovingham’, ‘Stocksfield for Bywell’, ‘Riding Mill for Broomhaugh’. ‘Stella or Blaydon’ was listed thus going east only. Ryton, Wylam and Corbridge were also listed.

Company’s Act did not allow use of locomotives but they were used when the line opened. Captain Bacon Grey of Styford gained an injunction against their use, so on 28 March 1835 all services ceased. Virtually everyone else wanted the line working and the ensuing public outcry caused Grey to withdraw his opposition. Services started again 6 May 1835. Next month a new Act made the use of steam power lawful (NC; Portfolio reproduces posters announcing both closure and reopening).

28 June 1836: opened Hexham to Haydon Bridge, described in Newcastle Journal (2 July); looks like formal event only; no evidence seen to show was / was not public also. Said that on the section already opened station-houses had now been built at Wylam, Stocksfield, Corbridge and Hexham. When this section opened, there were stopping places at Allerwash, just west of Fourstones, and Warden, just east (Scott includes only Warden); Fourstones probably replaced them about the start of January 1837 (1st was a Sunday) (H Paar, article, Warden Station, RCHS Journal, July 1997).

20 July 1836: opened Carlisle to Greenhead. Co n Carlisle Patriot 16th said would open on Tuesday 19th, gave details for first train but then said ‘after Tuesday trains would run ...’; Cumberland Packet (26 July) said ‘on Wednesday last the first locomotive engine for profit left’ Carlisle for Greenhead. Clearly, therefore 19th was a formal event only. The original intention had been to start the ceremonial trains from the end of the line at Carlisle Canal Basin but a workmen’s strike meant that this was not complete and they had to use the London Road station yard instead. Description included mention of stations at Scottby, Wetheral, Milton for Brampton and Rose Hill / Gilspan. At How Mill they just passed through and no mention of Low Row; however possible that public trains stopped from the outset.

1 March 1837: opened Blaydon to Redheugh. Newcastle Journal (4th) described formal opening. Probably public next day: co n ibid, dated 2 March, said that ‘until further notice’ trains would start from Redheugh at times given. The first mention so far of Derwentnagh, now / later on this stretch, is in Bradshaw April 1843.

18 June 1838: opening of central section from Haydon Bridge to Greenhead; strictly this was a formal event though some tickets were sold to the public. This is clearly stated in the description of opening (ibid 23rd and a co n ibid 16th) gives 19 June as start of service; this lists stations and includes Low Row and How Mill (on earlier stretch), as well as Haltwhistle and Bardon Mill on the new one. The train carrying the journalist on 18th stopped at Haydon Bridge but not at Blenkinsopp Castle, Bardon Mill or Haltwhistle.

21 October 1839: opened from Blaydon to ‘Temporary Station West of the Infirmary’ in Newcastle (co n Carlisle Patriot 12th); did so without ceremony (Newcastle Journal 26th); fares for Scotswood included in co n cited.

Although there was no station at Naworth, it is clear that any passenger could at least alight there: Scott advised sight-seers that it was a good setting-off point for visitors to the Castle and to Lanercost Priory – indeed at times he seems to imply that, e.g., picnic parties could be set down virtually anywhere (passengers perhaps having to walk to the nearest station for their return journey?). Naworth Castle was specified as one of places that would be served by excursion trains NC would be running during holiday week, May 1845 (T 14 May/The Globe).

NC Maclean says: ‘mixed trains also stopped when requested at Brampton Fell ‘gate’ station west of Brampton Junction, where the line crosses the main road’; not mentioned in Scott but see entry in Section 4. Report on accident that occurred 3 August 1851 said that there were 20 intermediate stations at which all trains stopped [shown thus Brad], and ‘some other occasional stations at which they stop when there are passengers to be set down or taken up’ (Return).

NC Fairweather says early flag stations at Naworth Castle (for the Earl of Carlisle), Blenkinsopp Castle (Colonel Coulson), Ridley Hall Bridge (J Davidson) and Dilton Crossing (J Grey).

1835 April 16. Stanhope & Tyne. Opened to goods 10 September 1834. Company did not want to run a passenger service but there were requests for one, so they allowed passengers to ride free on top of the coal wagons. They soon attached a wagon just for passengers. Next came a separate locomotive-hauled passenger coach on fortnightly pay days. Finally, a full service began on 16 April 1835. At South Shields tickets were bought in the back room of a nearby inn and passengers then boarded in sidings. Trains ran to the Durham Turnpike, near Chester-le-Street, where road connections could be made. PP 1, 1838-9: ‘This Railroad is a private undertaking, not made under the powers of any Act of Parliament, and being formed for the conveyance of coals, passengers are allowed to be carried as a matter of convenience to the public, and not as profit to the Company’ – but they had been paying 1836 A Material concerning Hartlepool Railway & Dock (RAIL 294/38; NE) and Durham & Sunderland combined here since at one stage they exchanged carriages at Haswell, which see in Section 4 and map 35a.

Hartlepool. On 21 July 1836 company gave Messrs Wilkinson and Walker permission to run a passenger coach from Hartlepool to Haswell on Sundays by payment of 6/- per day. If immediately implemented, first ‘train’ would have run 24 July 1836. On 26 October, same parties licensed to run daily. Would have run from dock area at Hartlepool; no other details known – stop anywhere? Unique example of line having Sundays-only service at opening? Probably for church-goers – there were other examples of this in the area. Presumably horse-drawn. According to PP 1 (covering 1838 and 1839 to end of April) licences then held by Snowden and Wilkinson of Haswell to run coaches at 3d per mile, paid to company.

Company’s station at Haswell received its first regular service from Sunderland, operated by the Durham & Sunderland Railway, starting in April or May 1837. This company, in its Return, said that first- and second-class passengers were carried in one carriage, ‘the centre compartment being close, the ends shut on one side occasionally by means of moveable shutters’.

Hartlepool Company began its own service on 1 May 1839, when others’ licences revoked. However, it did not provide Sunday service and in April 1840 Mr Humble was given permission to run one of the old coaches on Sundays, toll 3d per mile.

Company fare tables (Gray Art Gallery & Museum Hartlepool, Robert Wood Collection, via D. Geldard): one dated 15 July 1839 gives fares to Castle Eden, Haswell, Durham and Sunderland; another dated 1 November 1839 adds Crimdon and Thornley branch; a third, 1 July 1843 further adds Castle Eden Colliery.

Returns for second half of 1840 and a company tt of January 1843 mention Castle Eden but first continuous full detail found is in Brad., June 1858, when Crimdon omitted (likely, but not certain, that had ceased to be served).

Durham & Sunderland: Sunderland to Ryhope opened 19 October 1836; extended to Haswell April or May 1837 (NE). Accident report dated 19 July 1844 (Rtn) says they were using rope haulage similar to that used on Blackwall. Early detail sparse: even Ryhope, presumably kept after line had been extended, did not appear in Brad until June 1858 but was shown earlier on maps; initially at least, Reid also gave no detail. Co ½ for six months to end of February 1837 (RAIL 164/5) confirms Ryhope was terminus then.

Examination of timings suggests that conversion of ex-Durham & Sunderland line to Haswell, plus provision of through curve and station there, was completed in time for inclusion of accelerated service in February 1838 wtt (RAIL 968/2).

Opening to Sherburn (House) seems to have occurred between end of February and end of August 1837: co ½ for that period gives passenger revenue from main line and Haswell branch. Tentative analysis of statistics suggests opening in latter part of period. NE gives 6 November 1837, citing company minute of 2 November, but this (RAIL 164/5) merely refers to coal from Whitwell. A notice dated 30 October in The Durham Chronicle of 3 November 1837 from the Coaching Department of the Durham & Sunderland Railway gave information about the service from 1 November and during the winter months. This said that coaches would start from Sunderland to Ryhope with every merchandise train about every half-hour from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.; to South Hetton and Haswell, from which place a railway coach would run regularly to Hartlepool, at 8 a.m. and 2 p.m.; to Hettoning, Pittington and Sherburn Lane near Durham at 8 a.m., noon and 3 p.m. with omnibus to Durham; summary of return services. It does not specify that a new service would begin on 1 November and looks more like revised information about an existing one; it also gives the earliest partial details so far seen about places served. Co advert in e.g. Durham Chronicle 29 June 1839 has trains from ‘Sherburn House Lane, by Pittington, Belmont, and Hetton’. It has been assumed that ‘Pittington, Belmont’ was one station, serving both places; in the other direction it was ‘Durham’, not Sherburn House. Were Seaton and Murton also available to passengers? – there were stationary engines at both Seaton Bank Head and Murton Junction so presumably stops were built in. Seaton Station mentioned in report of accident that occurred 5 January 1843, Murton station mentioned in one 23 June 1845. Line between Murton and Shincliffe not completely converted to locomotive-haulage until January 1861 wtt (Chron January 2012). Last stretch, Sherburn to Shincliffe probably previously horse-drawn (no evidence of any cable-haulage on that stretch – C. E. Mountford).

1837 A Aberford (see G.S. Hudson, The Aberford Railway, D&C, 1971). Private colliery line: by 25 February 1837 (carriage holding 16 has recently been placed on the line – Leads of that date) was providing a market day service Aberford – Parlington Hall – Garforth; at Garforth it provided connection with Leeds & Selby (L&S) trains. Shown paying passenger duty 1837 to 1842 as ‘Gascoyne’s Railway (private)’ (PP 2), though family name usually spelled ‘Gasgoine’. According to Hudson services ceased 1840 when L&S main service was diverted; although L&S continued a market day service, its timings were too unreliable to provide connections. (Perhaps L&S service not continuous – see 1834 September 22, above). Aberford service resumed, Tuesdays and Saturdays for Leeds market, soon after L&S resumed. However, PP 2 evidence suggests that service lasted longer – even continued throughout L&S closure? Line not included in PP 3, which covered passenger duty 1841 to 1846 – either because it was out of action at time report published or because private lines now omitted (Brampton Railway, see Section 7, similarly treated).

Initially trains horse-drawn; steam introduced by 1870s, subject to 12 m.p.h. limit. By 1881 daily sevice provided. In early 1920s reverted to market days only; ceased completely in March 1924. Although line was private, NE-issued tickets exist – JB includes one from Aberford to Garforth.

1837 B Lines to Coupar Angus and Glamis. These were in effect continuations of the Dundee & Newtyle railway; stations’ opening dates in Section 4. After a while they were closed for improvement; parts were incorporated into the Perth to Forfar line.

passenger duty. In 1841 the company went bankrupt and the part providing the passenger service was reconstituted as the Pontop & South Shields Railway (NE).

Churton’s Rail Road Book of England, 1851, describes a route for passengers that continued from Chester-le-Street to Stanley, ‘Berwick’ (Leadgate?), Cold Rowley and Stanhope. Although his book is generally accurate, this ‘service’ was probably the result of misunderstanding; the various inclines, which do not receive a mention from him, would have made a passenger service a very poor proposition. Churton obtained his information by writing to large numbers of the gentry for information and it may well be that a goods only service was transformed into a passenger one.

1835 June 9. London & Greenwich. From 9 June to 12 November 1835, occasional trial trips were made, with passengers: Blue Anchor Lane – Cobbetts Lane – Grand Surrey Canal. See AR Bennett, The First Railway in London, Conway Maritime Press, 1971 re-issue – pages 9 and 44.

1837 A.
Part of branch suffered at least one early closure. Major General Pasley inspected Newtyle line 12 February 1842 but not Glamis branch – ‘said to be impracticable at present even for horses, in consequence of the rails having become damaged by the subsidence of the embankment’ (Rln).

The last certain reference to Washington; Ardler Depot; Kirkinch; and Leason Hill in Brad was June 1843 but it is probably safe to say that they remained in use until the line was closed for rebuilding – Eassie was also omitted after June 1843, to return later, when it became the terminus for the time being. Washington and Ardler on the Coupar Angus line were included in co n Dunbar ... Advertiser 18 June 1847; the line to Eassie was already closed.

‘After Saturday 4 July 1846’ line between Eassie and Glamis ‘shut up’ (co n ibid 19 June).

1 August 1847: line to Eassie closed and replaced by omnibus (co n ibid 27 July).

4 September 1847 (a Saturday, last day): Coupar Angus branch closed (Return).

2 August 1848: Perth to Forfar line opened; Coupar Angus; Ardler; Eassie; and Glamis reopened with it. Probably at the same time the line from Newtyle reopened to Meigle to provide a connecting service for Perth and Forfar trains. This reopened stretch was operated separately since, unlike the Perth to Forfar line, it had not yet been converted to standard gauge. A contractor was given occupation of the line for three months from 1 October 1849 but the bulk of the work was done in one month (Newtyle). Brad is no help since it does not show any closure at this time. However, its treatment of the Newtyle line was chaotic and lacking in detail. In September 1849 it repeated previous month’s table with note: ‘No information, accuracy uncertain’; from January to May (inclusive) 1850, line missing completely; June 1850 back, as a footnote to Perth and Forfar table; November or December 1850 again had own table but no detail and no indication that there was any continuation from Newtyle to Meigle. Murray, April 1852, does at least show that this link was in use.

In 1861 the northern continuation of the Newtyle line was diverted from an eastward-facing connection at Meigle to a westward-facing one at Ardler. All in print (e.g. G&AS) give 1 August for this, but the change to Ardler Junction appears in the July tt; this might have been premature, but the line is better known for late entries (the Alyth branch, opened 2 September 1861, was first included in October). About this time, Meigle (later renamed Alyth Junction) was re-sited ready to act as junction for the Alyth line. The June tt has Meigle (in May Meigle Junction) but it is impossible to determine from the tt whether this was the old one renamed, or the new one, since it had lost its junction status for the time being.

1837 April 3. Paisley & Renfrew. Horse-drawn, 4 ft 6 in gauge. Return for second half of 1840 shows ‘no intermediate stops’; that for second half of 1842 shows that stop(s) were then made (RAIL 1053/1). At some times at least it was let out by auction, as toll gates were: 1845 for £700, 1846 £1,025 (Edinburgh Evening Post 1 July 1846). Bought 31 July 1852 by GSW and let to contractor – different gauge meant could not be worked as part of main system (GSW).

1 December 1865: line cut back for conversion to begin. Trains would discontinue going to and from Harbour Station and would use new one in Fulbar Street (co n Paisley Advertiser ... 2nd).

1 February 1866: rest of line closed, buses provided instead (co n ibid 3rd).

1 May 1866 reopened to Fulbar Street, now connected to main system at Paisley end (co½ RAIL 1110/149 for meeting 19 September 1866 says line to Fulbar Street op then and works thence to Wharf were ‘far advanced’). Tts in Paisley Advertiser just ‘Renfrew’. Still same August 1867 tt (paper of 24th). Paper of 31 August had it still headed for August trains but now separate entries for Wharf and Fulbar Street – should it have been headed ‘September’?

1838 May 29. [Manchester, Bolton and Bury]: Manchester to Bolton (Manch G – co n 26th, description 30th). Reshaped, including previous contents, as a result of extra information which raises more doubts than answers.

There was earlier public use (28th): on 30th paper (then published Wednesdays and Saturdays) said that in its issue ‘of Saturday’ it had described directors’ trip of ‘Thursday last’ and that several trains with public on board had travelled line both ways on ‘Monday last’, thanks to the ‘liberal permission’ of the directors; this would suggest directors 24th (confirmed by Manchester Times 26th, which just said ‘on Thursday’), public pre-opening trips 28th, especially since the paper seems to have been prompt with news – the official public opening was described as ‘yesterday’. However, ‘last’ as used then can cause problems since some seem to have used it in the sense of a day in the previous week. Elsewhere (e.g. LY) the directors’ trip has been dated to 17th. LY gives the Bolton Chronicle of 26th as its source and perhaps that paper used ‘last’ in a way that was misunderstood.

Some short-term changes might be hidden; mileages given in tables are too inaccurate to help so it is possible that some of the renamings accepted previously (including some still used here) conceal changes of site. Many notices seem unhelpful: they mention some stops by specified (faster?) trains but say others will stop at all the stations. The early stations were clearly mostly very primitive affairs, easily erected and moved elsewhere (assuming that there were actually structures of some sort) Whishaw commented that they had wisely not wasted money on grand stations. Thus there was much in common with the early Liverpool & Manchester. Furthermore, early entries in notices issued by the company look like descriptions designed to help people find their stopping-places, rather than station names in the later sense; in such circumstances it is hardly surprising if journalists and others writing about the line gave different names and Brad’s lack of space resulted in abbreviated forms. Here, ‘renaming’ includes all possibilities.

Opening notice Manch 26 May says, ‘There will be no Booking-place, except at the Company’s Offices, at the respective Stations in Manchester and Bolton’; Manch Cour (2 June 1838) said Ringley (another name for Kearsley) and Agecroft Bridge were the only stations on the line. Agecroft Bridge did not appear in any public tt then, and was the station for Manchester Racecourse, only used on race days; the item in Manch G said ‘preparations making at the Agecroft Bridge station for the setting down of passengers’ and that it expected many from both ends of line to use for Manchester Races, in preference to using roads to Kersal Moor. Bolton Chronicle (20 June 1838) claimed that no less than 15,000 were carried by line over four days of the meeting (6 – 9 June). BT Barton, History of Farnworth and Kersley (sic), Bolton, 1887, reproduced long sections from a pamphlet on this line by A Freeling (published in Liverpool, 1838). This listed: Manchester or New Bailey Street Salford; Windsor Bridge – ‘station contemplated’; Pendleton Bridge; Age Croft (races only, Kersal Moor racecourse), Dixon Fold; Stoneclough Bridge (later Kearsley); Tunnel (later Farnworth); Moses Gate; Bolton. (Preston Reference Library via L Crowther who added that Kersal Moor used for races until they were switched to Manchester Racecourse in 1847); Heaton Park (longish walk from Agecroft Bridge) last used 1839, then races switched to Aintree.
Co n March Cour (9 June) said that from 11 June stations:

Trains from New Bailey-street Salford
| Pendleton Bridge |
| Seddon’s Field Bridge, Kearsley |
| Dixon Fold Bridge, Clifton |
| Dixon Fold Bridge, Clifton |
| Seddon’s Fold Bridge, Kearsley |
| Pendleton Bridge |

It has been assumed that there were only three intermediate stations since if there were five, the ‘doubles’ should have appeared in the reverse order in the return direction. Was Seddon’s F B a replacement for Ringley or a more exact indication of its site?

Co n ibid (28 July) said that on and after Tuesday 31st certain trains would stop to set down and take up at Lever Bridge in the township of Great Lever (earlier version of Moses Gate or stop soon replaced by it); north end of tunnel in township of Farnworth; Stoneclough Bridge in the township of Kearsley and at the other stations on the line (those listed on 9 June?) except Seddon’s Field Bridge, which ‘has been given up’ (closed already or to be closed 31 July?). Was Lever Bridge an early name for Moses Gate? Stoneclough Bridge probably same as Kearsley.

Co n Bolton Chronicle 24 November 1838 gave tt for 1 December; certain trains would stop at Pendleton Bridge, Dixon Fold, Stone Clough and Moses Gate; station at North End of Tunnel at Halsalw Moor will be given up.

Later individual station detail is covered as fully as is known in Section 4, but the following gaps in the detail provided by Brad should be borne in mind: 1 January 1840 to about November 1840; round about July 1841; August 1843 to August 1845 (inclusive). Though these are short gaps, the known history of this line makes it unwise to write them off as of no consequence.

Inspection report dated 4 May 1847 (resulting from local concerns) listed stations as: Salford; Pendleton (1¼ miles); Clifton (5¼); Stone Clough (7); Halsalw Moor (7½); Farnworth (8½); Bolton (10).

1838 October 8. Dundee & Arbroath opened for passengers. Date is based on modern practice of citing date when first revenue was declared, here taken from PP 1. Contemporaries saw things differently. Caledonian Mercury 8th, copying Arbroath Journal said was opened ‘de facto’ on Thursday 4th; the Wallace locomotive had taken 6 second-class carriages from Dundee to Arbroath with about 230 passengers and brought them back after about 20 minutes at Arbroath, no payment mentioned. Company’s advert in the Extraordinary Advertiser said it would open on the public on Saturday, 6th; two trains each way, each leaving Arbroath on return journey one hour after leaving Dundee; fares cited for journey Craiggie to Arbroath (return free or taken for granted?). The impression given is that journeys on 4th and 6th were non-stop. No certain initial detail available. PP 1, a few months after opening, has fare list and Robinson, ‘corrected to July 1840’ lists same stations: Broughty Ferry; Monifieth; Carnoustie; Easthaven. See entries for Deyhouse and West Ferry in Section 4. Brad first detail April 1848.

Opened, horse-drawn. Arbroath Harbour to Leysmill 24 November 1838; extended, still horse-drawn, to Forfar Play Field 4 December 1838. Locomotive service Arbroath Catherine Street to Forfar Play Field began 3 January 1839; company gave this as its opening date in PP 1, presumably because this was start of full service. Caledonian Mercury 5 January 1839 described experimental trip on 2nd; included stops at Clocksbriggs, Auldbar Road, Guthrie Road, Friockheem and Leysmill. Originally 5ft 6in gauge; first standard gauge train 7 July 1847, formal opening, when many passengers were carried free – first revenue shown for 8th.

1838 November 24 (on or by). Sheffield & Rotherham. Line opened 1 November but indications are that there were no intermediate stations. None mentioned in any press descriptions of formal opening on 31 October; Sheffield Independent (10th) gave a progress report on use of line in first week, 1st to 7th inclusive; this only referred to termini and mentioned passengers from ‘each of the stations’ in a way that suggested there were no others. Furthermore, line had opened in a last-minute rush and was clearly not fully ready, First press it seen (ibid 17th) only included the termini. Intermediate stations first included in it in notice dated 24 November saying trains would run as listed until further notice, ibid 24th.

1839 June 10. LSW: Winchester to Southampton. Freeing’s London & Southampton Railway Companion, 1839 (written when there was still a gap in the line between Basingstoke and Winchester) includes stations at Shawford (alias Twyford); Barton ‘gives easy access to Bishop’s Stowe’ – later Eastleigh); Swathling. However, his description seems to have been derived from maps and plans of what was intended rather than from personal observation. It says that Southampton station is situated on the banks of Southampton Water and makes no reference to the temporary station at Northam Road or to the dispute which led to it, though elsewhere there are references to problems with landowners over the purchase of land. The temporary station seems only to have reached the local press and would thus have been unknown to someone writing from London; furthermore it is known from other sources that the first Southampton station was opened on and after Tuesday 31st.

1839 June 22. Newcastle & North Shields: Newcastle Carlisle Square to (North) Shields (NE). Co notice Newcastle Journal 22 June confirms date and says trains will call at stations of Carville (= Wallsend) and Percy Main. An opening notice (dated 12 June) reproduced in A Guy, Steam and Speed, Newcastle Libraries & Information Service, 2003, p 64, says will call at Walker(gate), Carville and Howden (= Howdon). Reason for discrepancy unknown. Whishaw called Howdon ‘station in Willington’. Heaton was added later (see entry in Section 4). Brad first gave detail March 1864. Returns for early 1840s (RAIL 1053/1) show that this, unlike the other short lines in this area, was essentially a passenger line, already providing a 30 minute interval service.

1840. Maryport & Carlisle. According to company’s minutes (RAIL 472/2). Formal opening 15 July 1840, when a party of directors travelled from Maryport to coal pits of Arkleby and Oughterside, added a few wagons of coal to their train and went back to Maryport (Kendal Mercury 25 July). No exact date for public passenger opening has been found though it is possible that a few were carried from the outset. The report for the half-yearly meeting held at Aspatria, 12 August 1840, stresses the incomplete nature of the line and says: ‘The traffic of this Railway, consisting of coal carried for exportation [depends on the Harbour at Maryport].’ There is no reference to passengers; however, much the same was said at the next meeting, 12 February 1841, when there is clear evidence that passengers were being carried, so the interpretation must be that coal was the chief source of revenue. The figures for passenger derived from later reports and Board of Trade sources show that the numbers carried were initially small. In the half-year ending 31 December 1840 they apparently ran only 115 mixed trains and carried 1,801 passengers; even if the 115 were double journeys there can only have been one train each a day, Mondays to Fridays, over the five and a half months involved unless the service was an erratic one. In the first half of 1841, 4,143 were carried in 618 trains, suggesting a far more regular service. During this time the two-mile continuation to Aspatria was opened on 12 April, all comers being allowed to travel free (Cumberland Pacquet 20th).

In the first half of 1842 they began to run separate passenger trains, though even these might have empty coal wagons attached. The second half of the year saw the first presentation of two classes of passenger travel, first even being provided on the mixed trains run as well as the passenger-only ones.

2 May 1843: Carlisle to Wigton opened formally, though places not taken by shareholders were available to the public for a fare.

A snapshot will open on 10 February 1845 (Carlisle Journal 15th – half-fares charged).

What station arrangements were available is unclear. If the minutes are interpreted literally, Maryport was the only station at first. Return shows that at the start of 1841 the service was Maryport to Arkleby, all trains stopping at Dearham Bridge and Bull Gill. There were other stops, if not at first, then soon after. Early ts (e.g for December 2 1844) said that passengers dropped between stations would be charged the fare to the next listed one. Further, all early trains were mixed, thus building in stops at collieries or collecting sidings on the way.

Even Maryport presents problems. The formal opening ran to the harbour and Clinker’s note about re-siting in 1860 implies that the station replaced was off the main line; the company’s early returns to the Board of Trade show that no purely passenger trains were at first run and passengers were still being carried by mixed trains in the mid-1840s or later so the possibility of travel to the harbour must be considered. However, Col Cobb’s Atlas shows the first station on the main line, replaced somewhat nearer Carlisle in 1860; this is supported by inspection report dated 17 November 1845 (recommending refusal to open) which said Whitehaven Junction line terminated at a junction in the station yard at Maryport. Line south actually opened 19 January 1846. Anderson, Carlisle’s Railways, Irwell, 1997 refers to an early temporary station at Currock Pond (would have been first stop out of Carlisle – see map p 3 of that book). Inspection report dated 1 February 1845, approving intended opening on 10th contains list of stations including those on stretch covered by brief report of 13 November 1844. These, with mileages from Carlisle Crown Street, are Airkbank [presumably = Aikbank] at 14 m 45 ch, Low Row 15 m 60 ch, Heathfield 17 m 08 ch, Aspatria 19 m 03 ch. The 1845 report covers from ‘a place called Brookfield’ to ‘station’ at Low Row. Clearly last not intended to be a temporary. Dates given in body of book assume: 1) Heathfield opened with the line and was closed when Brayton opened to the public; 2) Aikbank opened with its stretch of line and, together with Low Row, was closed when Leegate opened (date for that from D&C 14). Carlisle Journal said that Maryport station was ‘near the harbour’, line continuing to harbour and that except there, Wigton and Brayton wooden structures were serving, permanent ones being built. The reasoning is that the line opened with closely spaced stations and found it desirable to thin them out somewhat. See [map 134].

1840 May 2. Preston & Longridge. Notices of opening in Preston Pilot and Preston Chronicle (both 25 April) say line will open on Friday 1 May and that there will be passenger carriages every Wednesday and Saturday. Descriptions of opening in those papers make it clear that this was formal opening. Neither in advertisements nor descriptions was there anything to indicate that public use would not be available on 2nd – indeed Chronicle said everything was in readiness for ‘the commencement of contemplated operation’. Pilot described first ‘station’ as The Plough Grimsargh so presumably like many primitive lines they were making use of wayside insns; any casual stops at convenient points during horse-drawn era?

Initial service varied: notices in Preston pilot paper showed Thursdays were added 5 September 1840, missing again 10 October 1840; Sundays added 3 March 1841; Mondays added 17 July 1841; much further chopping and changing until all days service shown in tt of Preston Pilot of Saturday 17 June 1848 (Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday only 10 June).

First Return seen, for first half of 1847, has notes that it is a mineral line worked by horse-power and that ‘Passengers are frequently brought down etc, by the Stone Waggons’ as well as passenger trains. This raises possibility of passenger use all days prior to 1845 report. See {map 134}.

Notices from Preston pilot paper showed on 1 June 1852* (Rtn gives Fleetwood etc Co return to 13 June, when it ceased to work line - probably last day - was Sunday service). Reop 13 July 1852 (Preston Chronicle 17th).

* = many papers cited a notice that line would close and equipment be sold off on 1 June; however, they were given a fortnight’s grace to try and resolve problems.

1840 May 12. London & Brighton: Brighton to Shoreham. Formal opening May 11. In addition to the directors’ special, other trains ran in the evening and upwards of 1,000 were carried (Hants Teleg 18th); the impression given is that these were non-stop runs from one end of the line to the other. Public opening date co n T 8th. Earliest station detail so far seen is in a tt, Morning Post 18 September 1841 and in Brad at about the same time when all were mentioned. However, Brighton Gazette 7 May 1840 said buildings were being erected at Shoreham and Hove stations and evidence at inquest on accident 17 May 1840 (ibid 21st) included mention of stop at Southwick and train slowing for expected stop (but not actually stopping) at Kingston.

1840 July 1. North Midland: full public opening, Leeds to Masboro’ (co n T 27 June). No certain details of stations and their names have so far been discovered.

The first public use had been on 25 June, by an excursion (provided free by the railway company) of the Geological and Polytechnical Society of the West Riding of Yorkshire; Leeds (27th) gave some account of their trip. Most of their stops were made to inspect the strata revealed in the cuttings but three stations on the Leeds to Masboro’ section are identified: Methley, Oakenshaw and Cudworth Bridge. Clearly independent (and conflicting) accounts of the formal opening on 30 June were given by Leeds Mercury 4 July, Leeds 4 July, and Hull Packet 5 July; for example, they gave for arrival at Oakenshaw ranged from 8.48 to 9.05. The earliest timetable seen is that in Allen’s The Midland Counties’ Railway Companion, corrected to 24 August 1840 (according to publicity in Derby Mercury 26th); this only shows stations at Wakefield, Woodlesford and Leeds. One for 1 January 1841 is reproduced in B. Radford’s Rail Centres: Derby, Ian Allan, 1986. One for 6 April 1841 (see below) also exists. Matters are not helped by companies’ habits then of stopping at places where only the rudimentary facilities (or even none?) existed.

See entries in Section 4 for details of individual stations.

1840 July 2. Hull & Selby: market trains. These provided the first service for some stations and it is impossible to be certain when these began. Company’s it added a market train from Hull August 1841; nothing extra other way so presumably used ordinary trains to go to Hull. No extra stops mentioned. Same up to and including December 1841 (MT61/171). Brad first mentioned market trains, without specifying stops, in May 1842. Co n Hull Advertiser 10 March 1843 has notice that looks like start for Wressle Bridge and Bromfleet; it deals with alterations to time of market trains from Tuesday 14th and includes these in note that appears to suggest that their service was to Hull only; neither mentioned in similar notice for 1 March – but it cannot be guaranteed that this was the whole story. Brad first added names in July 1844: Wenpel Bridge (corrected to Wressle Bridge by the end of the year); Bromflut (corrected later); Crabley Creek. It is thus likely that Crabley Creek was ‘opened’ after the others.

Wressle, Crabley Creek and Bromfleet omitted from Brad May 1853 (present April); all back (market) November 1854; Wressle to full service September 1855; the other two were last in Brad October 1861 but U says still in wtt January 1864 so market service probably continued (as it also had during first absence?). Crabley Creek was probably closed by November 1872, when Bromfleet did get back into tt, market only.

1840 July 16. Preston & Wyre: Preston to Fleetwood. Opening notice (Preston Chronicle 13th) only mentioned Kirkham and Poulton as intermediate stops; 6d extra charged to take passengers to or from company’s station at Maunder-bank to North Union’s Fishergate. Still same stations in very detailed notice (ibid 23 October). Notice for November service (ibid 31 October) added Saturday market service calling in addition to Lea Road, Treals Road, Weeton and Ramper Road. Treals is shown 74 chains east of Kirkham on RCH Lancashire & District Map 1905; Weeton was between Kirkham and later Singleton; Ramper at/near later Thornton-Cleveleys. It is unlikely that any stations existed at these market stops: a report in the Returns of an accident in November 1841 said that the train had stopped to put down passengers ‘at the Lea road’ and these reports were normally very precise in their wording and one would have expected ‘station’ to be included if there had been one there. Thereafter local press ts seen often lacked detail and later changes can only be seen from a mixture of national and local ts.

By December 1841 Brad Salwick had replaced Treals. Market stops last appeared in April 1842 Brad though reorganisation of tables could have accounted for their omission next month (line now incorporated in North Union table). They were also absent from Company’s it for 1 July 1842; ironically they were again shown in co’s tts in Preston Chronicle April 1842 and continued to be shown until last included March 1843; they were back in Brad November 1842 when this line again had a table of its own. Weeton and Ramper were last there April 1843. In May 1843 Lea and Salwick were shown in the fare table only so it is not clear whether they were now ‘all days’ stations or still market only. Probably it was the former since in July 1843 all trains clearly stopped at them (as is also shown by company’s tt of 11 December 1843). Brad last shows them May 1844; they are back again February 1847, when first orthodox table for line was included; thus impossible to say whether this gap represents a brief closure or simply lack of tt detail. Tuck complicates the issue by including Weeton and Ramper in tt issued about June 1843; perhaps inertia.

1840 August 5. Slamanan: Glasgow to Causewayend, near Linnlithgow. Initially 4 ft 6 in gauge. MK says line closed to minerals from 26 July to 14 August and to passengers [also from 26 July?] to 23 August 1847 for regauging. Service originally provided to link Glasgow and Edinburgh, passengers transferring to canal barges at Causewayend; slow and, even when road transport replaced barges, very vulnerable after full rail link opened via Falkirk 1842. Crolla, a carrier started road link to his offices in Prince’s Street, Edinburgh on 30 November 1840 (addition to canal link or competitor?) (his advert Scotsman 23rd). Advert (Scotsman 11 October 1843) said that arrangements had been made for conveying passengers between Port Hopetoun, Edinburgh (western terminus of canal) and St Rollox during sessions of General Assembly of Free Presbyterian Church, starting 16 October; were these additions to existing service or a temporary resumption? Original intermediate stations were: Airdrie (later Commonhead); Slamanan; Avonbridge (MK). Line completely omitted from Brad in mid-1840s but service continued (Robertson shows passenger duty being paid); even when back in Brad, full detail not given until June 1851, though Topham provided from July 1848 to March 1850 (inclusive).

By March 1845 the service had been cut back at the western end to Rawyards (opened ?) as its terminus (MK), though there was still a service from Glasgow to Hallcraig (see 1844 December 26, below).

By August 1847 line had been converted to standard gauge and extended east to Linnlithgow on the main Edinburgh to Glasgow line; western terminus now Airdrie Hallcraig (MK). In 1856 the line was diverted at its eastern end to Bo’ness instead of Linnlithgow.

Moskiland minute of 24 June 1859 ordered immediate stop to passenger traffic over Ballochney incline (involved line from Linlithgow to Linnlithgow). It is thus likely that Crabley Creek was ‘opened’ after the others. Robertson (later Commonhead); Slamanan; Avonbridge (MK). Line completely omitted from Brad in mid-1840s but service continued (Robertson shows passenger duty being paid); even when back in Brad, full detail not given until June 1851, though Topham provided from July 1848 to March 1850 (inclusive).

By March 1845 the service had been cut back at the western end to Rawyards (opened ?) as its terminus (MK), though there was still a service from Glasgow to Hallcraig (see 1844 December 26, below).

By August 1847 line had been converted to standard gauge and extended east to Linnlithgow on the main Edinburgh to Glasgow line; western terminus now Airdrie Hallcraig (MK). In 1856 the line was diverted at its eastern end to Bo’ness instead of Linnlithgow.

Moskiland minute of 24 June 1859 ordered immediate stop to passenger traffic over Ballochney incline (involved line from Garstherrie to Rawyards, including the Hallcraig branch) following accident; service resumed 1 May 1860 (MK). Following month they ordered safety siding at Commonhead (SRO BR/MNK/1/3).

Also see entries on BO’NESS and COMMONHEAD (Section 4). Unlikely that service to Linnlithgow resumed during suspension of Bo’ness service – expected to be brief (co notice Falkirk Herald).

1840 September 10. Closure of Grand Junction stations at Bridgeford and Coppenhall. T Friday 18th/Derby Mercury: ‘On Thursday last the second class stations at Bridgeford and Coppenhall were closed, the trains ceasing on that day to stop at them’. By later standards this would have been interpreted as last trains Wednesday (9th), no trains Thursday. However is impossible to be sure they were using words in that way so that the Thursday might have been the last day of use. (See 1844 December 1 and 1850 July 1, below.)

1840 October 1. Grand Junction: Crew to Chester (LNW- line). Generally no detail in early years, though co op notice, Chester Chronicle 9th suggests there were then no intermediate stations. Detail was given from June 1842 to January 1843 (inclusive). Full and continuous coverage began December 1845.

1840 October 8. Taff Vale: Cardiff to Navigation House (later Abercynon). Notices issued by the TV company to both Merlin and ancestor of Cardiff & M G, and published in both papers on 3 October, say that railway will be opened to the public on 8th, service shown was 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. from Cardiff, 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. from Navigation House, with road connection to and from Merthyr provided. Silurian (Saturday 17th) supports: into public use Thursday week. Directors’ special left Cardiff at 12 o’clock in order not to interfere with regular traffic; between 600 and 700 passengers conveyed to and fro. Established sources give 9th as opening date, probably assuming (as this compiler previously did) that 8th was formal only. Silurian gave a detailed scenic report but did not give any station detail, as with other local papers seen. Earliest local press tt seen with detail is that in for 27 March 1843 (Cardiff & Merthyr Guardian 18th); this lists all stations referred to this note (plus the Merthyr extension). According to A History of Radyr and 1840 December 28: Manchester & Leeds: Summit Tunnel. Line was now extended from Hebden Bridge to the eastern end of tunnel. Tunnel itself was not ready for use so passengers taken by road from Littleborough to Lanefoot, Walsden, where they joined train in Deanroyd cutting (A Holt, A Pennine Pioneer, G Kelsall, 1999). Inspection report, dated 23 December 1840, makes it clear that passengers would be conveyed by train to the eastern end of tunnel and gave 28th as intended opening date; after inspection, BoT wanted certain minor matters dealt with before line opened. Although date on certificate sent to BoT saying this had been done was dated 30 December 1840 it is clear that company opened on the intended date since 28th is confirmed in report, dated 23 February 1841, on opening of next section. Note that BoT role was still only advisory.

1841 Northern & Eastern: opening of four stations. They first appeared in Brad (in footnotes), April 1842: Stratford; Marsh Lane Tottonham; and Cadmore Lane Cheshunt on stretch of line opened 15 September 1840, and Burnt Mill Netteswell (Nettleswell in Brad) on stretch opened 9 August 1841. All are also present in similarly arranged table in Robinson, dated 1842 (GE portion published, photography, as GE Information Sheet T 110, July 1983). Service shown for them in Robinson is different from that in any issue of Brad in 1842; comparison of timings in the main tables shows that the information for the line as a whole in Robinson is the same as that in Brad, December 1841.

Further, earlier, evidence comes from Northern & Eastern co n T 7th advertising an extra train for Harlow Bush Fair on 9 and 10 September 1841. This includes: ‘The trains will stop at all the usual stations and also at Netteswell’. When N&E first opened, first train of day was operated by adding N&E carriages to EC trains from Shoreditch and detachng them at Stratford for N&E engine to take on (account of accident, 16 September, line’s second day, T 216). It is unlikely that this was linked to passenger usage of a station here: EC would presumably have expected passengers from London to travel in their part of train; whilst there might have been opportunities for passengers from Stratford to go towards Broxbourne, opening tt suggests that there was no joining of trains here on return trips, so no way of getting back. Practice of dividing trains here cannot have lasted long – by about March 1841 it all of two companies’ departures from Shoreditch were at different times.

There is no certainty about dates for these stations: much is based on timings and initially all N&E timings were given as 1.10, 1.15, 1.20, etc – only in January 1842 did more exact times such as 1.12 make their appearance, so that some peculiar station-to-station timings were shown. It does seem that these occasional stops were at first used instead of regular stations by a few trains. The opening notice lacks detail, as does Brad about March 1841 (RAIL 902/3). The sheet tt for April 1841 (RAIL 903/535) is the earliest so far seen with intermediate detail. Trains are shown at regular intervals, suggesting no occasional extra stops by any trains. Trains probably ran non-stop to Lea Bridge – only 10 minutes allowed for this, while EC took 11 minutes to their Stratford, including stop at Mile End. Notice for extension to Harlow, 9 August 1841, is no help – only gives times from termini. By October 1841 (see P Kay’s reprint) one train each way did not stop at Edmonton (9 a.m. up, 5.30 p.m. down), timings unchanged. This looks likely to have been the start of Marsh Lane/Northumberland Park, since Robinson had the 8.30 up and 5.30 down stopping there. It is still impossible to tell what was happening beyond Broxbourne since Roydon and Harlow only appeared in the notes, but later evidence makes it unlikely that Burnt Mill/Harlow was open yet. The opening notice for Spelbrook on 22 November 1841 again lacked detail, but the times from termini tally with those in December 1841 Brad, which gave detail for main stations, so it seems safe to treat this as the tt that came into force on 22 November. Stratford was certainly now in use (timings would suggest not earlier); note for Sunday trains said that these stopped at all the stations plus Stratford. Timings here plus the ‘1842’ (really December 1841) Robinson notes suggest it was used by some week-day trains also, in case one instead of Lea Bridge. Same evidence suggests that Burnt Mill was now brought into use for one train, as an alternative stop to Roydon and Harlow, neither of which was served by train in question. Similarly, Cadmore’s Lane seems to have come into use with opening to Spelbrook, simply as an extra stop, though timings given in it are so imprecise that earlier use cannot entirely be ruled out.

1841 February 10, Stockton & Hartlepool. Built without Act of Parliament, promoters making their own arrangements with local landowners. They soon decided to try for Act and result was inspection (favourable) on 6 September 1841 (RAIL 1053/2, p 162). Co no Durham County Advertiser (5 February) said it would be opened by Directors on 9th and to public on 10th; co n ibid (12th) said it had been and was supported by item in same paper. Earlier, what were apparently co notices in a number of papers (e.g. Newcastle Courant 29 January, 5 February) said line would be opened ‘for passengers and general Merchandize’ on the 9th. That in the Courant (29 January) was accompanied by a list of fares from Stockton: Billingham 9d; Greatham 1s; Seaton 1s 6d; Stranton and Middleton (assumed to be one site) 2s; Hartlepool Railway Station 2s 3d. The press accounts of the opening varied in detail. The Durham paper referred to the Middleton Station* at the south side of Hartlepool as the terminus. York Gazette (13th) included a separate stop at Stanton on the way back from Hartlepool; it also said ‘a considerable number of gentlemen, as well as Directors, and many strangers from a distance’ and others joined and left at various stops on the way. Leeds (20th) mentioned stations at Greatham and Seaton and said one was intended to be built for Cowpen. The September inspection included mention of ‘lodges’ for gatekeepers provided at two level crossings near Cowpen; if this company followed Liverpool & Manchester habits, one of these might have acted as a ‘halt’. According to Wood’s, West Hartlepool, West Hartlepool Corporation, 1967, Cowpen was temporary ‘halt’ for workers at brickworks during and just after construction of line. He also adds that original Hartlepool station was poop of old Dutch galliot, whose cabins were used by booking clerk and station master.

*B = a notice concerning a bankruptcy petition from the Ticket and Traffic clerk at Middleton station appeared in Durham Chronicle 12 January 1844 and Middleton was again described as terminus in advert of 2 February 1844.

1841 March 31, Great North of England: Darlington to York. Line date Yorks Gaz 3 April. Paper’s description of line mentions all stations given this date and these were included in first tt seen, May or June 1841 Brad. However it also includes Raskelf and Sessay, known to have opened later, as stations apparently in existence (see entries in Section 4); these probably should be interpreted as intended – there were serious problems with a bridge at Sessay.

1841 March 31, Glasgow, Paisley & Greenock: Paisley to Greenock. Morning Post (Monday 29th) said would be directors Tuesday, public Wednesday.

1841 April 6: North Midland line; opening of new stations on. Date from Derby Mercury 14th. This said 11 new stations had been opened; it listed 10 (Methley being the missing one). Whilst there was some possible ambiguity in the way it used ‘Tuesday last’, support is given to the 6th rather than the 13th by a time bill headed 6 April; this does not actually say ‘a new service’ but it would have been most unusual for such a bill to be issued mid-week for any other reason (information from J Gough). The Eastern Counties Herald (a Hull paper) of Thursday, March 25 said, ‘On Tuesday last [16th] 23rd, two additional stopping trains were started, to run daily between Leeds and Derby; and the number of places at which they stop for passengers is no less than 20, or seven more than the number of regular stations. They were described as mainly for the use of those attending markets at the main centres, not providing connections with trains going further afield. Also quoted by Herapath, 27 March.

The version based on the Derby paper is preferred as it was the more local one. There are also discrepancies within the Hull version, suggesting that something planned for the future was misinterpreted as having already happened. It starts, ‘The Directors of this Railway [North Midland] are making arrangements ...’, which would better fit the future than the past. Later it says, ‘the number of trains running daily on the North Midland is 59 and will in a few days be 63’.

Earlier (13 June 1840) Sheffield & Rotherham Independent had said: ‘It appears the North Midland Railway Company are about to open a temporary station at Beighton for the accommodation of the vicinity of Woodhouse Mill and surrounding neighbourhood. ... It would have been advertised had the number of trains and hours of starting been determined upon; but this, it appears, cannot be known until too late for insertion this week. Probably it will be announced in our next.’ However, nothing found in next issue (J. Gough). Confusion? or earlier version of Woodhouse Mill?

1841 November. Birmingham & Gloucester. A number of places received their first (and in some cases only) service in the form of passenger carriages attached to goods trains going to Birmingham Camp Hill, which by now was closed to ordinary passenger trains. These places were ‘police stations’ (= signallling points). Some developed into ordinary stations, others soon lost their primitive service (BG). Service involved began 15 November (co n, e.g. T 13th) but no stops were listed and statements in the committee minutes suggest details of these not settled yet (J Gough). Midland Counties Herald 6 January 1842 included tt with general reference to goods trains; next issue (13 January) listed stops as MOSELEY, LONGBRIDGE, COFTON, TOP OF LICKLEY INCLINE, DODDERHILL, DUNHAMPSTEAD, KEMPSEY, BESFORD; same to 19 May 1842 (inclusive); 26 May added SWINDON.

Aris was slow to list police stations: first seen 9 May 1842; all the police station items were included up to and including 28 October 1844. No tt included 4 November; 11 November included revised form of table, headed effective from 4 November. No longer included note about police stations; MOSELEY, LONGBRIDGE, DUNHAMPSTEAD and BESFORD now included in main table, not necessarily with improved service; CAMP HILL seen for first time; LIFFORD, COFTON, TOP OF LICKLEY, DODDERHILL, KEMPSEY and SWINDON all omitted. Last full tt seen was 18 November (repeat of 11th); no later ones seen. Thus if Aris was accurate 4 November is date to use for various changes (it only added WADBOROUGH 6 May 1844 but this added earlier elsewhere).

1841 November 29. LSW: Gosport branch. Opening date from Salisbury 6th. Line opened without BoT approval and operated up to and including 2 December; closed Friday 3 December (Hants Adv); reopened 7 February 1842 (co n T 9th). Heavy rains had made clay in a cutting north of Fareham unstable. Problems about the stability of a tunnel had delayed line opening and there were still some worries about this but the cutting was main problem (also letter in RM January 1937, pp 62-3, based on information from Chief Engineer of Southern Railway).

1842 February 21. Edinburgh & Glasgow. In April and May 1842 it seems from Brad that the stations listed are all of those that were open. However, in May, only some of the stations are clearly specified and there are vague references in the notes to passenger trains calling at ‘all stations’ that could include some not now listed and to the carriage of passengers by goods trains to ‘all stations’. The evidence for some early lines shows that some places were only served in this way, increasing the possibility of unlisted places being served. The opening notice, T 19th, has a note that refers to the ‘Road Stations’. This might simply mean ‘intermediate stations’ though other companies at this time sometimes used that phrase to cover stops other than the listed ones.

1842 August 31. Lines to Granton and North Leith owned eventually by NB and LNE.

[Edinburgh, Leith & Newhaven] op 31 August 1842: (Edinburgh) Scotland Street to Trinity: Co n Caledonian Mercury 29th said was anticipating opening by locomotives by using horse-drawn coaches to enable people to go to the coast and see Queen Victoria’s arrival and fleet while it was in the Forth.

[Edinburgh, Leith & Granton] op 19 January 1846: Trinity to Granton (co n Edinburgh Evening Post ... 17th) to the ‘Temporary Station House’ at Granton.

[Edinburgh & Northern] op probably summer 1848: on to permanent station on the Middle Pier at Granton Harbour (owned by the Duke of Buccleuch). Co ½ Scotsman 18 March – additional accommodation at Granton will be finished in course of summer; co ½ ibid 15 September – works at Granton are so far advanced as already to afford greatly increased facility for conducting the traffic in connection with the pier and ferry (= not finished but in use? passengers and / or goods?). Scotsman 9 May 1849: yesterday temporary wooden erection used by Edinburgh & Northern at Granton Pier destroyed by fire; nothing said about effect on traffic, implied not a serious matter.

[Edinburgh, Leith & Granton] op 20 May 1846 to (North) Leith (co n Caledonian Mercury 18th). Notice also offered special provision of coach for those dining late at Granton, Trinity or Newhaven, providing at least six of them, and possible specials for bathers if demand sufficient.

Lines were initially horse-drawn. First locomotive use was 21 August 1846, taking passengers to Granton for steamship to Dundee (Caledonian Mercury 24th); were they carried free as locomotive tried out? – no BoT authorisation yet for locomotive carriage of passengers. Locomotives took over 17 May 1847 from Scotland Street northward to Granton with opening of line through tunnel to Canal Street / Princes Street, to which trains were drawn up by stationary engine; description of opening Caledonian Mercury 20th mentioned use of locomotives on new line and BoT Inspection which sanctioned their use was only made on 12 May (Report dated 14th) – it had failed when inspected 10 April (Report dated 16th). Locomotives took over to Leith probably late May / early June 1847 – description of opening to Granton said horses would be continued to be used until new locomotives were procured ‘or in about a fortnight’ (Caledonian Mercury 20th). Then original temporary station had to be replaced by permanent beside it (Inspection Reports).

Station detail presents problems since early tts normally only gave times from termini. First inspection report (written and printed versions) said there were five intermediate stations but did not name them.
Trinity and Scotland Street would then have qualified as two of them; the notice in Caledonian Mercury 18 May 1846, dealing with alteration of hours resulting from opening to Leith said that Granton trains would stop at Trinity and the intermediate stations and that Leith trains would set down and pick up at Bonnington Bridge, which provides a third.

A fourth was probably at Warrioston Junction where lines to Leith and Granton diverged. Would have ‘opened’ 20 May 1846. Writer of letter Caledonian Mercury 11 June 1846 complained that he had wanted to go from Leith to Granton and been told to get out at ‘Bonnington Bridge’ and wait for Granton train, but latter had been full and gone past without stopping: a note [added by the editor?] said would have stepped to depth of water at west end of cemetery. ibid 12 July 1847 said had been fatal accident to joiner building platform at Warrioston Station; letter of complaint ibid 31 July 1847 said previous day had taken tickets at Edinburgh for Leith and at Warrioston Station had been told to cross line but wait for a goods trains to pass, did so but Leith train had left by then. Was it just an Exchange Platform or could passengers (e.g. visitors to cemetery) use it as ordinary station?

Where was the fifth? The only other station known to have existed on lines then open was the later one at Junction Bridge. Short-lived unknown? goods only? inspector’s mistake?

This presents various problems. Line could only have opened on 3rd if they had acted on inspector’s verbal assurance; 3rd was a Wednesday – but first service shown in Brad was Thursday only. No mention of station for Escombe seen anywhere else – though market trains might have stopped there. Low Bitchburn probably eventually materialised as (Wear Valley) Junction.

It is likely that the initial service to Crook was market day(s) only because when it first appeared in Brad, July 1844, only a Thursday market service was shown; first clearly in full use January 1845. July 1844 also marked the first appearance of Bishop Auckland both ways, suggesting that this revision was at least partly behind events; thus Crook’s service might have begun earlier.

Evidence from other parts of S&D system suggests that unfinished stations did not provide any bar to starting passenger service – and inspector’s mention of Crook as ‘finished’ seems flattering given what was in the minutes about Crook at this time.

Service for Crook to Bishop Auckland was included in Tuck June 1843. The passenger opening date to Crook has not so far been traced; however, the minutes do show that the line was inspected on 1 January 1844 and that permission to open for passengers was received on or before 6 January. Inspection report (MT 6/2/23) said that following stations were proposed (original mileages adjusted so that Bishop Auckland = 0): South Church; Bishop Auckland; Escombe (1 m 33 ch); Old Etherley Colliery (2 m 26 ch); Low Bitchburn (3 m 26 ch); Howden (4 m 18 ch); Crook (5 m 49 ch). Only 1st, 2nd and 7th finished. No objection to line opening on 3 January, as directors proposed.

For first half of 1844 says trains to/from Bishop Auckland to Stockton and to/from Bishop Auckland to Middlesbrough were 6 times daily (unique thereabouts in suggesting through Bishop Auckland to Stockton service); that for second half of 1844 says 3 times to Bishop Auckland, 4 times to Darlington, 6 times to Stockton and 9 times to Middlesbrough daily; no mention of market trains. Suggests full service to Bishop Auckland before earlier than shown in Brad but does not guarantee it was provided for whole half-year.

S&D and G&Sh say there was an experimental service from Crook to Crawley and Cold Rowley, dividing at Waskerley, op 1 September 1845, cut back to Waskerley 31 October 1845, reinstated fully 1 April 1846. Brad shows Crook as the terminus before November 1846. Since this company’s tables in Brad often included a mention of the lack of recent information, and the information already given shows that it was often behind events, this does not invalidate these dates, especially since an experimental service might well be omitted.

Wear & Derwent Junction minutes (RAIL 716/1) are little help but do fit normal S&D pattern of providing stations after service had begun and uncertainty about sort of service to be provided. 8 April 1846 – agreed plan for station at Waskerley Park and ordered building to start but 30 April agreed building should be suspended and plans used for Cold Rowley instead. 19 August 1846 – some progress made at Cold Rowley and coach shed at Crawley progressing to satisfaction; 29 August 1846 – latter probably ready in three weeks. In fact, Crawley was last in Brad December 1846 and Waskerley was shown as terminus thereafter.

Line from Crook to Waskerley was not inspected by the authorities prior to opening. This emerged when Captain Wynne investigated death of farmer, killed by goods at untended level crossing, and found two trains daily each way were carrying passengers; Captain Lafton was sent to report (April-May 1850). He wrote that now essentially a mineral district; previously few people; no/ poor communications other than railway so company had come to attach some passenger carriages to mineral trains for benefit of miners, coke-burners and other workers. Total revenue of stretch for last six months of 1849 was only £179. Only stations Tow Law; ‘Cole’ Rowley; Waskerley Park. These had only rough platforms, no signals. Normally would not sanction for passengers since also dangers from inclines and unguelared points. However, no other means of travel in district; revenue so small that company would not spend on improvements; official ban would probably lead to men travelling free on mineral wagons so best to leave. Train would have stopped to drop/collect mineral wagons, so chance for workmen to board/leave between stations.

In March 1850 fastest trains were allowed 80 minutes from Crook to Cold Rowley (less than 20 miles) with stops shown only at Tow Law and Waskerley Park. Incline haulage would have accounted for some of this time but there would have been time for extra stops. References have been found to High Souk (alias HIGH STOOP), which appears on the early Ordnance Survey map for this area (see D&C reprint), and to SALTERSGATE COTTAGE, which would have been further towards Burnhill, but passenger use cannot be confirmed (see entries in Section 4) – perhaps railway staff or other workmen.

1843 May 23. Hayle (later West Cornwall). Opened for minerals in sections 23 December 1837 to 11 June 1838. Casual carriage of passengers in mineral trucks began 1841 or earlier. The original line reached Hayle along the north bank of the river. 23 May 1843: proper passenger service began (free travel the previous day). At first operated by a contractor, WM Crotch, a local inn-keeper. His advertisement (Penzance 3 May) listed ‘stations’ as Redruth; Carn Brea; Camborne; Hamby’s Hotel for Copperhouse; Riviere Bridge (maps show area north as the river as Roviere or Riviere); Crotch’s Hotel [near] Hayle Foundry. Unlikely that any proper stations existed at opening. Description of free day trip (R Cornwall Gaz 26 May) refers to passengers being set down at Camborne where the main line crossed the road and no reference is made to anything resembling a station anywhere along the line. On that first trip haulage was mixed: steam, stationary engine for the incline at ‘Hangarrick’, horses from Hayle Bridge (probably same as Crotch’s Riviere Bridge) to Hayle. No later advertisements or ts seen give a full list of stations.

On 4 June 1843 (Whit-Monday) the company ran its own ‘Omnibus Train’ four times each way; 1,500 carried (R Cornwall Gaz, notice 2nd, item 7th). The regular service was still being run by Crotch – his notice (ibid 5 April 1844) says that he was running an extra (third) train each way from the 8th at the request of the company. On Whit Monday, 27 May 1844, upwards of 1,600 passengers are supposed to have been carried – presumably the company again providing service. For these passengers were carried in what were normally goods wagons and either steam used all the way or passengers walked to north side of bridge.

A proper building was opened at the Hayle terminus on 27 May 1844 (Penzance 5 June). Company’s minutes do refer later to existence of, and expenditure on, stations but unfortunately the original books were destroyed and Kew has only a few scraps (copies made by individuals for their own use etc).

West Briton, 30 August 1844 carried notice headed ‘Hayle Railway’, dealing with an alteration to time of afternoon trains; no reference to Robin; Looe. Event is described in Temperance Society and their friends took trip to Cheesewring (terminus) in seven carriages (open trucks?); novelty attracted ‘some many’ (West Briton 30 Aug 1844). Another occurred on 1 August 1859 (West Briton 1 Aug 1859). There were excursions over parts of short branches, normally only used for minerals. On Portreath branch Tehidy was for some years used annually for grand gala of the West Cornwall Teetotal Association at Tehidy Park, home of the Basset family. One such event was 29 August 1856, trains from Penzance and Truro; (M Trevena, TTS July 1985; in explanation of ticket illustrated May 1985 reprints).

The West Cornwall Railway. See Caradon; Looe. Formally opened for goods 28 November 1844, from Cheesewring to Tremabe, between Caradon and Liskeard (West Briton, 6 December; Royal Cornwall Gazette 4th). Note line begun at ‘wrong end’; nearly 300 members of Liskeard Temperance Society and their friends took trip to Cheesewring (terminus) in seven carriages (open trucks?); novelty attracted ‘some thousands’ of spectators. Ticket for Cheesewring exists (JB), dated 19 September 1883; probably for Looe Temperance Society’s 48th annual meeting, at Looe. Event is described in R Cornwall Gaz of 28 September; no reference to special rail provision but St Cleer band in evidence and many visitors; it may be that ticket's name was short-hand for anywhere along line. Many earlier meetings might have generated rail traffic, given Cornish habits of the time.

Unofficial passenger service began? One ploy to evade official rules was to let passenger travel free but charge for parcel or hat. By 1879 practice had arisen of passengers buying tickets for Moorswater to Looe, though they would not travel on that section, and being given a free pass to South Caradon, to which point they travelled at their own risk. MJ Messenger (RCHS Journal, vol XIX, December 1973) says that in August 1884 Col. Rich inspected the line and failed to pass it for passenger use but suggested that it was adequate for excursions where passengers travelled free and at own risk; notices were then posted along the Line and Caradon lines. Service probably ceased in the mid-1890s as track deteriorated owing to company’s poverty. GW Mag February 1909 says practice had been discontinued ‘13 years ago’ because it had become ‘too perilous’. Stops at St Cleer; Railway Terrace; South Caradon; Tokenbury Corner (on later deviation); Rillaton Bridge listed in notice in Cornish Times 16 September 1882 (Looe). Cheeseewing was further on.

1844 April. Springwell Waggonway. At some time between 5 September 1839 when the Brandling Junction line from Gateshead Oakwellgate to South Shields opened, and 22 April 1844 when Brandling Junction co n for tt starting that date said certain trains did not stop (Newcastle Journal 20th) a service to Jarrow along the Springwell Waggonway was provided from an interchange station on this line. The waggonway itself was first included in tt for 19 June and first appeared in Brad in August. Over the years, this probably used more than one site in Jarrow (S Bragg, map evidence). This service closed 1 March 1872, when line opened along the south bank of the Tyne gave Jarrow a direct service.

1844 October. Dockers Lane (later Berkswell); Stechford; Marston Green [LNW]. Minutes of Coaching & Police Committee quoted in LNW Dates: 9 October 1844 ordered that the short train between Birmingham and Rugby call in future at these. ‘Gate’ probably needing to be added to all. 27 November 1844 ordered booking huts and platforms to be erected at these ‘Crossings’. One possible interpretation would be that trains at first stopped experimentally and that results justified proper provision, though no evidence of pre-December use seen. Certainly in use by 12 December 1844 (H Jack); first in Brad January 1845.

1844 December 1. Closure: West London. Notice of closure issued by the Company (T 30 November) says: ‘Passenger trains … will cease running for the winter on and after to-morrow (Saturday), Nov 30 inst’; notice dated 29th. Later usage would have required this to be interpreted as last trains Friday, none Saturday, but evidence of Return shows trains did run on the Saturday. ‘Winter’ lasted nearly 18 years. Return for second half of 1844 was from 1 July to 30 November, inclusive, when railway was closed for passenger traffic (no return for first half of year). Return shows 1,452 trains ran, carrying 2,208 passengers (209 first-, 1,999 second-class) and 1 dog (counted as third-class), total revenue £60 8 9d – they manged £79 16 9d for goods. Inspection report had said all stations were good, not only affording as much accommodation for passengers as was likely to be needed, but also providing dwellings for clerks – begs a few questions but suggests anticipated more custom than actually received.

1844 December 26. MK: Airdrie Hall Craig to Kirkintilloch (MK; also see 1828 B above). This Kirkintilloch was an exchange station with the Edinburgh & Glasgow, near later Lennie (which see in Section 4); the exchange was made necessary because the Monklands line was 4 ft 6 in gauge. At the same time a horse-drawn service began from Bothlin Viaduct (alias Kirby, alias Kirby Misperton). According to printed inspection report dated 5 July 1845 listed stations on main line, with mileages from junction with Great North of England. A

According to printed inspection report dated 5 July 1845 listed stations on main line, with mileages from junction with Great North of England. A

1845 January. ‘Experimental’ service on 8 February. According to SE public opening was preceded by free trips in connection with ferry service from Strood to Chatham (in last week of January, at least) and by ‘experimental’ service on 8 February.

1845 June 2. Wilsontown, Morningside & Coltiness: Morningside to Longridge. Line date from Lewin: all stations given this date are in inspection report MT 6/2/51; inspector said ‘line terminates in a large field about a mile from the village called Whitburn’.

1845 July 8. York & North Midland: York to Scarborough and Rillington to Pickering (thus linking Whitby line, see 1835 B, above, into the system). According to K Hoole, Rail Centres – York, Ian Allan, 1983, 7 July was the formal opening and 8th the public one; this is supported by a letter to The Times of 3 September 1845, which was one of a series concerned with the poor safety record of the company, and quoted Tuesday 8 July as public opening (since when there had been at least 7 accidents) and by the inspection report which said they proposed to open on the 8th. The first station detail found is that in Topham May 1848 (Brad did not provide detail until July 1848).

Printed inspection report dated 5 July 1845 listed stations on main line, with mileages from junction with Great North of England. A number of papers (e.g. York Herald 12th) provided descriptions of line in recording the formal opening; these included listed stations in tabular form with distances from York that look as if they were derived from some official source. The lists, with mileages shown (inspection; press) were CLIFTON (-1), HAXBY (4½; 5), STRENSSALL (6¼; 7), FLAXTON (9½; 10), BARTON (11¾; 12), HOWSHAM (-; 14), KIRKHAM (15¾; 15), thereafter as stations given this opening date in station list. According to Yorkshire Gazette (12th) Howsham was at Rider Lane, about half-mile from village (Col Cobb’s Atlas shows Railway House thereabouts (old station or just house beside the railway?); paper also says that Clifton station was to be built where line crossed Great North Road (about site of later Bootham Junction?). Nothing else has so far been seen about Clifton and Howsham; was former ever built?

Portion to Pickering initially used horse-power, in connection with Whitby & Pickering (see 1835 B++, above) – it was poorly ballasted and inspector only recommended permission to open because horses were to be used (MT 6/2/59). Potter says original stations (stops in horse-drawn days only?) were: Low Marishes; High Marishes, alias Marishes, alias Marishes Road (York & North Midland Rule Book of 1852); Black Bull (alias Kirby, alias Kirby Misperton). According to printed inspection report dated 5 July 1845 there were then no intermediate stations between Rillington and Pickering. Yorks Gazette (12th) included the Bull Lane station where the line crossed the Malton to Pickering turnpike (clearly Kirby) but said nothing about the Marishes, other than passing through them. Marishes Road opened in 1847 (see above). Bull Lane probably soon closed (with locomotive haulage?), appeared, reopened, in tt November 1853, as Kirby. Black Bull was shown on Macaulay's map of 1851, removed by 1854; Kirby not added until 1856/9. High Marshis was present on his map of 1851; removed 1856/9.

1845 November. Clarence (leased to Stockton & Hartlepool): Byers Green area market services. Market service from Todhills and Coxhoe to West Hartlepool and Stockton and back was first in Brad November 1845; no intermediate detail; timings suggest Todhills passengers were taken to Coxhoe and back (or left at junction while engine did this trip). August 1848 tt: service was cut back to Byers Green, presumably a previously unlisted stop. June 1864 tt: fortnightly service from Leasingthorne added (no return journey shown); by now timetages suggest that carriages from the short branches were collected at junctions to form one train, but that Byers Green passengers still went via Coxhoe on way home. From August 1865 tt the Byers Green service again started from Todhills, no return journey shown. April 1867 tt was last time service was shown.

See Section 4 for later history of Byers Green.

1845 November 24. Manchester & Birmingham: Cheadle Hulme to Macclesfield. Stockport, 21st, gave date of line opening without listing stations; Macclesfield, 22nd, listed stations but did not explicitly provide opening date, although company’s notice was headed November 24. All stations also listed in printed inspection report, dated 21 November 1845.

1846 April 13. LY: Ashton branch. Date, Easter Monday, from Manch (15th), Manchester Times (17th) and LY (from different paper), T 5 September 1848 (item on financial affairs of LY) and Brad Sh 1850 give 15th – clearly latter result of early copying error. RCHS Journal October 1971 refers to handbill issued by Manchester & Leeds, dated opening day and giving list of stations and fares. The intermediate stations, with first-class fares from Ashton were: Lamb Bridge (6d); Culcheth (6d); Newton (1/-); Manchester was also 1/- None of these have been seen elsewhere. It was possible (RCHS suggestion) that they later became Droylesden; Clayton Bridge; Park. Perhaps re-siting involved. If the last did become Park it was presumably included in advance of opening. The earliest full detail seen otherwise is in Topman May 1848. A letter from WJ Skellern in the January 1972 Journal said that the 6 inch OS sheet 104 surveyed 1845, published 1848 puts Culcheth at site of Clayton Bridge and Park at its later site. Sheet 105 which should have include the continuation of the line does not but it shows several features including ‘Lum’ in name (modern Lumb) in the area where Droylsden station was built. ‘Newton’ might be Miles Platting: this would better reflect the fare quoted, and would fit the fact that Park was opened later. Clayton Bridge, Miles Platting and Park were all within Newton township. Manchester Courier 12 September 1846 included case about man who had left wagons of dirt on the line between Culcheth and Droylesden stations on 27 July (delay had resulted from man ‘disappearing’ for a while).

1846 June 1. Blackburn & Preston: Preston Chronicle, Preston Guardian, Preston Pilot (all 6th) and co minutes (RAIL 500/2, 30 May) confirmed opening date. Newspapers refer to a hastily-arranged trip (mostly directors and friends, but some general public) on the afternoon of the day line had passed its inspection (30 May 1846); stop made at Mill Hill for a local notable (clearly one-off event), otherwise trip seems to have been non-stop along new portion of line. Two papers listed stations ‘it is intended to have’, Guardian ‘will be five’ intermediate stations (including Farington, already open on line joined to reach Preston); furthermore, none mentioned in description of line or in co’s notice in Pilot (6th), which quaintly said: ‘The Directors hope to be able very shortly to complete arrangements which will enable them to put additional Trains, to send carriages through to other Lines, and to convey any number of Passengers; but they will in the meantime do all in their power to accommodate the Public’. The list was Cherry Tree; Pleasington Chapel; Houghton Turnpike Road; Bamber Bridge Turnpike Road; thus safe to assume these opened later.

1846 June 5. Middlesbrough & Redcar. Both own company’s minutes (RAIL 484/2) and minutes of S&D Traffic & Coaching Committee (RAIL 667/34, 667/35) give 4 June. That day they ran a VIP special and a fare-paying public excursion (York Herald 6th), Rtn PP was ‘From 3 June 1846’.

Other problems concern early stations on line. Only Cleveland Port and Lazenby appeared in early tts (company’s and Brad) but there are references in the minutes to these plus Cargo Fleet and Lackenby. However, minutes seem to have used Cargo Fleet and Cleveland Port indiscriminately for same site. There is no certainty that all opened with the line. Services provided for some are likely to have been meagre. The company’s timetable for September 1847 shows five trains each way per day between Middlesbrough and Redcar. Cleveland Port and Lazenby were only served by two each way. It may be that the unlisted stations were only served, perhaps on a request-only basis, by these two; perhaps request stops were made by some or all of those which, according to the timetable, ran non-stop between Middlesbrough and Redcar. The uncertainties over siting are so great that no map is attempted.

1848 August. Furness. Reliable information on the early history of this line is difficult to find. Early minutes are lacking in detail, which is hardly surprising given that board meetings were held in London, far from the scene of a line that initially operated in isolation. Opening was authorised on 12 August (that would have been date on certificate sent from London). According to D&C 14, a rudimentary service from Barrow to Dalton began, Sundays only (first on 16th), using a converted sheep truck; full service began 24 August (Rtn PP), withdrawn at the end of summer owing to operational difficulties. Report, Manch 31st abridged from Kendal Mercury, says line was opened for traffic on 20 July and for passengers on 24 August; it refers to Furness Abbey, Kirkby Ireleth, Barrow, ‘Peel’, Dalton. Thus room for some unconventional use? Brad version differs in detail – e.g. Barrow is not initially mentioned. Inspection report (MT 6/353) supports D&C. Since it would have only been concerned with a service of wider potential use (from Fleetwood by steamer to Piel, then rail to Dalton, finally by coach to Ulverston and the Lakes), this might not be a contradiction. Line was operating detached from the national system and local services might have run, additional to those in tt. Inspector approved opening of main line Rampside to Dalton (6 m 14 ch); branch to Barrow (1 m 20 ch); branch terminating at Sandside in the parish of Kirkby- Ireleth (6 m 64 ch) and extension to Piel Pier (53 ch). Some of stations listed ‘not quite finished’ but were ‘in a state for the reception of passengers’. They were Piel; Rampside; Barrow; Furness Abbey; Dalton; one for Kirkby- Ireleth (= Kirkby-in- Furness); and another a little beyond at slate- works which was then terminus. No evidence has been seen elsewhere for a passenger service to slate- works (north east of Kirkby); if there was an early service, it is likely that it would have ceased once line was extended to Broughton, leaving slate line as a dead-end branch. At one time there were clearly stations both for ‘town’ and pier at Piel but when ‘town’ station came into being is not known – it would have served no useful purpose in the early days when the line operated detached from the main network, mainly for excursionists. What facilities existed on the pier at first is not known; it was clearly re-sited several times. Brad never gave separate mentions but did intermittently note that some trains ran to the pier. Also shown as P P BARROW (hb) and Barrow (Piel Pier) in adverts in Belfast press. So much chopping and changing that only way of dealing with it is by giving a summary of information from local press and tts there and Brad:

1846: Advert in Westminster Gazette 22 August gave details of service to and from Piel Pier; item ibid said line would open in the course of the next week, to connect with steamers to Fleetwood, whence rail services would take passengers to other destinations – e.g. Liverpool.

October: last advert seen in local press.

November: ‘some doubts about continuance’.

December: omitted.

1847: May: Piel – Rampside – Furness Abbey – Dalton; to come into force on 24th instant; confirmed by co ½ Kendal Mercury 4 September.

June and July: same stations.

August and September: now from Barrow, different times each day – tides.

October: omitted.

1848: February: index shows Furness Railway ‘closed for the present’.

March: on and after 1st March: Piel to Dalton. Carlisle Patriot said line to Broughton inspected 23 February, satisfactory, and would soon come into use. Earliest reference to Dalton for this time is in notices in many papers that trains would run from there in connection with steamers from 1 March.

April to December: service from both Piel and Barrow, stops as 1847, plus extension to Broughton.

1849: January to June: Barrow only to Broughton.

July to October: from Piel also.

November: from Barrow only.

Same up to and including:

1850: April, but e.g. February 1850: ‘No information – supposed to be correct’.

1850: May to October: Piel also.

November: extension to Whitehaven added.

1853: storm of 5 and 6 January badly damaged Piel pier and line (Westmorland Gazette 8th, 13th). Pier reop to public 11 June 1853 (Preston Chronicle 13th) and adverts suggest rail service now resumed.

Next gap for Piel seen was omission from Brad December 1857. Threelder samples suggest closed during winter:

1862 connecting steamers to Barrow; 1864 trains from Piel resumed 7 June; later 1864, 1866 closed in winter.

1867 ‘new trains’ (i.e. additional) for steamer passengers and local use in tt alterations for 1 June; one dependent on tide times. Was this start of ‘town’ station?

1868 – co ½ Cumberland Pacquet 18 August said passenger trains had begun to run on new pier in February.

No later gaps seen.

At one time note in Brad that for steamer passengers only – but stop at Rampside shown; this note was last there October 1881.

1 October 1881: steamer service diverted to Barrow Ramsden Dock so no further use for Piel Pier.

Other stations’ later history in Section 4.

1846 October 7. York & North Midland: Seamer to Filey and Hull to Bridlington. Date from Brad, October 1847 – said line would open 7th inst. Confirmed for Bridlington line by co n Hull Packet (2nd). Earliest detail seen in national tts is in Topham May 1848, Brad July 1848. However, description of formal opening of: Filey line on 5th (Yorks Gaz 10th) includes Cayton and Grinstead. That for Bridlington formal on 6th (ibid ) listed Cottingham, Beverley, Lockington, Hutton Cranwick, Driffield, Nafferton, Burton Agnes. Earliest reference for Carnaby so far seen is advert for George Robinson’s show of rams there on 11 August 1847 (York Herald 7th) which said that all trains would stop at ‘Carnaby station’. For Lowestoth earliest is in Hull Packet (31 March 1848), reporting death of stationmaster’s wife on 25th.

1846 November 4. Shrewsbury & Chester. Line opening date from co n T 9th; all stations given opening date appear in tt beginning 28 November reproduced in GW, volume I, opposite page 180. Brad did not provide detail until February 1847. Two trains each way ran on formal opening day, 2 November. First carried Chester Blue Coat boys as well usual directors, etc; second apparently free for all, directors being ‘exceedingly liberal’ with tickets. Probably non-stop runs (March 7th, co notice and report).

1846 November 18. LNWR: Bletchley to Bedford. Opening 17 November was clearly formal event only (co n T 14th; item 18th); Bedfordshire Mercury 21st said line was opened by an ‘excursion’ train. Formal description says there were five other (unnamed) stations; these were named in Leamington Spa Courier 21st.

1846 December 17. Lancaster & Carlisle: opening Oxenholme to Carlisle. Line date co n Kendal Mercury 12th, all stations included in description of formal opening (15th and 16th) Carlisle Patriot (18th).
1847. Newcastle & Berwick

Problems concern details of intermediate stations. First Brad reference is May 1847, when Newcastle & Berwick table has Newcastle to Morpeth; and Berwick Tweedmouth Station to Chat-hill, coach service covering gap. Newcastle papers seen are no more helpful at this time. July 1847 Brad shows line opened right through, but no station detail until August. Later press reports are contradictory; one possibility is that first given below (19 June one) detailed what was originally expected, not the reality; another is that there were changes of mind and briefly-existing temporary stations.

1 March 1847. Newcastle to Morpeth. Inspection report (MT6/4/13) does not list intermediate stations but does say that temporary wooden buildings to shelter passengers have been erected pending completion of permanent stations. Kelso Chronicle 5th confirms opening date and says intermediate stations are Killingworth; Cramlington; Morpeth.

29 March 1847: Tweedmouth to Chathill op 29 March 1847 (Newcastle Journal 3 April-line). Some time before opening Newcastle Courant 4 September 1846 / Berwick Advertiser: according to present arrangements station for Belford is to be at Cragg Mill; many feel this is unsatisfactory because of poor approach from Belford and will result in traffic from west and south Belford being thrown into Mousen and Lucker stations; more sensible if station eastward of tile works, allowing Mousen to be dispensed with; petition being sent to company.

Inspection report (MT6/4/13) lists intermediate stations, with mileages from junction with Newcastle & North Shields as Newham (45); Lucker (47); Mousen (49); Belford (50½); Beal (56½). It says that permanent stations were in course of construction; even those for temporary purposes not all erected, but ‘ample time’ for completing this would be available between inspection 12 March and proposed opening 22 March. The distance given for Belford is about 1 mile too much (and would fit site of Cragg Mill) – S Bragg.

A description of the line in Newcastle Guardian 19 June 1847 says stations with distances from Newcastle are: ‘Pegsworth’ (= Pegswood?) 18 miles 26 chains; Longhirst 20 6; Ulgham 22 6; Widdrington 23 6; Acklington 28 6; Lesbury 34 50; Longhoughton 37 26; Little Mill 29 26; ‘Fallowden’ 42 66; Chathill 45 66; Newham 46 66; Lucker 49 0; Mousen 50 66; Belford 52 26; Beal 58 35; Tweedmouth 65 5.

Article in same paper 3 July includes (differences); no reference to station at Pegswood; station at Old Moor for Longhirst and Ulgham; temporary for Alnwick (=Lesbury); Long Houghton; will be station at Little Mill for Earl Grey; no Falloden.

Possible explanations: (1) line opened with Belford station at Cragg Mill and another at Mousen, soon (before / with August 1847 tt) renamed Belford ‘Cragg Mill’, opened new Belford and closed Mousen; (2) last minute change of mind. (1) is better fit to evidence seen but not certain.

Any existence of early Pegswood and Ulgham stations is unlikely.

1 July 1847: Morpeth to Chathill, thus completing line (item and notice Newcastle Guardian 3rd).

Early progress report (clearly not comprehensive) in Newcastle Guardian 24 October 1846 said would be stations at Widdrington; Acklington (for Felton); Warkworth; Long-houghton; Christon Bank; Chat Hill; Newham; Lucker; Belford; Beal.

1847 March 1. Glasgow & South Western: Kilmarnock – Barassie – Troon via Gatehead. Line date from GSW. Gatehead was only intermediate station shown in Brad March 1847. An alternative route was available and this one suffered periods of complete closure and summer-only use. The following has been derived from Brad but the whole story has not been established:

Line last there May 1848; June 1848 note that line closed for improvement (clo 22 May – co n Glasgow Herald 13th – passengers diverted to Irvine and ‘Busbie’ route). Back May 1850; last present October 1853 (but Glasgow Free Press 12 March 1853 – in consequence of closing of Kilmarnock & Ayr a stage-coach service is about to be started).

Back by July 1854; last September 1854.

Note January 1856 says was closed for winter. September 1856 – present.

1857 July to December – absent.

Trains again May1862.

No later omissions seen.

Evidence for Barassie, which logically would have been junction station at western end of line is patchy and inconclusive. First seen in co n for summer service from 6 May 1844 (Ayrshire Advertiser 2nd); not mentioned in co n for winter services from 7 October (Glasgow Herald 7th) but not conclusive since did not give full station detail. In Brad first included July to October 1847; omitted November, back June 1848 (when the line was shown as closed), last shown August 1848; included in Topham May 1848 and March 1850 (first and last issues seen) but no trains calling. Later it was omitted on occasions when line was shown with trains (e.g. at least January 1852 to June 1852); this is most unlikely to be the full/accurate picture.

1847 March 19. Whitehaven Junction. Company notice of opening gave full tt for on and after 19th, including Parton (Carlisle Journal 27th). However previous week’s paper, describing opening, made it look like formal occasion – referred to Directors’ Special and half-fare excursion – regarded this as shabby behaviour in that richest got free trip.

1847 May 3. Blyth & Tyne: Sedgehill to Blyth. Date from Newcastle Journal May 8; also given by Lambert’s Handbook to Tynemouth and Blyth & Tyne Railway, mid/late 1860s. March 3, in modern print, presumably copying error.

1847 June 1. Southampton & Dorchester. This was the planned opening date but problems with the tunnel between Southampton and Blechryndeon meant that the full service could not be run, though enough rolling stock was taken through the tunnel, without passengers, to provide two trains from Blechryndeon and one from Dorchester; passengers were taken by road between the two stations (Salisbury 5th). The full service (Blechryndeon to Dorchester) was in operation on Sunday 6 June, at the latest (tt, W Fly P 12th).

1847 August 3. Wear Valley (S&D). Perhaps formal only opening. Minutes say it was opened by the directors and their friends on the 3rd, ‘since when the coach trains have run regularly’ (RAI 7182). Durham Chronicle 6th only mentioned first train, which left Darlington at noon and was clearly a directors’ train. Likelihood strengthened by findings on line opened 1846 June 5 (see above).

In this case Return no help since Wear Valley lumped with S&D, already open.

1847 September 2. Eastern Union & Hadleigh Junction. Herapath, 28 August, said formally op 20 August; neither of [intermediate?] stations yet complete but temporary accommodation is being provided for passengers by the opening of the line ‘for travelling’, expected in course of a few days. All in Brad October but later tables often nd so cannot be sure of continuity of use. Hadleigh confirms existence at opening – in inspection report. *Co n Bury & Norwich Post 8*th confirmed opening but gave no intermediate detail.

1847 September 7. Keighley to Skipton. Opening date from Leeds Mercury, Saturday 11 and Bradford Observer, Thursday 9 September, which both say opened to the public on Tuesday. The date previously given, 8 September seems to have been derived ultimately from Clinker’s corrections to Lewin. Skipton was only station mentioned in account of ‘contractors’ opening on 1st (Bradford Observer 2*nd*), public opening and item on excursion where other intermediate stations were mentioned (Leeds Times 28 September). However, fares table for time of opening (minute 257 of Leeds Committee – John Gough) includes Cononley, Kildwick and Steeton and the first two are mentioned as stations in an advert Bradford Observer, 16 September 1847. This suggests, though does not prove that these were available from opening. The dates given in Section 4 represent the earliest clear evidence for their existence.

1847 September 20. Edinburgh & Northern: Burntisland to Lindores temporary terminus and to Cupar. *Edinburgh Advertiser 2*nd confirmed line date. Lengthy account of formal opening, 19*th*, shows most, probably all, of ‘missing’ stations were there. Not always clear whether mentioning stations or listing villages passed but explicit references to stations at Kinghorn; Lochmuir, close to New Inn (= Falkland Road – see Caledonian Books reprint of early OS, sheet 40); Kettle; Springfield. First tt for line, Brad October 1847, omits: Kinghorn; Sinclairlaw; Falkland Road; Kingskettle; Collessie; Springfield. Collessie mentioned as stop in co tt for 30 September (Dundee ... Advertiser 1 October) text added June 1848, no change in overall train timings. All in Tophem May 1848.

1847 October 18. York & North Midland: Filey to Bridlington. *Hull Advertiser Friday, 22*nd*; line inspected Saturday (16*th*), opened to public Monday last, since when trains have been running regularly. York Gaz and *York Herald (23*rd*) told same story, though wording so similar that almost certainly common source; none had any station detail. Brad Share 1848, in a calendar of openings also gave 18*th*, Co’s T 22 February 1848. Hull Advertiser 25 February 1848 said op 20 October 1847; date used by e.g. NE Maps. Earlier date preferred as nearer to event; copying mistake by railway official who compiled half-yearly? No detail in Brad until July.

1847 December: Leicester & Swannington (J Gough, from Leicester Chronicle). On and after Friday 24 December 1847, service reduced to Saturdays only service Leicester – Glenfield – Ratby – Desford, for reconstruction of line, with deviations (paper of 25*th*). Line to be fully reopened to Long Lane 27 March 1848 (paper of 25*th*), those stations shown as re-sited in 1848 would now have been (re-)opened on new sites; station detail at first not always complete in local press or in Brad.

Prior to 1847 it had been mainly a mineral line, on which a couple of passenger carriages had been attached to its trains for the convenience of people in a rural district (Return, reporting accident of 28 May 1844).

1848: Morningside area lines. In this note, the main consideration is the dates of closure, subsequent reopening and final closure; a mere recital of tt dates would seem to be misleading. Original openings covered in Section 4 and 1835 C, above, which see also for comments about reliability of information for this area.

The original services seem to have been closed as a result of opening of Caledonian main line through from Glasgow to Carlisle; stations on this line would have taken much of traffic previously carried by lines to Morningside. Caledonian main line was first included in March 1848 tt. In that month two services from Glasgow to Morningside are shown, in separate tables: Wishaw & Colness to Morningside (a), showing all the stops including Carluke (alias Stirling Road);

Wilsontown, Morningside & Colness Railway (b): Glasgow – Morningside – Longridge; detail only given for second section.

It is clear from timings that both services were provided by the same trains. In April (a) was omitted; (b) was still shown in April but May ‘service suspended’. This looks suspiciously like it inertia. Once the main line had opened on 15 February some places involved would have been better served by it. There would have been no need for this Carluke because there was now a station of this name on main line. Also seems odd that second leg of the service should apparently have outlived first. However, whole service might have survived for a little while after main line opened, in the hope that local demand would be enough to justify it. The figures for numbers of passengers given for the Wilsontown line in the Returns would suggest that passengers ceased to be carried about the end of February or middle of March 1848. No comparable evidence exists for the Wishaw & Colness since its return was by then included as part of the Caledonian’s.

Morningside was again served in 1850, when once more the tt version does not make sense as it stands. What at first sight was the extension of the Edinburgh – Bathgate service to Morningside was first shown in the tt August 1850. Closer inspection shows that the one table included two distinct services: Edinburgh to Bathgate and Bathgate to Morningside, without any semblance of a worthwhile connection between them. Apparently then, according to the tt at that stage, a Bathgate to Morningside service was operating in isolation. The line from Glasgow did not come back into tt until December 1851, again in two tables: one showing Morningside as terminus, the other continuation on to Bathgate as terminus. Common sense would suggest that this was a late arrival in tt and would have opened at same time as, or earlier than, Morningside to Bathgate one.

Brad Share, 1851, gives 1 May 1850 for opening (part reopening) by Edinburgh & Glasgow of Wilsontown line, which would cover Glasgow to Morningside service; this fits date given by G&Sh. Edinburgh to Bathgate (presumed to be error for Bathgate to Morningside/Longridge) is shown as opened in 1850 but no exact date given. However, it is clear that tt was well behind events.

Official permission to open ‘Bathgate branch of Morningside & Colness, from Longside’ [Longridge] to junction with Edinburgh & Glasgow at Bathgate’ was dated 30 March 1850. Presumably Morningside to Longridge, needed to reach this, was not inspected because had been recently used for passengers. This would suggest 1 May (or earlier?) as likely opening date for the whole stretch from junction with main line to Bathgate. Report of Edinburgh & Bathgate special meeting, 13 March 1850 (day after first inspection), said connection with Wilsontown, Morningside & Colness would open for passengers ‘in a short time’ (Herald 4 May, p. 449).

Trains were last shown on the Bathgate to Morningside section in December 1852 tt; those from Glasgow were last shown in February 1853 tt. This time there might have been some logic to the latter lasting longer since there would have still been a main line connection; however, simultaneous closure would also have made sense.

* = this was printed version; original (MT6/299) had correct name.

1848 March 1. Eastern Counties: March to St Ives (co½ T 28 February and Cambridge Chronicle 4th); the line was opened by excursion from Huntingdon (later Godmanchester) to Wisbech, 52 carriages, upwards of 900 passengers, including children from various schools along the line – most of whom were carried in open carriages – boys only taken, girls left behind and initially disappointed but perhaps cheered up when boys saturated by incessant rain. Regular trains ran later in the day.

1848 May 23. Stirling to Perth (Scottish Central). Perthshire Advertiser 18th described formal opening on 15th; mentioned all stations though train did not stop at all. Perthshire Courier 18 May carried company notice of opening on 22nd, with outline tt. However following week’s paper’s description is clearly of another non-public opening on that date. Courier only mentioned one train each way. Supposed to leave Perth at 10 but late. Halted at most stations and some of level-crossings to collect passengers. Initially directors and friends only and for return journey second-class carriages attached to carry all and sundry (free?). No suggestion that tt trains ran – would have been difficult to fit in. Co½ T 4 September says opened 23rd and ‘is now open’ notice was dated 23rd (Caledonian Mercury 25th).

1848 June 6. Knottingley to Stockbridge. This was opening date for paying public. On previous day (formal opening) there was a special free of charge for the public; only Askern and Womersley mentioned apart from termini (Nottingham Journal 9th).

1848 June 15. Addition of stations on South Devon. Plymouth, Saturday 17 June, has two items. One says that Iabybridge opened on Thursday; the other that trains now stop at Colebrook (= Plympton), Iabybridge and Brent. It has been assumed that all three opened on the same date.

1848 July 24. Liverpool, Crosby & Southport. Line date from Southport Vi 22nd and 29th. There seem to have been several early changes of station sites and short-term closures. Both Birkdale and Crosby included there but neither in Brad before the end of 1850 (e.g. see March 1850); they were in Topham from soon after line opening but no trains shown calling. Hightown not included in either tt. Brad January 1851 shows Birkdale and Hightown with trains but Crosby Village served by omnibus from Waterloo; February 1851 shows trains calling at Crosby Station. Clearly there are still details needing to be established.

1848 August 1. York & North Midland: Selby to Market Weighton (Heraphath 12th/Yorks Gaz 5th). In August 1848 Brad this line appeared only as a footnote in the York to Market Weighton table. First detail of any sort given October 1849 when Bubwith (= Bubwith) and Holme were shown as the only intermediate stops (Heraphath said they were the only ‘road stations’); from 1850, footnotes refer to Tuesday market and Monday fortnightly fair trains to York, stopping at ‘all stations’ without naming them. These might have been provided from start since relevant trains were given extra time, without any reason given. Inspection report (MT 6/5/86) only lists Bubwith and Holme, but it is unlikely that any facilities would have been provided at stops only used by market trains. In November 1851 a full list appeared, no limitation on days. (In December 1851 there was a note that the Gatehouse stops were market days only but this had probably been put back in error – it was omitted next month.)

1848 August 1. NB opening to Bowland Bridge. This date is given by Brad Sh. A company notice dated 27 July in The Scotsman, concerning arrangements for the Edinburgh Agricultural Show says ‘The Hawick Branch is expected to be Opened to Bowshank, on Tuesday the 1st August’. Co n Caledonian Mercury (3rd), dated 1st, said line is now open to Bowshank. All stations given this date were included in notice. (A column on Shares ... in Caledonian Mercury, 3rd, said it would open ‘tomorrow’ – source of date given by D&C?)

1848 August 17. East Lancashire, Stubbins to Accrington. A notice Manch 16th says line plus ‘intermediate stations’ will open on this date. Account of opening, ibid 25th, confirms opening then. Haslingden was clearly ready and was the only intermediate station shown in co’s tt, ibid 26th. Baxenden and Helmsho are both described as ‘under construction’ but this might well mean that platforms at least were available for trains – in Helmsho’s case it states that when completed it will be a comfortable ‘building’. All were included in Brad September. The possibility thus exists that Baxenden and Helmsho opened a little after the line.

1848 August 17. East Lancashire opening from Greta to Dumfries. All papers seen gave either a description of the formal opening on 22nd, including list of stations, or a brief reference to public opening on 23rd; see e.g. Greenock Advertiser 25th (former), Scotsman 26th (latter).

1848 September 27. Glasgow, Barrhead & Neilston Direct opening Glasgow to Barrhead and Spiesbridge. Co n Glasgow Herald (25th) said in heading would open from Glasgow, Temporary Station at Gushet Fauld, near Old Gorbals Toll; main table gave Glasgow, Pollokshaws, Kinnishead Junction, Nitshill, Barrhead. Separate one gave times for Thornliebank branch (heading) with times from Glasgow to Spiesbridge and return, with no reference to intermediate stops (but perhaps these provided on horse drawn branch); on balance it would seem that S and T were used indiscriminately for same place. Description of line (formal opening, 26th, ibid 29th) included stations ‘Kinnishead’, and ‘Thornliebank’ (no Spies Bridge). Greenock Observer (29th) managed ‘Kennishead Junction’ and ‘Speirs Bridge’.

1848 October 2. Eastern Counties opening of branches from Witham to Braintree and Maldon (co n Essex Standard 6th – see Chron April 14, p 24). Intermediate stations included in footnotes as request stops. Shortly after JV Gooch had been engaged there was serious dispute between him and engine drivers, resulting in most of latter being replaced by promoted firemen or new recruits (see RS Joby, Eastern Counties Railway, Marford, 1996). Company had to run reduced service, including complete closure of these two branches from 18 August 1850 (co n T 19th). Service restored 26 August (co n 26th, saying staff of engine drivers had been completely reorganised). Paper actually referred to fortnight of cuts but that probably included week of confused reductions before 19th.

1848 October 30. Return says 31 October but description in Leeds 4 November says that three trains ran each way on the Monday (30th), as per timetable cited.

1848 November 20. Opening of Liverpool and Bury line [L Y]. Bolton Chronicle, 18th, has notice for opening on 20th. This does not list intermediate stations but an article refers to inspection (13th) and directors’ and shareholders’ trip (17th). This says there are 16 stations and then lists 17, separated only by commas, one of which (Bolton) was stated to be already open. These, in part, would seem to be journalist’s names: Liverpool; Bootle-lane; Prescot-road [misprint for Preston Road]; Simon’s-wood; Kirby [Kirkby]; Rainford; Pimbo-lane; Farmoor [Upholland?]; Upholland [Orrell?]; Wigan; Hindley; West Houghton [one word elsewhere in report]; Bolton; Darcy Lever; Bradley-fold; Blacklane; Bury [used already-open East Lancs station].

Manchester Times 21 November also listed stations: Liverpool, Bootle Lane, Preston Road, Simmond’s Wood, Kirby, Rainford, Pimbo Lane, Upholland, Orrell, Arches? (print indistinct = Pemberton?), Hindley, Westhoughton, Bolton, Darcy Lever, Bradford...
Lane (= Bradley Fold), Brook Lane (= Black Lane?), Bury. Its account said that, as usual with new lines, much was unfinished, including temporary sheds for stations.

Pemberton seems to have been lost altogether. However ‘intended’ should be added to some on the list. Stations except Pemberton directed to this note were included in it headed November Liverpool Mail 9 December but no trains shown calling. 76 January, but still headed ‘Railway information for November’ had trains now calling at all previously present except Westhoughton. Trains were first shown calling there in 10 March. Pemberton was still not included in any tt in that paper, whose erratic provision of its ended with one in August. The evidence is unsatisfactory but it would seem most likely that some stations were added piecemeal in the early months of the line’s existence. See entry on Hindley in Section 4.

1849: Oakengates. Openings of the lines either side of here were messy and resulted in much conflicting evidence in the press as papers copied information from one another.

Shropshire Union from Shrewsbury to Stafford opened 1 June (co n T 19 May). Shrewsbury & Birmingham ran excursion trains that day, double journey at single fair, Shrewsbury – Wellington – Oakengates; regular trains 2nd (London D N 4th). Shrewsbury 8th treated 1st as regular opening for both but confirmed existence of all Shropshire Union stations given this date. Return adds to confusion – says opened 18 June. This was actually the date of opening for goods (derived from co n Shrewsbury 25 May, which said Oakengates would open for goods on Monday, 17 June – 17th was actually a Sunday).

The next section, on to Wolverhampton, was opened with excursion trains on the 12th November and to the public on the 13th (co n T 10th). Again, Shrewsbury (16th) treated 12th as normal opening. It mentioned all stations given 13th as opening date – company’s own notice would seem to deserve precedence in a case like this.

1849 March 31, Blackwall: extension to Bow & Bromley. Co n T 29 March said line would be opened throughout with locomotive power on 2nd April. However, an item in the paper of 2 April said that it had opened on the Saturday (31 March). It would thus seem that the Blackwall made a habit of early opening – see London, Fenchurch Street (Section 4). This leaves a problem concerning the short length from Bow & Bromley to the interchange station at Victoria Park, Bow. The Times says nothing about this so that it might well not have come into use until 2 April, date given by L; the Eastern Counties were also, unenthusiastically, involved here and might have waited until the advertised date – in this case, there would have been no point in the Blackwall running on from Bow Bromley to the exchange station.

At first trains ran through from Fenchurch Street. At one stage experimented by making passengers for the extension change at one station. Initially at 20 minute intervals; by 29 August.

Blackwall service was diverted to the North London line 26 August 1850 and its station at Victoria Park closed; the Eastern Counties part survived a little longer, passengers presumably walking between it and new North London station at Bow. Portion of line closed in 1850 reopened 13 April 1854 for service Fenchurch Street to Tilbury (junction now in place).

Blackwall line originally about 5 ft gauge, cable hauled. In first three months of 1849 converted to standard gauge, locomotive hauled. Two lines altered in turn so service continued but frequency reduced from 15 to 30 minutes. One line opened, converted, 15 February (London Local); full service resumed 2 April (co n T 29 March), initially at 20 minute intervals; by 29 August (co ½ T) restored to 15 minutes. Now possible to travel directly between any of stations – presumably some journeys only possible by going to one of termini and back (see London Local for details).

1849 May 15, LBCS: Hailsham and Eastbourne branches. LBSC co ½ T 23 July gives 14th as do many papers but but trains on 14th carried officials and a party of children from the local workhouse and others on half-fare trains (Brighton Gazette 15th, 16th and Back Track vol 13 no 12, pp 662-3).

1849 July 19, Whitehaven & Furness Junction. Lewin and D&C 14 say 21st but Return says opened 19 July and is supported by Whitehaven Herald 21st, which mentioned all stations (formal 18th). What increases the suspicion that a misprint has been copied in secondary works down the years is the coincidence (?) that the company was incorporated on 21 July 1845, so that the ‘21’ quoted for opening might have been copied from the wrong place.

1849 July 20, MSJA: Manchester Oxford Road to Altrincham. Line date given by co n March 18th. Co n Stockport 27th gives intermediate stations. It is dated ‘line is now opened’. [See 1864 September 1, below.]

1849 August 1, LNW: Stalybridge to Huddersfield. Co ½ T 18 August gave line opening date; all stations listed in co tt for 1 August, Stockport 3rd and in description of line in Manchester Examiner & Times 18 July, which covered official opening on 13 July and said public would be 1 August.

1849 August 15, NB: Reston to Dun(s)(D&C 6); Evidence contradictory. Inspection report (MT 67/100) says ‘3 intermediate stations’, which would most likely have been Chirnside; Edrom; Crimstone (alias Crumstone). However, earliest ts seen, Edinburgh District December 1849 and February 1850 only include Chirnside and Crimstone; same in co tt shown in D&C 6 for 1850 (January?); Edrom was added to Macaulay’s maps between 1851 and 1854. First detail in Brad May 1852, Chirnside and Edrom listed. Given the inspection report, early tt versions perhaps reflect relative importance of stations in company’s eyes. Clearly Crimstone dropped out very early, probably before May 1852, though still shown by Macaulay. One possibility is that Edrom was initially used for goods only, changing roles with Crimstone 1851/2. Free excursions 7 August (Newcastle Gazette 11th).

1849 October 29, North British extension to Hawick. Date given by Lewin. Confirmed by Scottish Railway Gazette of Saturday 3 November, which says line opened on Monday, and Scotsman 31st. There was no public demonstration owing to the ravages of cholera but many did come to see the comings and goings of the trains during the day. Belses mentioned in Edinburgh Evening Post (3 November).

1849 November 1, Aberdeen Railway: Dubton to Limpet Mill. This date was given in co ½ T 27 November but some sort of service seems to have operated for a couple of days previously. Opening had originally been advertised for 23 October (e.g. Aberdeen Journal 17th) but problems connected with inspection and payment to contractors meant delay, Co n dated 30 October, Aberdeen Journal 31st. Commissioner of Railways had authorised opening and trains were ‘now running’; this also gave outset tt from 1 November. Little station detail in press or Brad (first 1850) at line opening but all stations given this date in Topsham December 1849, when it first included line. According to Stonehaven Journal 6 November, which treated 1 November as opening date, bridge across the Water of Bervie had not been formally passed by BoT inspector (seems to contradict other versions). Directors played safe; engine across on own, carriages pushed over by men stationed for purpose, any passengers who ‘felt any alarm for the stability of the arches’ walked across. How long this arrangement continued is not known.
1850 May 1 Llanelly: opening for regular passenger service. Line had opened for goods in stages 1833 onwards; reached Pontarddulais 1 June 1839, Garnant April 1840, Duffryn 6 May 1841 (GW). Passenger service began – no mention of passenger revenue in accounts for half-year to 28 April 1838 (Herapath July). Passenger duty first paid for year 1840 (PP 2). Return for July to December 1840 compared with later ones suggests that service was provided throughout the period covered (1,840 then, 1,204 in first half of 1841, 1,281 in second half of 1841); it appears from return that only third-class passengers were carried, by same trains that carried the goods. At first there were no recognised stops or timetable and this might have resulted in a loss of passengers as the novelty value wore off since in the 1842 and 1843 returns the space for 'number of passengers' is left blank, with the note: 'no account is kept of these since the amount is so small'. Numbers of passengers given again in return for 1844-5. The picture given in GW differs from that given in the primary sources seen; a possible explanation is that services provided by contractors ran in addition to those mentioned here – perhaps e.g. to Duffryn.

Nigel Wassell mentions authors who have asserted that a timetabled service existed in 1841 but they have not given their sources and he has been unable to verify that they are correct. Paul Reynolds has found that Pigot’s Directory (1844) shows they were then running to a timetable: 'The Llanelly Railway & Dock Company's Trains leave the New Dock for Cwm Amnon and Cross Inn, every morning at half past six and nine, and every afternoon at half past twelve and three.' It is clear from information gathered about Llandilo Bridge and Fairfach that its officials were not always as prompt as they should have been in sending details of timetable changes to publishers.

Initially the line operated detached from the main system. When the approaching opening of the South Wales Railway as far as Swansea meant that its isolation would be reduced, the company decided to run a specific passenger service to a regular timetable (The Welshman, reviewing the company’s history, 23 January 1857). The regular service began 1 May 1850 (Company minutes RAIL 377/3). Initially Brad said coach connections were provided 'at Llanelly for Swansea' and 'at Garnant for Llandilo'. In July this was altered (corrected?) to 'Bynea for Swansea' and 'Cross Inn for Llandilo'.

Some unofficial use clearly occurred: Thomas Jenkins (a local tradesman) wrote in his diary for 23 December 1856 that he 'went by the engine to Llandybie, walked to Ty-ucha then Cross Inn and by rail to Swansea'; he was a shareholder in the company and perhaps used his influence to hitch a lift on a stretch of line not yet opened.

The last word on this line for the time being surely belongs to Nigel Wassell: 'The simplest thing that can be said about the early passenger services on the Llanelly Railway is that they are shrouded in mystery.'

1850 June 19 South Wales: Chepstow to Swansea. Formal opening 18 June was described in Merlin 22nd, some fare-paying passengers were carried. Full public opening was 19th (co n Cardiff & Merthyr Guardian 26th listed all stations). South Wales co £½ T 29 August gave 18th as opening date – no wonder mixture in modern print. Also see article by M Halle in Welsh Railway Archive May 2000.

1850 July 1 Closure: Newmarket. Co n T 1st: 'The Newmarket Railway will from and after 30th inst cease to carry and convey passengers' – notice dated June. Literally this could be taken to mean that last train would have been on the 29th (Thursday) but common sense suggests that last train would have run on 30th and closure would have occurred with the new timetable on 1 July.

1850 July 8 Furness: extension to Bootle. This date is given in Whitehaven & Furness co ½ T 21 August. Furness Rise reproduces timetable and opening notice giving 1 July (notice issued 27 June). Co ½ report says: 'At the latter end of June part of the viaduct over the Esk was burned down; it was replaced in a week'. Item T 7 July covered fire and delay to opening. Lancaster Guardian of 6 July covered fire, that of 13th confirmed opening on 8th.

1850 July 15 Caledonian & Dumbartonshire Junction: Bowling to Balloch. Opened detached from the system, with steamer connections from Glasgow to Bowling and from Balloch to other points on Loch Lomond. Line date from co n Glasgow Gazette 3rd which mentioned Bowling Bay, Dumbarton, Renton, Alexandria Bonhill, Balloch; Caledonian Mercury 18th confirmed opening. Linked to main system 31 May 1858 (Glasgow Herald 2 June).

1850 September 2 Coventry – Nuneaton [LNW]. Coventry Standard 6 September 1850: LNW tts from 1 September (a Sunday, no Sunday service on this line) include line and stations given this date.

1850 October 1 Liverpool, Crosby and Southport: opening. All from Liverpool Mercury unless otherwise sourced. Line opening described 4th but only detail was that a few flags were flying at Bootle and Seaforth. Although trains first shown in Brad December 1850 and t for 2 December 1850 (Liverpool Journal 29th) it seems safe to assume stations given this date were opened with the line: paper of 2 August had said line expected to be opened shortly and 'will be stations at Bootle, Merton Road, Seaforth, Marsh Lane and Waterloo' [odd order and unwanted comma]; for relevant stations engineer’s report 8 October 1850 (RAIL 372/10) says 'As the traffic is now very great the platforms should be properly lighted in the evening'. August paper said line at Waterloo would need to be lowered by about three feet.

1850 October 1 Buckinghamshire, leased to LNW: Winslow to Islip. Co n T 21 September gives date and says that particulars of trains for Claydon; Bicester; and Islip would be published in a few days. Oddington and Launton were both included first time line was in Brad, November. Neither is mentioned in the description of line’s opening in Oxford Chron 5th, however, they might have been present but insignificant enough to be overlooked. This possibility is made more likely since Launton was mentioned in an article complaining about the fare structure in Banbury Guardian of 3 October.

1850 December 23, Monmouthshire. Opening date from co n Merlin, 28th. Co ½ T 27 May 1851 said opened 21st, date used by GW. However, local press notice clear on Monday 23rd. Was there some sort of preliminary use on Saturday? Nothing seen by compiler, nor in Byles, who made thorough use of local press. However, line does seem rather to have sneaked into use after disappointments caused by cash shortages and inspection problems. Herapath 4 January 1851 said op 'Monday last' – could support date given [week Monday last]; could not support 21st. Opening date also confirmed by company minute of 24 December (Mon min). Originally 4 ft 4 in tramway. Its origins were in various tram-roads, using mixture of locomotives and horses provided by others, paying tolls; company now wanted to standardise, carrying all itself with steam. It failed to fulfil promise in its Acts to provide passenger carriages or waggons attached to mineral trains by 1 August 1849. In November 1848 company had given notice ordering everyone off by that date but shortage of money meant this did not happen. Inspection report dated 19 April 1849 (arising out of local disputes): 'The various tramways have in many instances, been used as high roads, and villages have been erected along them, having no other roads of communication even from house to house... The same had happened in Newport itself (and in the Sirhowy Valley, where even mail coaches used tramways as their roads – see 1822. Report dated 19 December 1849 (one of many recommending refusal of permission to open owing to multiple deficiencies) added: ‘a most dangerous state of things subsists: a very heavy mineral traffic, with a considerable passenger traffic is carried on [these]. Company’s tramroads ... have been heretofore used as common high-roads, upon which every person was allowed to travel either on foot or in his own private tram-carriage or waggon ...’. Although Captain Simmonds felt it his duty to recommend refusal to open as a railway, he wrote: ‘The same danger to life and limb therefore exists now, and even to a much greater extent, than if the line were regularly opened to the public ...

Full details were not given of how traffic operated. Lines were plateways, designed for wheels without flanges. Presumably locals had adapted their own vehicles to fit plateway gauge and some ‘run-offs’ it devised to enable transfer from road to plateway. Some traffic would have been road vehicles running alongside unfenced tramway: a big conversion cost was provision of fenced-off roads for locals.

On 21 December 1849 Commissioners wrote threatening legal action if unauthorised carriage of passengers not remedied. Was this threat lawful? Passenger traffic had begun before 1840 though company had not run it. Though much improvement came now, with use of edge rails, conversion to standard gauge came later.

Minutes suggest early arrangements primitive – in many cases orders for providing various station facilities were given some time after ‘stations’ had been brought into passenger use. Result of being essentially a mineral line?

During 1855 converted to standard gauge railway. This resulted in the temporary reduction of train services to 3 days per week (Byles). This seems to have been a lengthy business (conversion started 1853?). Merlin, 10 March 1857, had notice: during conversion of line Aberbeeg to Blaina trains after Saturday next, 11th March, will run as under on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays; will run daily to Ebbw Vale as heretofore. Inspection reports show that there was much detailed realignment during this conversion (see Bassaleg Junction, Cwm, Ebbw Vale, all in Section 4).

1851 May 12. Exeter & Crediton. The LSW had gained a controlling interest in this company and showed complete disregard for the public welfare. The line was ready for use a long time before it did open (D&C 1); originally built broad gauge, it was converted to standard and back to broad during the delay.

Company minutes (RAIL 201/2) show that while the line was being built, the subject of having a station at (Newton) St Cyres was twice deferred (second time 14 January 1846). On 24 July 1847 the Secretary was ordered to prepare a plan for a station in the Cowley Meadows (presumably just on the Crediton side of Cowley Bridge Junction). On 3 December 1847 the directors resolved that in order to open the line with as little delay as possible a temporary station should be erected there. This would have been used as the terminus at the Exeter end since at that time this line was standard gauge and the BE broad. Passengers would have been left with a lengthy walk to Exeter, or an omnibus connection, making line of very little use, unless BE had opened an exchange station there; given the chicanery practised by the LSW, this was most unlikely. The Cowley Meadows station was built (co ½ Western Courier 16 February 1848 said had been erected) but never used since authority refused to allow opening in this form and the LSW would not for some time allow the gauge to be altered. Just after the line finally opened (now broad gauge, worked by BE) the Crediton Board passed a resolution (16 May 1851) to move the station in Cowley Meadows to Longbridge Corner for the purpose of developing traffic at Newton St Cyres. Arrangements there confirmed at BE Board meeting of 24 September (M Hutson, Chron). Stop first mentioned in t Trewman’s 2 October 1851 (tts printed there every week but not themselves dated): ‘several of week and Sunday trains’ stop here; same paper on 9th said station was in course of erection here; Western Times 25th said the completion [compiler’s emphasis] of station here would be celebrated by dinner on 29th. Possible explanation is that once platforms had been moved from Cowley Bridge trains began to stop here, the rest of the station following – many early stations were described as ‘temporary’ in press accounts of openings.

1851 September 24. Vale of Neath. Public opening from co ½ T 27 February 1852. Description of formal opening on 23 September (T 27th) confirms existence of stations given line date.

1851 October 9. Newmarket: diversion from junction with main line at Chesterford to new junction near Cambridge. Contemporary sources are contradictory. The Times of Friday 3 October said that new line would open on Monday (6th); paper of 8th said it had opened on Monday. This seems to be conclusive but it would seem to have been a case when a last minute delay fooled the press and that a journalist, seeking to fill a little space on 8th, looked back at previous Friday’s paper, assumed it had happened as planned and ‘reported’ it as having happened –no corroborative detail being provided. Co n Bury & Norwich Post, 1st, said it would open on 6th. Brad Sh, 1852, is contradictory within itself: list of new openings for previous year says 6th, but entries in body of book for both Newmarket (owners) and Eastern Counties (operators) give 9th, 9th is confirmed by notice in Cambridge 11th, which says old line will be closed ‘for the present’. Accompanying it showed intermediate stations without trains. It is possible that there was some delay in opening these. The inspection report, MT6/9/159, dated 29 September, said that at one of them ‘no platform has as yet been laid’. However, that would not explain the long delay in including them in Bradshaw.

1851 November 29. Edinburgh & Bathgate: temporary closure. According to Railway Times (6 December) no warning given – station clerks just told not to issue tickets. Stirling Advertiser (11 December) said a party that went for day’s cursing near Broxburn (29th was a Saturday) were left to find own way home. Result of dispute between its and Edinburgh & Glasgow’s directors over maintenance – latter were running trains but claimed former should keep track in repair, had failed to do so and line had become unsafe. Railway Times (13 December) said legal action had resulted in Bathgate being told to do repairs and E&G promising to repay their costs. On December 11 an independent engineer (Grainger) certified line fit for use but said would take a few days to arrange reopening; he suggested Tuesday 16th – opening then confirmed (co n Scotsman 17th).

1851 December 10. Closure of Monklands service to Airdrie. Closed on Wednesday (last day Tuesday) because that was the date of the expiry of a two-calendar-year agreement (MK).

1852 February 18. Oxford, Worcester & Wolverhampton: Worcester to Bromsgrove. Date given is from GW; supported by T 21st; ‘at last ... has opened’, without an exact date – and it is unlikely that this line would have had a formal opening. However, co ½ T 23 February says opening was fixed for 24 February and T item, 25th says report accepted ‘without demur’. Shareholders more interested in other matters? Possible reason for the discrepancy is that first trains were run by the Midland, on the 18th (co n Worcester Chronicle 18th).

1852 May 21. Newcastle & Carlisle: Lambley to Alston. Branch from Haltwistle was already open as far as Coanwood, which was separated from Lambley by deep valley of the South Tyne, for the crossing of which a viaduct was needed. Before this was complete, section south of the river opened, detached from main system, using rolling stock brought in from Milton (later Brampton) via Lord Carlisle’s private colliery line. Exact date comes from an unpublished local diary; local press gives clear evidence of trains running in June and July; further general support comes from inspection reports (NE Express; MT 29/12). Viaduct was brought into use and line opened throughout (no new stations) on 17 November 1852 (co ½ T 17 February 1853; MT 6/10/44). Also see RM November 1912, pp 431-2.

1852 May 25. Leeds Northern: Stockton to Melmerby. Darlington & Stockton Times Saturday 29 May 1852: commenced to run passenger service on Tuesday last [25th]. Two trains run daily and will continue to do so until 31st inst, when considerable additions will be made. A goods train now runs once a day. Following week very full account of Dock opening; no reference to new train service. Individual stations not mentioned but all in Brad June and in copy of wt included with BoT inspection reports. Co ½ meeting (T 6 October) told opened 1 June – presumably based on start of full service.

1852 July 15. GN: Peterborough to Retford. This date is given by T (item of 17th and GN co ½ 20 August) and by Newark (quoting local press). Service was at first purely local. Through express trains started to run on 1 August (as in book, GN).

1852 August 10. Morayshire: Lossiemouth branch. August 10 was formal opening day but there was some public use. Full public service began next day (K Fenwick).

1853 June 1. Malton & Driffield Junction: Pilmoor to Malton. RAIL 453/2: company minutes, for 31 May 1853 show that although they had not received BoT certificate, they went ahead with planned opening because they were confident they had dealt properly with the inspector’s requirements ([the] Lieutenant who inspected the line yesterday having been satisfied that the several requirements called for by Capt. Galton’s report had been complied with). Also the York, Newcastle and Berwick Company had issued Time Bills dated 26th inst and to avoid any disappointment to Persons brought to Malton by the Thirsk and Malton Branch (opening same day) intending to use the Malton and Driffield line. The final part deserves full quotation: Resolved that this Company do open this line simultaneously with the Thirsk and Malton Branch according to the Time Tables already published, the Engineer undertaking to do all in his power to prevent accidents until the Certificate of the Board of Trade is received.

Signed Thos Teedale
Chairman

Reads as though accidents permissible once certificate received. Co ½ Hereford 6 August confirmed that opened 1 June. Intermediate stations on both lines included in description of formal openings on 19 May in York Herald 21st.

1853 November 1. Warrington & Stockport (T 17th line). Following is Brad version of early history. Difficult to believe that this is what did happen, but until other evidence turns up, only answer seems to be to quote this. November 1853: trains calling at Warrington; Lymm; Heatley; Altrincham (which were also the only stations included in descriptive item in Warrington Guardian, item 29 October and tt in ‘ABC’ style 5 November). Also present, without trains but fares quoted: Latchford; Thelwall; Warburton. Overall timings not altered when these did have trains. December: Dunham added; trains calling at all.

January to March 1854: last four quoted were reduced on weekdays to one train each way, Wednesday and Thursday only, which left Warrington at 7.45 p.m. and returned from Altrincham at 8.30 p.m., making it useless for an out and back trip on the same day. However, all four had a full Sunday service.

April and May 1854: same as March, but ‘no recent information’ added.

June 1854: full service for all and line now extended to Timperley.

However, all stations listed in note co tt 1 May 1854 (Manchester Courier 13th).

This line had a troubled early history – see article by P.A. Norton, (RCHS Journal January 1960), which might explain some of the peculiarities above.

1853 December 5. Shrewsbury & Hereford: Ludlow to Hereford. Co n Hereford T said would open Monday December 5; item (ibid 10th) described formal opening on 6th. All stations included in tt with opening notice.

1854 April 1. Eastern Counties: Bury Extension Line. Line date from company minutes of 23 March and Bury & Norwich Post 29 March. Kennett, Saxham & Risby in list of cheap market tickets (co n Bury .. 5th).

1854 August 15. Eastern Counties: Harwich branch. Date from half-yearly reports of Eastern Counties (T 24 August) and Eastern Union (T 31 August). The earliest train along the line ran on 29 July 1854. This carried a party of navvies and was also available to men on an excursion from Stratford Works, though most of the latter stayed on their original train and went on to Ipswich (Moffat, who adds a note giving supporting press reference and says that this trip has wrongly been ascribed by some to August 4, which was date of inspection). Brad in September only mentioned Harwich. In October it added: Mistley; Wrabness; Dovercourt. However, last three were included in co n Essex Standard 16 August.

1854 August 28. Somerset Central: Highbridge to Glastonbury (Wells 2 September). Ashcott: Bason Bridge; and Edington did not appear in tt until August 1856. However, in its description of formal opening, Bridgewater Merc 24 August says: ‘We observed but one station ... [Shapwick] but there are halting places where the turnpike roads are crossed, at which we understand tickets will be issued’. They are marked on Fullarton’s map, end 1855. Thus likely they were all there at start. Initially this line, owned by the Somerset Central, was operated by the BE as one of its branches; some trains included through carriages for Bristol.

1854 September 4. South Yorkshire, Barnsley branch. Opening date given by Chairman at ½ yearly meeting (Sheffield Independent 2nd). Co n ibid 9th included tt with all stations given this date; it also had notice saying that opening of line had been fixed for that day but is clear from description ibid 16th that this was a formal event.

1854 October 2. Monmouthshire opening from Pontypool to Blaenavon. Line briefly used a little earlier than this. Minute of 23 June said would open 1 July 1854, subject to BoT approval but it seems that they actually opened then without this. On 7 July they found BoT had refused permission and they resolved to issue forthwith a notice that passenger traffic would be discontinued after ‘tomorrow’ [Saturday] and until further notice. 4 August: BoT ordered postponement of opening for one month; 6 October: BoT had consented (Mon min). Co notice in Merlin, 30 June, said they would open then; nothing seen about closure, but weekly ts July did not include it. The printed version of the inspection report makes no reference to the illegal use, though this seems to be an edited version which concentrated on the reasons for failing the line – the volume seen only included reports on those lines where permission to open was initially refused; even in October they seem to have opened after a verbal assurance – permission to open was dated 2 October. Date of actual opening from Star of Gwent 21st. Co ½ T 13 November gave 1st, a Sunday. Example of company using date of new tr rather than actual one.

1855 June 1. Hereford, Ross & Gloucester: Hopebrook to Ledbury. Co n Gloss Chron 9th shows that this stretch opened and temporary terminus at Hopebrook closed on this date. Description of opening, same paper 2 June, shows that day was xxx ceremonial and ordinary passengers were carried. Times evidence, like some in print, is contradictory: paper of 4th says formal 1st, public 2nd; co ½ T 16 August, gives 1st as public, GW gives 1st in text, 2nd in chronolog.

1855 August 20. Taff Vale Extension: Pontypool Road to Crumlin temporary station. Line opening date confirmed by BoT records and T 21st. Line opened without BoT permission. Company’s secretary claimed had misunderstood – thought that inspector’s refusal only applied from stretch from Crumlin temporary on to junction at Llanhilleth. After careful consideration authority allowed service to continue but ordered reinspection, saying that if this was unsatisfactory they would order the line to be closed. On 14 September Captain Tyler again recommended refusal of permission and a letter 15 September the Board ordered a further postponement of one month; no evidence of any actual closure has been seen. Official permission was granted in a letter dated 13 October (Return).

1855 November 7. Inverness & Nairn (GNS). Monday 5 November; formal opening plus reduced fare excursion Inverness to Nairn and back. Tuesday 6th; reduced fare excursion from Nairn and back. 7th; public opening. No use by intermediate stations prior to 7th. (Opening notice, Highland Railway Society’s Journal article on line, 2000; basic co n Scotsman 7th, item Inverness Courier 8th).

1856 May 26. Forth & Clyde Junction: Balloch to Stirling. Line date is one is usually quoted and is confirmed by co notice in Stirling Journal 23rd, item 30th, which listed all stations; supported by co ½ T 24 September 1857, though The Times’s own report of 2 June 1856 and Heraphat 14 June said 28th - misprint?

1856 June 2. Coleford, Monmouth, Usk & Pontypool: Little Mill to Usk. Date from co ½ T 26 August. As with 1855 June 1, there was a large ceremonial element, but ordinary passengers were carried (Merlin 7th).

1856 July 9. Darlington & Barnard Castle. Formal opening 8th; public 9th (S&D Pass). Kendal Mercury 5th said there would be one train each way on 8th, return fare 3/-, suggesting some public use; description of trains on 8th in Newcastle Journal 12th suggests they did not stop at intermediate stations; Teesdale Mercury 9th gave full use from 9th. All stations mentioned in description of the line, Leeds Mercury (10th).

1856 July 17. Jedburgh (Railway). Date given by e.g. D&C 6 is 17th, supported by co n dated 17th July (Kelso Chronicle 18th) saying line now open, but T 23rd and Heraphat 2 August say 18th. All stations in notice cited.

Article on line by AF Nisbet. Back Track June 2002 gives 17th but no supporting reference. Does quote local press about formal opening on 16th; also quotes earlier press reference that line was expected to open to traffic on 16th or 18th.

1856 August 7. Ayr & Dalmellington, plus new station at Ayr. Date from GSW, Dumfries … Standard 6th and co ½ T 3 September. However, while the line is in Brad from August 1856, no trains are included in the table until November, when the line to Maybole (opened 13 October 1856) is also shown. Co ½ March 1860 (1110/149) said stations had been provided at Patna and Hollyburn – earlier arrangements temporary?

1856 September 3. Carlisle and Silloth Bay. Notice for formal opening on 28 August 1856 (D&C 14) suggests that return tickets for special trains were available for all, but had to be bought by 6 p.m. previous evening. Full opening date from co notices Carlisle Journal 5th and Carlisle Patriot 13th; no record of delay; 4 September previously given perhaps error from Brad Share.

1856 September 17. Dursley & Midland Junction. Public opening date from co n Gloss Chron 20th. In the previous week, immediately after inspection requirements had been met, line was opened for free use by those attending the Gloucester Music Festival, which took place 9 to 12 September, inclusive. Not clear from paper whether line available for all days of Festival (Stroud J 13th).

1856 November 1. GN: Stamford to Essendine. This is the date usually quoted in print. It has been challenged by Rutland, which says opening delayed from this planned date by death of contractor; line inspected 12 November; assumed to have opened soon after. However, it would appear that the accepted date is correct. RAIL 662/3, company minutes (1 November) show that there were last minute financial details that had to be settled with GN; these resulted in service being omitted from GN time bills for November (perhaps source of confusion) but supplemental bills were ordered to be issued on 27 October and promise then given that line would be opened on 1 November. Minutes of 30 December show they agreed to pay Mr Hurst, their Engineer, for professional attendance from the month of June 1856 (when line was to have been completed) to 1 November 1856 (when it actually opened). Lincoln, Rutland & Stamford Mercury 7th – op Saturday last without ceremony. Rtn and co ½ Heraphat 8 November gave same date.

1857 January 24. Llanelli Railway, extension to Lland(e)ilo. Carmarthen Journal of 23 January said ‘on Monday next [26th] the line is to be opened for through traffic,’ and gave an account of inspection and formal opening on the 20th and The Times 26 January said ‘opens today for public traffic.’ However Cambrian (30 January) said line had opened on the previous Saturday (24th) and this date was given in the company’s half-yearly report in RAIL 1110/253. Thomas Jenkins recorded in his diary for the 24th that he sent a pianoforte and three packages by the first train that travelled this line.

1857 March 3. NE: Picton to Stokesley. Formal opening 2 March, public 3rd (T 5th). At ½ meeting shortly before opening Chairman of North Yorks & Cleveland said stations had been built at Potto, Sexhow; Stokesley – though he gave date of formal opening as though it were public one (T 3 March).

1857 March 5. MSJA: Manchester Art Treasures. Dates given, from The Times, are those of opening and closing of the Exhibition, assumed to apply to station also.

1857 May 8. A fare-paying excursion from Bedford to Leicester (separate first and other classes trains) ran on the 7th. A notice in Bedfordshire Mercury 2nd listed the service as Hitchin, Shefford, Southill, Bedford, Sharnbrook, Wellingborough, Kettering, Leicestershire and a note giving times at which the return trains would leave these suggests that they were the only ones served. However, the description in that paper of the day’s events (9th) suggests that all stations might have been served with locals left to work out the times for themselves; excursion trains given 4½ hours to Leicester. 4 hours back but all-station trains only 3½ hours each way at line opening (tt Leicester Journal 8th); furthermore Kilworth was not included in the excursion it though it was served by faster trains while Southill was only served by stopping trains after line had opened. There was no evidence that tickets were issued at any of the intermediate stations: only one fare was given for each class of passenger, presumably for the whole journey.
1857 May 25. Newport, Abergavenny & Hereford: Crumlin temporary to Pontllanfraith (LL). Date given is from Chepstow, 6 June. This said passenger services had begun on May 25 but that the 'complete opening' had occurred on Whit Monday, June 1, when more than 15,000 people are supposed to have travelled on excursions from many parts of South Wales to see the viaduct. For new station at CRUMLIN see Section 4.

1857 June 8. Fife & Kinross to Strathmiglo. Date given by Brand; confirmed by Kinross, notice and item 6 June. 6th was formal day but excursions were run during the whole of the day. Auchtermuchty mentioned. Return gave 6th as opening date; presumably sent by Company.

1857 June 15. GN: Grantham to Sleaford. 15th given by Return, T 15th and co ½ T 2 March 1858; Herapath 20 June said formal 13th, public 15th. 16th is given by GN and co ½ T 1 September 1857. Leicester Guardian (20th) said had opened on 15th; it in London Illustrated News (13th) said would be 15th, if certified by BoT. Any possibility of last minute delay? – no mention of such seen in local press. On balance, 15th seems more likely.

1857 August 11. East of Fife: Burnhill to Kilconquhar. Opening it for this stretch of line is shown in Fife (body of book – chronology at back gives different date); date also given by Fife Herald 13th and Leven and East of Fife half-yearly reports (T 21 April 1858). On 31 July the directors had put on a large train which ran three times both ways, carrying 1,500 (Fife Herald 6 August).

1857 August 20. Leominster & Kington. Date from company minutes of 18 August 1857 (RAIL 363/2) and Hereford Times 22nd.

The formal opening had been on 1st, with public originally advertised for next day but inspection problems (e.g. unauthorised level crossing at Pembridge) caused postponement.

1857 September 1. Ulverstone [sic] & Lancaster, later part of Furness: Passenger use late August. Furn quotes Lord Burlington (Chairman) as noting that 'regular' passenger trains began running 1 September (also given by RAIL 1005/265, from company minutes). Press version is that formal opening was on 26 August and they intended to start running as soon as official authority was given (this also dated 26th). Cheap trips advertised from Oxenhope to Furness Abbey and back for 31 August, though none of stations on new stretch mentioned. Paper of 5 September said number of passengers, including on cheap trips, who passed over line since opening was 3,000 for week ending 'yesterday' (4th or earlier day of writing?). Seems unlikely that paper published on a Saturday would have been able to give figures up to Friday night so possibility of use 27th-29th must be considered (Westmorland 8, 15, 29 August; 5 September).

1857 October 5. Coleford, Monmouth, Usk & Pontypool: Usk to Monmouth (Troy). Much conflicting evidence. Usk Observer 29 August said line inspected on 21st, satisfactory except that had ordered extra bolt on each plate in the bridge over the River Usk; Hereford Journal 26th, copying from Beacon, said passed subject to alteration, implying that no need for reinspection, just assurance that work had been done; Hereford paper (9 September) said had 'just been inspected and expected to open that week. Stations on this stretch included in Usk Observer without trains until 19 September (inclusive), trains shown 26 September, with no indication that stations not yet open; advert dated 30 September (Monmouthshire Beacon 3 October) asked for applicants for a Traffic and General Manager for the line ‘which is now about to be opened’. Cardiff & M G (Saturday 17 October) said line opened Monday sen’night (i.e. 5th); Merlin 10th said line was now in regular use. Usk Observer 10 October said line had been worked by contractors for last fortnight but directors would take over on Monday (12 September); last would seem to be source of date usually given for this stretch of line – Co ½ T 2 September said ‘since opening of line 12 October …’ and Hereford Journal 12 September gave this as public opening date. Date from Cardiff paper kept for moment for reference but safest would be: opened late September / early October. Did contractors provide some sort of service free?

1857 November 9. Sandy & Potton. Return for 1857 confirms opening date. Return for 1861 says ‘No Return to the Order of the House’ and adds note: ‘This Line is stated to have been sold to the “Bedford and Cambridge Railway Company”, and closed for traffic.’

1857 December 8. Edenham and Little Bytham. This is listed in Returns as: ‘Willoughby d’Eresby’s, Lord … private property’ – in final year ‘Lady’ replaced ‘Lord’. Opening date confirmed from 1857 return. That for 1871 says service ‘discontinued 17 October 1871’. It is impossible to be certain whether this was last day of use or first day of non-use; whilst normal practice of Returns was to quote last day of use, the habits of those supplying the information were inconsistent.

There was an intermediate stop on the line; dates as line? An advert for a sale (Lincolnshire Chronicle 30 September 1865) said there was a siding at Hale House Farm, Scottlethorpe at which all trains stopped when required; it gave times of trains to use (all then were mixed trains). Hale House is shown in Col Cobb’s Atlas.

There are also doubts about the continuity of the service. The Brad version was: first shown June 1858; last present September 1866 (clo 1 October 1866 confirmed co n Stamford Mercury 14 September); back February 1870; last included February 1872. Other evidence shows that at least three of these changes were well behind actual events.Pearson & Ruddock book on line (1896) says that Saturday only service resumed mid-October 1866, full service later, and does not mention any other break in service. Returns give figures for all years. In the early 1860s, the usual number of passengers was about 5,000. In 1866 this fell to 3,569; 1867 – 956; 1868 – 1073; 1869 – ‘no information’; 1870 – 1,875; 1871 – 1,415. Since the line was always run at a loss, and the train service severely reduced in the mid-1860s, it is impossible to be certain, but the evidence taken together suggests service discontinued 1866 and fully restored in 1867. Line was used by a special train 8. 9. 10. 11 April 1867 for those interested in timber sales (first two for viewing, when a woodman was in attendance, other two for sales; train from Bytham to Elsea Wood, Old Hills, Cherry Hill and Spring Woods). Continuance in Brad until February 1872 was probably result of hope of reopening to passengers; this disappeared with full closure (goods and parcels only now affected) on 1 February 1872 as a result of the opening of the line between Bourn and Sleaford (co n Stamford Mercury 26 January). For a fuller treatment of the line’s history, see G Webb, article, The Edenham & Little Bytham Railway, RCHS Journal vol 6 no 6, November 1960.

1858 January 25. East Kent: Chatham to Faversham. This opened detached from the system. Gap filled 29 March 1858 (co n Kentish Gazette 26th – no intermediate detail).

1858 March 15. Fife & Kinross. From Kinross, then fortnightly. Co notice dated 12th said would open from Strathmiglo to Milnathom ‘On Monday first (= next) the 15th inst’. Return tickets at single fares would be issued between all stations on the line (all present in tt included), available to return by any train during the day. It appears that an earlier opening had been mentioned; an item in the same paper said that although the line had been inspected by Capt Tyler on 4th, and his report was ‘most satisfactory’, [1] ‘The frost having been the cause of diverging some of the rails from the straight line, and part of the fencing being unfinished, the Directors resolved to delay the opening of the line till Monday next. Fife Herald Thursday 18th said opened on Monday, calling it formal. [Most say op 9th but 15th given by MD Greville in his list op openings for 1858 in RCHS Journal January 1958; Fife gives 15th on page 93 and 9th in chronology on page 233.]

1858 May 15. Last trains on East Suffolk, Halesworth to Haddiscoe, when line closed for relaying (T 3rd). However, Haddiscoe was still served by trains between Norwich and Lowestoft. Line reopened 1 June 1859 (T 2nd).

1858 October 13. Tunnel branch [S&D]. Durham County Advertiser (15th) made it clear that this was public opening: first train left shortly after nine o'clock with a considerable number of passengers and was followed by special containing some of the officials. Brad Sh said opened 19 October.

1859 February 1. Epsom & Leatherhead (co ½ T 30 August). Opened detached from system. Linked in 4 April 1859, when line from Wimbledon opened. Line between stations at Epsom opened 8 August 1859 (co n T 6th), LBSC trains running through LSW station without stopping.

1859 March 16. Somerset Central: Glastonbury to Wells. Opening date from company’s notice in Wells 12th and report in Shepton 18th. Polsham did not appear in it until December 1861 but description of formal opening in Wells 5th refers to ‘neat station’ there.

1859 May 4. Cornwall: Plymouth to Truro. Plymouth 3rd gives sequence: Monday (2nd) ceremonial opening of Royal Albert Bridge; Tuesday (3rd) ceremonial opening of line; yesterday (4th) public opening. Tt (effective from 10th in R Cornwall Gaz 13th) includes all stations given this opening date.

1859 July 12. Oxford, Worcester & Wolverhampton: Honeybourne to Stratford-upon-Avon. W Mid and co ½ T 10 August give 11th for public, however this was formal (co minutes; Rly Times 9th). Description in T 12th refers only to a special train from Worcester on 11th, suggesting that it was a sort of excursion day. Public 12th confirmed by co n Worcester Chronicle 13th and tt in Worcester Journal ‘corrected from 12th’.

1859 July 25. Worcester & Hereford: Worcester Henwick to Malvern Link opened detached from system (co ½ T 10 August).

1859 July 30. Banff, Portsoy & Strathisa: to Banff. Line ‘opened on this day but first train was derailed and regular service began on 2 August (GNS).’

Flooded 26 October 1859 caused disruption; bridge over Boyne Burn near Tillynaught destroyed plus lesser damage (Banffshire Journal 1 November). Ibid 8th: now two trains running Grange to Cornhill, in connection with which a wagon with temporary seats was being horse-drawn to Portsoy; no trains over Banff section. Co notice for service from 10th had restored service except that note said passengers from Banff had to walk across a temporary bridge over Boyne Burn 200-300 yards before Tillynaught (Aberdeen Press 12th); note still in it (Banffshire Journal) 22 November, absent ibid 29th.

1859 August 2. Torbay & Dartmouth: original Torquay (now Torre) to Paignton. Date is one given in owner’s co ½ T 2 September and by GW. Minutes of South Devon, operators of line, say it opened 1 August (RAIL 631/6). According to Torquay Dir 4th, 1 August was an excursion day, with trippers coming from many places; there were local celebations, but no proper formal opening – directors too busy in Trewman 4th.

1859 August 11. Llandidloes & Newtown opened, isolated from other lines (Eddowe’s 17th, Wrexham 20th). Date previously given probably resulted from previous source assuming that public opening followed formal. In reality, formal was later, 31 August. Some papers (e.g. Shrewsbury 2nd) described that as opening and gave no mention of earlier use, but that paper did list intermediate stations in its description of opening: Caersws Junction [Moat Lane J], Dolwen, Llandinam. There were three earlier trips free and at own risk 31 May, 13 and 17 June; see R Maund Chronol July 1979.

1859 October 10. Opening, Horsham to Petworth. W Sussex reproduces opening notice on page 10 and has extract, on page 21, from press account (paper of 13th) which confirms date. The ‘special train’ which ran on opening day was in fact the first train, which carried railway staff, families, equipment and furniture to their stations (only 3 involved), as well as passengers.

1860 (replaces 1862 March). NE: reopened Washington to Durham Turnpike (Chester-le-Street) in Brad and opened on to Pelton. Earlier, part of this line had had its service from South Shields; service now was from Newcastle, via line opened 1 October 1850 (Brad, March 1865, shows trains calling at Usworth). Exact starting date yet to be found – common problem with market services. First in Brad March 1862 but clearly opened earlier. Item in Durham County Advertiser Friday 18 September 1860, copied from Northern Daily Express, refers to accident on ‘Saturday’ (12th or earlier?) to market train to Pelton leaving Newcastle Central at 4.40 p.m. Probably then a fairly new service: item in Durham paper (9 November 1860) refers to discussion on where to hold next Durham County Rifle Competition and Captain Reed suggested a ravine at Pelton, where a railway station [primitive?] had ‘recently’ been opened within ½ mile of site. 1861 competition was duly held here and connecting services from Washington were provided 10, 11 and 12 September (see adverts e.g. Newcastle Guardian 4th). Service last appeared in Brad January 1869 but that was perhaps inertia; it would logically have ceased with the opening of the new line to Durham, December 1848.

There is a further complication: from January 1867 to the end of 1869 Newcastle Guardian ... included a panel showing times of arrivals and departures at Newcastle Central; this was probably compiled by paper itself and would thus have been prone to shortcomings found in press tt. This showed an arrival (all 3 classes) from Pelton after 6 p.m.; this can only have been for recreation. No service was shown to Pelton (or from or to there for the known market service) but connections from Washington might have provided these. This last appeared in the June 1869 issues and was replaced in July by one from ‘Durham, Chester-le-Street, etc.’ – clearly inertia.

1860 July 19. LSW: Yeovil Junction to Exeter Central. Trewman 18th says formal opening ‘this day’, public tomorrow, but did not give full station details. W Fly P 24th only described the formal opening but did list all the stations.

1860 July 25. Oystermouth: Swansea to Black Pill reopened (see 1807 March 25, above, for earlier history).

See SIT for general matters but detail given here is based on Paul Reynolds’s researches in Cambrian, which suggest that Lee misinterpreted some items, in particular failing to realise that it was the opening timetable that was included in the paper (be thought it was for a revised service), and on material from Brad. The two do not tally exactly on dates and name changes but the general story is the same. Main difference is that Brad suggests a short break in the service, February and March 1879, but timetables in Cambrian show continued use. Source cited in 1807 March 25 has very interesting illustrations but lacks detail on this period.

Cambrian first provided it, with some detail, 24 August 1860; full details from 26 August 1870. Brad first included line in February 1861, without any detail; detail first provided May 1866. There were many changes of name and stopping place, making it difficult to chart line’s history exactly; since facilities at most stops would have been minimal, it would have cost little to make changes. At first horse-drawn.

Line was probably extended to Mumbles (later Oystermouth) on 11 November 1860; this was a Sunday, but there was a Sunday service.

July 1877: Swansea Improvements & Tramway Company (SIT) took over, and steam was introduced.

March 1878: SIT opened a street tramway from Gower Street to St Helens, where there was a junction with the 1860 line. Intermittently, horse-drawn trams from this ran along the railway to Mumbles, following steam-hauled services from Rutland Street. When SIT opened its street tramway, it ceased to work the Rutland Street to St Helens portion of the line and John Dickson, who claimed to be the lawful owner of the railway, now ran a steam service along it. It has not been established whether there was any break in the provision of a service from Rutland Street; if there was, it would have been a short one, since Dickson is known to have been operating before the end of March. From 1 July 1885, SIT ran both services. Brad always included the two services in one table, without any distinction. Cambrian printed separate tables from 13 September 1878 to 29 May 1885; thereafter it rarely printed tables, leaving Brad as the only source.

31 March 1896: Gower Street to Mumbles horse-drawn service ceased.

See 1960 January 6, below, for closure.

RCH Handbooks, 1877 to 1895 inclusive have ‘Blackpill and Colliery branch’ ‘P’. This branch left the main line at Blackpill and went up the Clyne Valley. ‘P’ probably represents excursion and similar use. In 1875 the Swansea Police annual outing went this way. 1885: regular service, advertised in local press, for ‘the new sylvan walks and rambles in the woods for lovers of nature’, Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays. Specials ran to race track at top of the valley. (Paul Reynolds).

Away, p 67, refers to Pearson Fresh Air Fund children’s excursion, citing Cambrian 11 July 1906.

In October 1881 carriages were stationed between St Helens Junction and Gorse Lane so those on them could see Prince of Wales returning from opening of new dock (Away p 55-6, citing Cambrian 14th); on same occasion temporary platform at The Grange (just south of Llilup Road) for those attending boat to celebrate dock opening on the 18th; relevant trains stopped at St Helens Junction – for passengers to change to Swansea Bay?, which see in section 4 (South Wales Daily News 14th).

1860 November 2. Waveney Valley: extension from Harleston to Bungay (co n Ipswich Journal 3rd). This defeated even Bradshaw’s ability to cram extra stations into an existing table. At first Homersfield was the only intermediate station added; to make room for this and Bungay, ‘The Pulhams’ were reduced to a joint entry and Starston omitted. In February 1861 a note listed both Pulhams; Starston; Redenhall; Earsham; and Wortwell as request stops (see 1863 reprint for layout). Inspection report 29 October 1860 (MT29/2/1) named Redenhall, Wortwell, Homersfield and Earsham and said all trains would stop at them.

1860 November 6. Symington, Biggar & Broughton. Date is given by e.g. co n Glasgow Herald 3rd (including all stations), Return and Galashiels Border Record 10th, 5th was formal opening (Dumfries & Galloway Standard 7th).

1861 June 10. LNW:Coalport branch. Date from Neele and Shrewsbury 7th, 14th. Also given in formal notice reproduced in SU.

1861 October 29. NB (Border Union): Carlisle to Scotch Dyke. Item in Carlisle Patriot of Saturday 2 November said this opened on Tuesday; NB notice in same issue that this and Longtown branch were ‘now open’.

1862 February 1. Severn Valley. Date from Shrewsbury 7th. Original intention was formal opening only on Saturday 1 February, but that was Bridgnorth market day so the public opening was put forward to that day. On the previous day a free train ran for all attending the celebration dinner at Bridgnorth.

1862 February 3. Somerset Central and Dorset Central: Glastonbury to Templecombe. Shepton 7th said line opened on Monday (3rd); entry ended ‘We shall publish the time-bill of the new line at length next week. It did not reach us until Thursday morning.’ Following week’s paper included it with all stations shown.

1862 March: this entry has been replaced by 1860, above.

1862 June 9. Eden Valley: Kirkby Stephen to Penrith. The formal opening was on Saturday, 7th (T 11th); all stations were served and anyone could travel free (Eden V); NE (Tomlinson’s original), Brad Sh, and Eden Valley company half-yearly report (T 8 August) all gave this as the opening date. However, public fare-paying service began on Monday 9th, date given by NE (K Hoole’s errata), Eden V and half-yearly report of N&G, the operating company (T 8 August). All stations given this date in description of line, Westmorland Gazette 28 June – ‘trains are now running’.

1862 August 1. High Wycombe to Thame. Date given is supported by co n T 31 July, GW ac. Oxford Chronicle Saturday 9th said opened Friday (presumably of previous week). However, many papers (e.g. South Bucks Free Press 9th), clearly copying one another, gave 4 August, presumably assuming a Monday opening. Press reports did include mention of all stations.

1862 October 1. Merthyr, Tredegar & Abergavenny: Abergavenny to Brynmawr (co ½ T 20 February 1863). Govilon only intermediate station; public excursions ran on the formal opening day, 29 September (Merlin and Newport 4th).

1863 January 5. Newtown & Machynlleth: Moat Lane Junction to Machynlleth. According to Talerdig, formal opening 3 January, public 5th. Merioneth 8th described opening on 3rd, without saying formal only but only mentions opening train, supporting contention in Talerdig. Co ½ (Merioneth 7 March) also said 3rd but there are other instances of companies quoting formal as though public date. Shrewsbury (2nd) confirms Talerdig but adds that many who had walked to Machynlleth to watch first train’s arrival were allowed to pack into the train for the return to Newtown; return made at a cautious speed because of the numbers.

1863 February 2. Hamilton & Strathaven. Co ½ 26 September Heraphath says opened 1 February but this a Sunday, no service. Confirmed by co n Hamilton 31 January and item 4 February. No station detail but all in Brad with line.

1863 March 19. BM: Pant to Talybont-on-Usk. Service officially began 23 April 1863, when Talybont to Brecon also opened, but two trains per day ran from 19 March (co n Merthyr Telegraph 21st).

1863 July 1. Oswestry & Newtown: Kerry and Llanfyllin branches. July 1 confirmed by co ½ RAIL 1116/11. L. Cozens (The Van and Kerry Railways, author, 1953) describes a train with a single carriage and a truck of coal for distribution to the poor running on 2 March 1863. This would seem to have been some sort of formal opening or special or trial trip. Line inspected (and approved as a result) on 27 June 1863; would open as soon as BoT certificate received (Shrewsbury Chronicle 3rd).
1863 August 3. Pulborough – Ford [LBSC]. LBSC ½ yearly both in T 24 July and Brighton Guardian 29 July said line from Pulborough to Arundel and Littlehampton would be ready for traffic on 1 August. However, the list of openings in Table of Distances ... LBSC 1901, Ian Allan reprint, and modern works say 3rd. LBSC advertised fare reductions from 1st, suggesting it was making changes then. Brighton paper of Wednesday 5 August, included rather ambiguous items, on the whole supporting 3rd. One said that some of its contemporaries announced line would be opened for public traffic on Monday [3rd] and they had never intended to open before 1 August; the other said opening of [part of] Littlehampton Railway was celebrated by dinner Monday last. Chichester Express (Tuesday 11 August) dealt with dinner on Monday of last week and said several trains ran that day, implying that they were the first.

1863 August 6. Pembroke & Tenby. Date from Mining 1st. T 3rd and co ½ (Potter’s Electric News) refer to formal opening on 30 July.

1863 September 10. SD Jt: Templecombe to Blandford. Formal opening 31 August, public 10 September (Dorset; co n W Gaz 19 September).

1864 February 1. Extension to Rowrah [WCE]. Whitehaven Herald 30 January 1864: Rowrah extension added to tt for February; also includes Eskett, Winder. Paper of Saturday 6 February said opened Monday with due honours. Only mentioned directors’ train – others? Perhaps formal only; seems safe to assume public next day at least. 1st also given in co ½ Whitehaven News 3 March 1864. Andrews, The Furness Rly – a History (2012) (p 63) gives opening as Frizington to Lamplugh on 12 February 1864 (Rich’s inspection had been as long ago as 28 December 1863 – and had noted station at Lamplugh as well as the others). However, Carlisle Journal (5 February) said ‘Opening of the Lamplugh Extension’ but had formal train only going as far as Rowrah. First appearances in Brad clearly tally with dates given in Section 4. All its seen in Whitehaven News to end of 1864 give Rowrah as terminus.

1864 June 27. Changes in Newcastle – Tynemouth area. Date of changes given by Newcastle Guardian 2 July and co ½ T 22 August. Detailed matters from description of (failed) BoT inspection of line on 6 June (Shields Daily Gazette 11 June).

1864 September 1. Eccles – Wigan and Kenyon Junction [LNW]. Wigan Examiner Friday 26 August 1864 described formal opening on Wednesday and said believed would be opened to public 1 September. Paper of 2 September said was opened ‘yesterday’. TI in paper included intermediate stations. A co n, dated 29 August, says ‘The NEW LINE between Eccles, Tyldesley and Wigan is now OPENED for general traffic’; however, the earliest this has been found is T 6 September so it would appear to have been prepared before opening, but not issued until afterwards. [See 1849 July 20.]*

1864 September 22. Ruthin to Corwen. Used 25 August 1864 for excursion to Llandudno Eisteddfod (N Wales Chronicle 27th). Opened without ceremony 22 September 1864 (Wrexham 1 October; N Wales Chronicle 1 October says ‘Thursday last’ – presumably a week+ ago – Wrexham paper specified ‘22nd’). 22 September also given by Brad Share New openings list. No mention of any intermediate stops in any of items seen but all stations given this date are in Brad October 1864.

1865 May 1. NE: Market Weighton to Beverley. Opening from co n York Herald 29 April, which gave all stations. Early in January (T, Wednesday, 11 January – ‘last week’), a special train ran over the line conveying the magistrates and others to the East Riding Sessions at Beverley – no details of stops, if any.

1865 June 1. Central Wales & Carmarthen Junction: Carmarthen to Lland(e)ilo. Line opening from co n Welshman 29 May, which listed all stations. Prior to public opening, line was used 29, 30 and 31 May for a daily excursion from Abergwili to Llandilo Bridge and back, for visitors to Llandilo Eisteddfod.

Company’s notice reproduced in LMS South Wales says that owing to a dispute with the LNW the local service would be withdrawn from 1 April 1880. In the April TI, Abergwili and Llandilo Bridge are shown without any trains whilst Golden Grove; Llanarthney; and Nangareddig were reduced to request only service, limited to passengers to and from stations north of Llandovery. In June a normal service was again shown; also, Drysllwyn returned then – it is not known whether its earlier absence was the result of closure or a feeling that it was not worth a mention in the tt.

1865 September 4: West Somerset Mineral (see R Sellick, The West Somerset Mineral Railway, D&C, 1970 edition). Line opened in stages from April 1857 onwards (initially to Roadwater). Iron-miners and their families, who would always be main users of the line, were allowed to use it unofficially from start. A special excursion for a Temperance Meeting at Brendon Hill was run to Combe Row on 7 August 1860 (the incline between the two did not come into operation until 1861). After the opening for regular passenger use, people were probably taken up and set down at Torre and Clitsome Level Crossings, between Washford and Roadwater; they were also taken, free and at their own risk, up the incline (1,100 yards long, vertical rise of 800 ft) to Brendon Hill (near Raleigh’s Cross) and then along upper conventional line to Langham Hill (alias Luxborough Road) and Gupworthy. Stations of sorts existed at the last two because original intention had been to extend official service to them but costs of safety provisions needed to bring the incline up to BoT standards prevented this. For description of opening see West Somerset Free Press 9 September.

1866: Line through Wandsworth Road; Clapham; Brixton/East Brixton; Denmark Hill; and Peckham Rye is quadruple tracked, one pair of tracks being originally used by LCD, other by LBSC. However, for ease of maintenance LCD owned stretch which included Wandsworth Road; Clapham; Brixton, and the LBSC that which included East Brixton; Denmark Hill; Peckham Rye.

1866 January 1: Cal: Glasgow to Busby. T 5th said three intermediate stations; assumed these were Pollokshaws (West), already open, plus Clarkston and Giffnock as new.

1866 February 1. Bishops Castle. First use 27 January 1866 when special train was granted to the Squire of Plowden for his shooting party (Shrewsbury Free Press 3rd). Line opened to public 1 February 1866 (ibid; co ½ T 8 March). This was a line that somehow managed to lurch on through constant financial difficulties.

Closed 27 February 1877, perhaps an early train that day: a creditor owed for a stretch of land sold to the railway had secured a writ for return of the land, ripped up the track and put up a barrier about a mile from Craven Arms. Most of the press simply said line was ‘stopped’; however, Wellington Journal (3 March) said that service was continuing between Horderley and Bishops Castle, with Mr Scriven, a hotel proprietor, providing a wagonette service from Craven Arms to Horderley. How long this lasted is not known since paper, reporting reopening 2 July 1877 read as if there had been a complete stoppage. The press was mostly concerned about the lack of coal and the effect on its price in Bishops Castle and this might explain lack of passenger detail.
1878: closed 2 September for repairs to line following an accident at Stretford Junction, reopened 7 October (Wellington Journal 12 October). Accident had been reported in Eddowe’s 28 August so it looks as if the service had resumed after a patch job soon after the accident but then had to be stopped for fuller repairs to be made – result of Board of Trade insistence?
1879: closed Easter, reopened after 11 April.

17 July 1933 tt shows one each way daily plus extra on Fridays; before/with 9 July 1934 tt, reduced to one train each way, Mondays and Fridays only; other entries in tt for road services.

Closed 20 April 1935; date given by all in print, although a Saturday and normal convention would require 22nd as closure date – last train Friday 19th. ‘A Master in Chancery directed that the line be closed on 20 April 1935’.

1866 May 1: Northampton & Banbury Junction, later SMJ: Blisworth to Towcester. Brad Sh 1867 new openings says 1 May (but ‘April’ in body of book). T 30 April says had been approved by inspector but some detailed matters needed attention and expected to open ‘in a few days’, suggesting a date later than 1 May. However, Northampton Mercury 5th confirmed opening on 1st.

1866 May 21: Scottish Central: Methven Junction to Crieff. Co n Dundee Courier (17th) explains that on opening day special excursion tickets were available for the first two (out of three) trains each way; these had to be bought by 4 p.m. on the day previous (19th) so that enough accommodation could be provided. Dundee Advertiser 22nd mentioned all stations on new stretch; Methven Junction in tt for June (Perthshire Constitutional 7th).

1866 June 15: Hoylake Railway public opening (Liverpool D P 19th). Paper said 5½ miles now completed and opened, from Hoylake to Wallasey Bridge Road near the Dock Cottages at Birkenhead, with intermediate stations at Bidston, Moreton and Meols (also a couple of references to one at ‘Hoose’, likely to be someone’s mis-reading of Hoylake). 2 July was the formal opening (e.g. London Daily News 3rd), and this was the date given in the co ½ (Liverpool D P 14 November), where length given was 5½ miles. Cheshire Observer (23rd) confirmed that two trains each way were running daily but poorly patronised because little notice had been given and the expectation had been that it would be open on 2 July, which is when full timetabled service would begin; it suggested early opening was made to help company’s case in Bill then before Parliament; it also included ‘Hoose’. The Liverpool paper said that the completion of the line to Seacombe Ferry (2 miles) was in course of construction and would shortly be opened (a premature hope); the portion opened was complete in every particular; meanwhile, passengers would be booked at Woodside (ferry ‘station’) and taken to Wallasey Bridge Road so that effectively there was through communication Hoylake to Woodside.
4 July 1870: as result of court order obtained by local landowner, sheriff’s officers took possession of part of line and removed length of rails. In the afternoon trains started using temporary terminus, Leasowe Crossing, at first no proper platform. Bus took passengers to Seacombe, for Liverpool. (T 6th; B Maud).

1 August 1872: reopened throughout (Cheshire Observer 3rd).

1866 August 13: Potteries, Shrewsbury & North Wales, later SM: for fuller detail see S&M Chron:
Main line, Shrewsbury to Llanymynech:
Opened 13 August 1866 (co ½ T 7 August, confirmed by item T 28 November). All stations given this date were in September 1866 tt (RM May 1903, p 405).
Closed part way through Tuesday 27 November 1866, when baiiffs ‘seized’ line, leaving some would-be passengers stranded at Shrewsbury (stock-fair day there). One return train was allowed later that day but that was probably all (T 28th – at time of going to press some still stranded).
Reopened Monday 3 December 1866, complete with travelling baiiff (T 28 November, 4 December).
Closed 21 December 1866 (Friday) (Cl).
Reopened 14 November 1868 (Shrewsbury Free Press 21st).
Extension to Llanymydrodwell opened 18 April 1870 (co n Eddowe’s 20th).
All closed 22 June 1880 on BoT orders – lines unsafe and company lacked funds to repair: (last day 21st) – Eddowe’s, Wednesday 23rd, ‘for some reason or other, at present unexplained’ yesterday traffic was suspended without public notice: next paper said much local inconvenience and speculation as to reason.
Reopened 14 April 1911 (RCG).
Closed 6 November 1933 (Rly Gaz).

However, some passengers continued to be carried, mostly excursionists. All Returns to 1938 (last issue before war interrupted sequence) show some receipts from ordinary passengers. RM October 1936 mentions an excursion on 3 August, with reference to Llanymynech. LMS it up to and including 27 September 1937 (not 2 May 1938) says passengers, particularly staff wives, carried in passenger brake van in goods trains. In 1938, 262 were carried (total revenue £12). Other known excursions: school party to Crew Green 28 July 1937; Birmingham Loco Club 23 and 30 April 1938; private parties June and July 1938; Shrewsbury School annual excursion 14 October 1939.

Criggion branch:
Johnson makes general reference, immediately after summary of 1866 tt, to excursions on this branch on Thursdays in ‘railway’s early years’. Did these run before official opening? Provided by some local figure for non-paying passengers (friends, e.g.)?
Opened 21 June 1871 ( Oswestry co n 21st, report 24th).
March 1872 tt, branch reduced to Wednesdays, Saturdays and Shrewsbury Fair days only.
Branch closed on and after Wednesday 16 June 1880 (co poster, Johnson).
Reopened 1 July 1912 (Border Counties Advertiser 26 June).
Still shown all days 26 September 1927 tt; January 1928 co tt shown as Saturdays only (Provisional Service); in July 1928 co tt service Thursdays and Saturdays only (Brad shows one all days to Criggion, nothing at all – error); August 1930 tt Thursdays and Saturdays; 22 September 1930 tt Saturdays only. Perhaps now ran two days per week in summer, one only in winter. April 1928 working notice refers to quarrymen’s train Kinnerley – Criggion – Criggion; Johnson says this was chartered in 1918 and had not run for some time when agreement terminated 30 April 1931.
Closed 3 October 1932: Melverley to Criggion (co tt) – last train Saturday 1st.
Closed 6 November 1933: Kinnerley Junction to Melverley (with main line) – last train Saturday 4th.

Later excursion use of Criggion – one 3 August 1936 (RM October).
Official approval said on Monday (19th) said ‘was yesterday’. The following, all published on Saturday 24th:

According to inspection report there were no intermediate stations. Line first in the New Openings list in October 1866.

Thereafter (1946 on) service was Easter plus May to early October, except for stoppage 27 August 1949 (engines out of action), resumption 19 September 1949. Service was Easter Friday and Monday, Whit Monday, three days per week (Monday, Wednesday, Friday) 5 June to 6 October, so usually quoted date was for last train – normal convention would require 6th. See JIC Boyd, The Tal-y-Llyn Railway, Oakwood, 1988.

D&C 11, page 172, and Boyd refer to Halts at Hendy, Fach Goch, Cyfnal, Tynyllwyn. None was included in Bradshaw before preservation days, but Hendy and Fach Goch always regarded as stopping places. Cyfnal was included in the 29 September 1946 but might well have been in use much earlier; its platform was provided for convenience of a local farmer. No other references seen to the rest; Quarry Sidings was probably added after 1950, in preservation days. Line had been kept going by a local landowner, Sir H H Jones, though service intermittent in later years. Jones’s death on 2 July 1950 was expected to result in closure at the end of summer season (6 October). However, it was possible to operate the line from the start of the summer season, 1951.

1866 December. Talyllyn: Pendre (at Town) to Aberglaslynw. Talyllyn: Pendre (at Town) to Aberglaslynw. Official approval to open was given 13 November 1866; official service began 22nd both say has been recently opened and refer to a timetable issued ‘for December’; perhaps information copied from an earlier source, not yet found. Suggests opening about mid-December, though does not rule out late November. Some sources suggest an earlier date; perhaps an unofficial service, passengers free and at own risk? No worthwhile contemporary evidence seen but company did then have passenger rolling stock available. Never included in annual list of new openings Brad Sh; earliest Board of Trade statistics were included in return giving 1867 figures, where, most unusually, they were given for ‘12 months ending 30th September 1867’ and no specific date was given for passenger opening – has this misled someone in the past into assuming it was 1 October? (See M. Searle, Chron April 2015). According to inspection report there were no intermediate stations. Line first in Brad August 1867, when Rhylford and Dolgoch included. Dolgoch was last in Brad November 1867; back July 1872, when Brynglas included for first time. Given habits of this railway, there can be no guarantee that it tells full story. For details of Town Wharf see Section 4.

A special extra train ran for miners who lived on Anglesey – e.g. 1905 note that a Mondays only train, 6 a.m. from Towyn and 6.50 a.m. back (usually empty?) – from Aberglaslynw, would not run when any stoppage occurred at Bryn Eglwys Quarry.

At some point, probably in early 1930s, winter service reduced to Monday, Wednesday and Friday only; (certainly all days November 1926 and 22 September to 31 October 1930; reduced by January 1936).

From start of summer season 1940 reduction applied to summer as well. Reduced to to Wednesday and Friday 14 January 1942. Monday train reinstated 8 June 1942, ceased 20 January 1943.

All ceased 23 June 1943; back, Wednesdays and Fridays, 20 July 1943; Monday added 2 August 1943.

Last train 24 November 1943; trains again, Wednesdays and Fridays, from 31 December 1943, with extra on 14 April 1944 Bank Holidays. Thus, except for 12 April 1944, when no trains ran, until service ceased 24 January 1945.

Resumed at 31 December 1944: no trains ran 9 and 14 March 1945. Train 16 March 1945 was last until 1946.

Thereafter (1946 on) service was Easter plus May to early October, except for stoppage 27 August 1949 (engines out of action), resumption 15 September 1949.

1950 service was Easter Friday and Monday, Whit Monday, three days per week (Monday, Wednesday, Friday) 5 June to 6 October, so usually quoted date was for last train – normal convention would require 6th. See JIC Boyd, The Tal-y-Llyn Railway, Oakwood, 1988.

D&C 11, page 172, and Boyd refer to Halts at Hendy, Fach Goch, Cyfnal, Tynyllwyn. None was included in Bradshaw before preservation days, but Hendy and Fach Goch always regarded as stopping places. Cyfnal was included in the 29 September 1946 but might well have been in use much earlier; its platform was provided for convenience of a local farmer. No other references seen to the rest; Quarry Sidings was probably added after 1950, in preservation days. Line had been kept going by a local landowner, Sir H H Jones, though service intermittent in later years. Jones’s death on 2 July 1950 was expected to result in closure at the end of summer season (6 October). However, it was possible to operate the line from the start of the summer season, 1951.

1867 April 12. GN, Lincoln to Honington. Date previously given (15th) comes from GN; co ½ T 19 August- line and Brad Sh (common source?). Grand Journal 15th only covered satisfactory inspection (8th, 9th, 10th) and formal opening (11th); no tt for this line in that paper, all stations included ibid 20th. However, Lincs Chronicle (5th, 6th) said would open on Friday, 12th, subject to satisfactory inspection; Stamford Mercury (5th) said same and on 19th merely ‘has been opened’. A number of papers (e.g. Sheffield Daily Telegraph 15th) said, in identical wording, that it had opened then and nothing has been to suggest any delay. Also see 1857 June 15th.

1868 August 1. BM: Pontsticill Junction to Cefn and Dowlais Top. Date from Cardiff Times 27 July. Same paper said line had been temporarily opened 25th for benefit of visitors to Merthyr Flower Show; not known which station(s) used.

1867 August 22. Edgware, Highgate & London, operated by GN. There is a clear conflict of evidence about the opening date for this line; for the moment the date previously given and in general use today has been kept. It was given by Borley, and is supported by GN no dated 20th in e.g. T and Morning Post 22 August, the New Openings list in Bradshaw and by the company’s half-yearly report in the Times. However, the other only press evidence seen giving this date is The (London) Daily News 22nd (today is opened). All others seen said 21st (a Wednesday); as usual it is impossible to say how far there was a common source for their items – some were clearly in wording. The most convincing seen is Pall Mall Gazette (an evening paper), Wednesday 21st, which said ‘was opened this morning’ under a general heading for ‘This Evening’s News, Wednesday 2 o’clock’. This included details of the times at which the first train reached each of the stations along the line which might well have been copied from a time-bill; even if they were, it shows there must have been other sources of information for opening since notices cited only referred to the line opening. Morning Post 22nd said ‘yesterday’. The following, all published on Saturday 24th, said it opened on Wednesday (21st): Clerkenwell News; Marylebone Mercury; Illustrated London News; Bell’s Weekly Messenger. Islington Gazette 27th also supported Wednesday, as did a clutch of Essex and other provincial papers, almost certainly copying, though Western Daily Press 22nd was ahead of the pack with ‘yesterday’. The line seems to have been opened in a hurry: the GN half-yearly report, issued on 17 August said that it had been unavoidably delayed but would probably be approved by the Board of Trade before the end of the current month (Daily News 19th). Did the GN open it a day early? Did a journalist misunderstand some sort of handout and was then copied by many others? There is no evidence to suggest that any of the papers had a witness at the opening.

At least all stations were listed in most instances.

1867 September 2: LNW, Cam: Ca(e)rnarvon Pant to Chwilog (co n Carnarvon & Denbigh Herald 14th). There were earlier excursions (some including parts of lines opened later than this). The first, according to Merioneth 28 July 1866 was on 23 July 1866 when Savin took two carriages and sundry trucks, all well loaded with passengers, from Barmouth to Carnarvon. LNW mentions use in August and on 6 September 1866 when one met with accident. T 10/Carnarvon Herald 13th, 14th (report of inquest) shows latter was from Port Madoc to Carnarvon and back for big Calvinist meeting. Allegedly 600 on outward journey, in ballast trucks, on tender, etc; some missed return journey when late at Pant. On way back made several stops to set down (‘stop anywhere’ principle?); derailed just before ‘Glandwyfach’ station (= Brynin). Earlier use included taking Pwllheli and Port Madoc Volunteers to Pant in ballast waggons with plank seats, party of children from Port Madoc to confirmation at Crichieth, several picnic parties, Sir Watkin and Lady Wynn and large party Barmouth to Pant. No charge made for most but 3/- per head was charged, illegally, for those on train that was derailed (T 13 March 1867, from BoT report). Also see next entry.

1867 September 20: Carnarvonshire Railway op Pwllheli to Penrhyn Deudraeth opened before rest of line in connection with extension from Chwilog to Afon Wen (co n Carnarvon ., 28th).

1867 September 3: Newport Pagnell branch. Although 2 September was date given in Return and Brad new openings it is clear from Croydon’s Weekly Standard, 7th (local paper for area) that this was a formal opening (only one train, non-stop, each way) and that public use began on Tuesday 3rd – ‘trains began running’. All stations in tt in that paper.

1868 May 30: Festiniog & Blaenau, 1 ft 1½ in gauge. Date from GW, Brad Sh 1869 and North Wales Chronicle 6 June. NGSC gives 29th (formal?). During conversion of line from narrow to standard gauge the service was able to continue because the standard gauge was created by adding a third rail, giving a mixed gauge. Last narrow gauge train ran 5 September 1883; first standard gauge train 10 September 1883.

1869 September 6: LNW: Mold to Dernh. This date given by North Wales Chronicle 11th; also by notices in Mining 4th, and Chester Chronicle 4th. Last lists all stations (‘Rhys y Mywyn’). There were excursions on 1st (formal opening day, for Mold Sports), calling at all stations, and 2nd, free, Mold and Denbigh to Bodfari (Flintshire Advertiser 4th), Wrexham Guardian (Saturday 4th) said would be ‘formally’ opened on Monday – opposite of usage by later railway historians.

1869 December 1: Lancashire Union: Blackburn – Chorley – Wigan. Brad showed line complete with trains, without comment, in October 1869. In November: no trains, ‘Opening expected shortly’. January 1870: trains again shown. LNW Officers shows opening was planned for 1 October (6927) but there were inspection problems. There was another delay: March Cour 15 November said company had announced intention of opening that morning; paper of 16th said had been postponed. Opening date and stations confirmed by LNW Officers 4938 and tt on p 1479 and by St Helens News and St Helens Standard (J Tolson); stations included in Wigan Observer 3 December.

St Helens to Wigan [LNW]: Wigan Examiner, Saturday, 6 November, said this would open on 15 November; however, Preston Pilot, 20 November, clearly included this in item about delays to opening; the St Helens Advertiser did not include St Helens to Wigan in its timetables in 27 November issue but did add it 4 December. Item in Preston Chronicle, Saturday 4th, said had opened for passenger traffic on Wednesday and included Garswood and Bryn in its description of the line.

1870 January 31: Tottenham & Hampstead Junction: closure. Co ½ T 31 March: on 30 January all passenger traffic ceased because GE, who had worked from opening, had declined to continue. Presumably last day (a Sunday but was Sunday service in July 1869 tt, nearest to hand). Unusual since changes normally made on 1st of month. Line reopened 1 October by Midland (co n T 1st).

1870 July 1: LNW: Edge Hill to Canada Dock. 1 June 1866 is often quoted as opening date for stretch from Edge Hill to Tue Brook but Brad does not include this until whole line opened in 1870; this is supported by LNW Officers 5542 and Liverpool 1 July 1870; LNW co ½ T 15 August 1866, refers only to goods traffic on this section of line.

1870 August 19: Dingwall & Skye, opening Dingwall to Strome Ferry (co n Scotsman 19th). On 9th that paper had carried notice for opening that day but last-minute problem caused delay; see Glasgow Herald 8 September.

1870 October 19: Northumberland Central: Scots Gap to Rothbury. Op date given by co n Morpeth Herald 15th and co n Newcastle Courant 21st ‘is now open’; latter also contained notice of formal opening on 31 October. Local press said Rothley was private station but tts in papers (e.g. Newcastle Journal 20th) simply had ‘stops only when required’; all stations included in these.

1870 November 1: West Helmsdale to Dunrobin was opened by the Duke of Sutherland (his notice Inverness Courier 27 October) and incorporated into the Highland main line when this was extended northwards. Loth was not included in tt in op notice but platform here was mentioned in paper’s description of line (10th).

The line was extended to Helmsdale in 1871, formal op 16 May, public 17th (Inverness Courier 27 October). According to paper passengers had been picked up and set down at any point during the line’s independence but this would have to be sacrificed now for the benefit of having through traffic; it also included a reference to the private station at Dunrobin.

1870 November 23: NB: Coatbridge to Bellgrove. Date (a Wednesday) given by City of Glasgow Union company minute of 1 December 1870; also used by NB co ½ T 13 March 1871, MK and Brad Sh 1871; however, MT 672/3 says op 25th – line had been twice failed by BoT; later then seems to have failed to renew prohibition, and when inspector came back, found line already open. 23rd confirmed by notice and item in Glasgow Herald 24th: all stations listed.

1871: Wotton Tramway. See Brill.

Built without Act of Parliament since the Duke of Buckingham owned most of the land and was able to make arrangements with owners of the rest. Line completed to Wotton March 1871, to Brill March 1872. First passenger use was an excursion, 21 August 1871, from Wood Siding (then limit of line), Wotton, and West(½)cott to London. Horse-drawn until early 1872 when steam (effectively a traction engine on rails) was introduced; speed limit 12 m.p.h.; classed as Light Agricultural Railway so BoT requirements less stringent than usual. Regular passenger service began 1872-1873: 104 passengers used line in January 1872, perhaps first month. Increased passenger numbers in March and April would suggest line now open to Brill. Early 1873, they tried to have line licensed for proper passenger use but BoT report, published July 1873, was against this. Tts fairly regularly included in Bucks Herald from 11 July 1874. First in Brad May 1882. It was reconstructed in 1894 and proper stations built. Stops were Quainton Road (terminus alongside orthodox station); Waddesdon; West(½)cott; Wotton; Church Siding (not used after 1894); Wood Siding; Brill.
1873 August 4. Ross & Monmouth, worked by GW. Col Rich initially passed this line and handbills were distributed saying it would open on 1 August. However, inspector then realised that there was no means for turning an engine at Monmouth and withdrew his permission. Problem was solved by company giving an undertaking to use only tank engines (County Obs 9th; Ross Gazette 7th).

1873 December 1. Van: Caersws to Garth & Van Road (Cam). Opened now, all days. November 1874 t: whole line reduced to Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. October 1875 t: full use again.

Return for 1874 has note that line was used almost exclusively for haulage of slates by horse-traction but recently some passengers had been carried in open trucks. 3,592 passengers were carried in 1874, 11,380 in 1875 (when ‘recently’ still in note). In 1878 the number had risen to 22,024; however, only 3,323 passengers were shown for 1879 and no more were shown until 1883.

According to Boyd (NGMW), company wanted to provide a passenger service but lacked legal power and was opposed by quarry owners afraid that passenger trains would interrupt flow of their traffic, especially after line had been improved for locomotive haulage in February 1879. As a result, the rail service was replaced by a road service in August 1879. A service was included in Brad from January 1879, with stops at Machynlleth; Pandy; Esgairgelliog: Corris. It was shown until October 1879; November – ‘service suspended’; however, Merioneth, 21 March 1879, said service had been suspended; was there a brief revival of railway service in between? Statistics of Returns support Boyd, rather than those who say earliest service was by road, though they would suggest somewhat earlier end to rail service, unless most of its business had been done in the summer and early autumn. Brad was clearly behind events.

After a new Act had been obtained, a locomotive hauled service began 4 July 1883*, Machynlleth to Corris, without any intermediate stations. Llwyngwern and Esgairgelliog were added in 1884 (see entries in Section 4). Frifdiggate added to t t July 1887. Garneddwen November 1887. D&C 11 says there were hals at Llwyd and Dolwddderen Crossing; neither in Brad; occasional stops (Cozens).

* = date from Corris; Cambrian News ... Visitors’ List Supplement Friday 6 July says that inspection made Monday and declared satisfactory, passenger traffic began on Tuesday (3rd) – was this only a formal occasion of some sort?

1874 March 27. Aylesbury & Buckingham: closed Aylesbury to Verney Junction by injunction from Chancery at suit of Midland: diversion of line via Cwm Clydach (later Clydach-on-Tawe). Probably opened on 1st Edinburgh, Loanhead & Roslin.

Andrews, WCE: diversion via Yeathouse, with permanent closure of Eskett and temporary closure of Winder. Andrews, 1874 March 27, said service had been suspended; was there a brief revival of railway service in between? Statistics of Returns support Boyd, rather than those who say earliest service was by road, though they would suggest somewhat earlier end to rail service, unless most of its business had been done in the summer and early autumn. Brad was clearly behind events.

1874 March 27. Aylesbury & Buckingham: closed Aylesbury to Verney Junction by injunction from Chancery at suit of Rev T J Williams of Waddesdon – unsettled claim for payment for land. Sudden closure caused much inconvenience to district. T 4th said had closed ‘Thursday’; should have added ‘a week ago’. Items in local press (Buckinghamshire Advertiser and Bucks Advertiser & Aylesbury News 4, 11 April) said injunction had forbidden use after 26 March. Reopened 9 April; interruption ‘seems’ to have been result of misunderstanding – they had necessary funds put by. Company notice confirmed reopening date and said that temporary service Verney Junction – Quainton Road would be discontinued. No details of this found – was it for benefit of passengers from Brill Tramway? Did it serve intermediate stations? Seems that only section from Quainton Road to Aylesbury was fully closed. Previous co ½ had mentioned financial problems and need to provide proper facilities at stations.

1874 May 27. WCE: diversion via Yeathouse, with permanent closure of Eskett and temporary closure of Winder. Andrews, The Furness Railway – a History (2012) (p161), citing directors’ minute of 3 March 1875, says Rich inspection 26 May 1874 and line opened next day, presumably with verbal permission, since written version not yet received from BoT.

1874 July 23. Edinburgh, Loanhead & Roslin. Edinburgh Evening News (23rd): not until a late hour last night was it intimated that line would be opened to-day; first train left Edinburgh at 7.30 this morning; carried a fair number of passengers despite shortness of the notice. Clearly opened with verbal permission.

1875: Newport Junction, later Isle of Wight Central. Sandown to Shide (a) opened 1 February 1875 (Hants Chron 6th); Ryde to Newport (b) opened 20 December 1875 (Hants Adv 22nd).

On section (a) Alverstone; Newchurch; Merstone; Blackwater and on (b) Haven Street and Wootton were all first included in Brad June 1876. Strangely, the apparently less important stations at Ashley and Whippingham, both on (b), were in tt from January 1876 and relegated to footnotes in June 1876 as request stops.

The missing items on (a) were all included in February tt in February issues of Isle of Wight Observer 1875. They were all shown as ‘... Crossing pass’ with time showing that they were available for use (other entries given arr., dep. times). This would suggest that they were available as ‘halts’, with passengers able to signal to driver as train was about to pass the level crossing. This is supported by item on steepelaychase meeting, 20 April 1875, paper of 22nd, Merstone Crossing was the nearest station to the course, ‘a little temporary platform erected, we should imagine, for the occasion [perhaps there for everyday use?] and not a station at all’.

Haven Street and Wootton were first shown in t Isle of Wight Observer 18 March 1876 (tt just headed ‘March’); not present in paper of 11 March (which was headed ‘February’); previously same arrangements as for (a)’s missing items or now opened? Col Yolland had reported on 11 March 1876 that he had inspected new stations at Haven Street and Wootton.

See IWC for details of inspections.

1875 March. Midland: diversion of line via Cwm Clydach (later Clydach-on-Tawe). Probably opened on 1st; notice in Cambrian 26 February said would do so, though, questions have been raised on two grounds.

a) Timetables in that paper show the old route still in use on 12 March, the new on the 19th. However, it was common for local papers to be laggards in that respect.

b) Further doubts are raised by correspondence concerning opening. BoT said 26 January 1875 that could be opened if Mid gave undertaking that some requirements resulting from inspection had been met. Mid reply dated 6 March, BoT letter of approval 8 March. However, BoT was more flexible than strict letter of the law would suggest and Mid may have felt safe in going ahead, knowing they had met the conditions; indeed, there might have been verbal agreement at the inspection. One could understand a delay if planned opening had depended on a satisfactory inspection a day or two previously but a full month had passed.

Furthermore, nothing has been seen to confirm any delay: one would have expected a replacement notice, press comment or letter to the editor from a disgruntled thwarted traveller. Even so, positive confirmation of opening on 1st is desirable.

1875 September 23: Severn & Wye, main line. Co n T 21st said would be opened for passenger traffic on 23rd; first train would be ‘12.5 noon’ from Lydney; once line in full operation this would be third train out of four daily (only two going whole length of line). Ross Gazette 30th reported opening, including all stations; also mentioned special train which left Lydney at 12 noon. Also see 1875 December 9, below.

1875 December 9: Severn & Wye, Coleford branch. Company’s notice in local press said would be opened 9th by ‘special train’ leaving Lydney Junction at ‘12.5 p.m.’; ‘regular service’ would start 10th. Clearly only one train 9th. As on 1875 September 23 (above) there was no indication that public could not use, though space would have been limited. Unless they cancelled a main-line train to fit this one in, (no indication in notice) Coleford must have been served by carriages attached to a Lydbrook train as far as Parkend, though Coleford dwellers did have a separate train for return.

1877 September 19: Girvan & Portpatrick Junction. On this date line was opened as far as New Luce, two trains per day (service stated in October Brad, with a coach connection to Stranraer). 5 October 1877 was when through service to Stranraer began (report of GSW half-yearly meeting in Ayshire Argus 22 September). Reason for delay was inspector’s insistence on extra accommodation at Stranraer (Galloway Advertiser 27 September) Line was plagued with financial problems. Failure to pay arrears owing to the company gave details of ‘improved’ service, three trains each way, with separate arrival and departure times at Maryhill; trains had run through at fixed hours, implying peak hours, working days only). LNW Record gave 3 June 1878 but that was when they settled on names to be used for the stations which were yet to be built (LNW Officers 1884/90). LNW notice in Globe, 19th said viaduct near Llandulas (which see above) had been partially destroyed so [regular] service west of Abergele suspended but passengers still booked through, being transferred by road from one train to another; traffic on Mold & Denbigh and Denbigh, Ruthin & Corwen also suspended. Train from Mold to Chester got through on the evening of the 19th but Mold to Denbigh still unusable (Cambrian Advertiser 22nd). On 19th passengers were taken by road to Ty Coch about half-way between Denbigh and Llanhaidr; then on by train from there (Wrexham Guardian 23rd). Line from Llandudno Junction to Betws-y-Coed also interrupted by damage to bridge at Llansantffraid [other spellings seen] (near Glan Conway) (Llango llen Advertiser 22nd) but resumed 21st (Western Mail 23rd). Details of full restoration of services not found; cross-references have only been provided from main stations.

1879 January 20: LSW: Okehampton to Holsworthy. Co n T 14th, gave this as opening date but said that on Saturday 18th the 2.25 p.m. express from Waterloo would run through to Holsworthy, calling at all stations on branch, but did not name them. Nothing other way. Co n Western Times 14th did name all.

1879 June 3: Opening of Loudon Road and Queens Park. LNW Officers 19682, 13 May – will be opened on Tuesday 3 June (result of Whit Monday intervening – Neele, p 228 says that new line through Primrose Hill Tunnel opened 1 June and North London trains ran through at fixed hours, implying peak hours, working days only). LNW Record gave 3 June 1878 but that was when they settled on names to be used for the stations which were yet to be built (LNW Officers 1884/90).

1879 August 17 (Sunday), Serious flooding led to widespread disruption in North Wales. LNW notice in Globe, 19th said viaduct near Llandulas (which see above) had been partially destroyed so [regular] service west of Abergele suspended but passengers still booked through, being transferred by road from one train to another; traffic on Mold & Denbigh and Denbigh, Ruthin & Corwen also suspended. Train from Mold to Chester got through on the evening of the 19th but Mold to Denbigh still unusable (Cambrian Advertiser 22nd). On 19th passengers were taken by road to Ty Coch about half-way between Denbigh and Llanhaidr; then on by train from there (Wrexham Guardian 23rd). Line from Llandudno Junction to Betws-y-Coed also interrupted by damage to bridge at Llansantffraid [other spellings seen] (near Glan Conway) (Llango llen Advertiser 22nd) but resumed 21st (Western Mail 23rd). Details of full restoration of services not found; cross-references have only been provided from main stations.

1879 October 1: D&C 6, J. Thomas 1971, revised 1984 by A.J.S. Paterson, says line opened for goods only on 4 June 1879, junction at Maryhill opened 1 October 1879, service extended to Kilsyth 29 October 1880 but cut back again 31 December 1880. He also says that Balmore was an original station.

1 October opening for passengers was given by Edinburgh Evening News 1st, Falkirk Herald 2nd, Glasgow Herald 2nd and in co ½ in last 7 October. Two papers said was goods opening also. An advert for the letting of meadow grass at Torrance, which appeared several times late May and early June in Glasgow paper, had said station would open 1 May. However, Falkirk paper of 10 May 1879 said that they had begun building station at Torrance on 3rd and an advert in Glasgow paper of 30 June said that it was being built. It is clear that Torrance and Summerston were the only intermediate stations in October – there were complaints that NB had promised a station at Balmore but not provided one. Earliest reference so far found for the last is citing in an advert in paper of 22 February 1886.

At co ½ (Glasgow Herald 20 October 1880) it was said that trains were running to Kilsyth but NB was being unco-operative; NB co n ibid 5 November gave details of ‘improved’ service, three trains each way, with separate arrival and departure times at Maryhill; since service was via Cowairs latter could represent separate stations or platforms at Maryhill, or need for reversal there if through trains had run. Brad evidence so far seen: November 1879 – first inclusion of Torrance; January-June and August 1881 – separate arrival and departure times at Maryhill, for three trains each way, two of which terminated at Torrance and one went on to Kilsyth; service via Cowairs and Possilpark. August 1882, September 1883 and April 1885 – same. June 1886 – clearly through service, now via Great Western Road, later Anniesland.

1881 July 27: Swindon, Marlborough & Andover (later part of MSWJ); Swindon (Town) to Marlborough (LL). Formal opening plus special for Marlborough School 26 July; op to public 27 July 1881 (Swindon 30th); prior to opening there were five free experimental trips, stopping at Chiseldon and Ogbourne (MSWJ).

1881 September 1: Golden Valley/GW:

1 September 1881 opened Pontrilas to Dorstone. Return confirms line date; all stations given this date (Abbeystour; Vowchurch; Peterchurch; Dorstone) in Brad, first time line included. Bacton added later.

This line would suffer recurrent financial problems; hence the various closures and reopenings.

Closed 22 October 1883, reopened 17 November 1883 (Cl).

Closed 2 July 1885 (Thursday), reopened 19 August 1885 (Cl).

27 May 1889: extended to Hay (GW). Stations at Clifford and Westbrook; Greens Siding later.

23 August 1897: closed Dorstone to Hay (G&S).

20 April 1898: closed Pontrilas to Dorstone (Rtn).

1 May 1901: all reopened (RM May p 479, June p 491).

8 December 1941: all closed: actual last day was Saturday 6th. The 15th usually quoted was ‘official’ date – WH Smith, Golden Valley Railway, Wild Swan, 1993.
1882 West Lincs: Away, p 70, refers to Sunday School trip from Back Lane (Penwortham?) and New Longton, citing Penwortham Parish Magazine of September 1880; presumably joining/alighting points not stations.

1882 December 1 Glasgow, Yoker & Clydebank: Clydebank to Partick (Glasgow Herald 2nd – all stations mentioned). This line was at first detached from system. Mostly used by shipyard workers.

1883 May 1 Direct Arbuthnot to Montrose service [NB]. Montrose Standard (4 March 1881) made it clear that on 1 March 1881 (date given for passengers in modern print) through goods trains started to use this line. Dundee Courier (1 May 1883) carried notice of passenger opening that day and item describing line; it explained that a bridge near Montrose had had to be rebuilt before passenger trains could run.

1883 August 20 GE: Wisbech & Upwell Tramway. This line was never included in Brad. Opening this date to Outwell Basin (Cambridge Independent Press 25th), extension to Upwell 8 September 1884 (ibid 13th). Former said passengers could be picked up at any point. GE notice for 1884 extension reproduced by C Hawkins & G Reeve, The Wisbech & Upwell Tramway, Wild Swan, 1982, p. 7. ‘At any point’ still in GE co t/nt November 1889. This refers to Elm ‘Depot’ and Boyces ‘Depot’ in main table, other main stops named as listed in Section 4. However GE it 4 October 1914 note says: in addition to above, tram cars will also stop if required at Elm Road Crossing; New Common Bridge (Canal Bridge); Rose Cottage; Duke of Wellington Junction; Inglethorpe Hall; Collett’s Bridge; Dial House; Horn’s Corner; Goodmans Crossing; Small Lode. The tram cars will not stop at any other point along the line of the route. LNE public t/nt July 1924 also included Shepherd’s Cottage (after Collett’s Bridge) and Basin Gate (after Dial House) (@JF). Original names Boyces Bridge and Elm Bridge (1883 tt reproduced Branch Line Handbook, 1966); altered 1922. All closed 2 January 1928 (Bury Free Press Suffolk 17 December 1927). Line only 5 miles 72 chains long.

1885 March 2 East & West Junction, later SMJ: a number of points are dealt with here, rather than in several short notes.

5 June 1871: co n Birmingham Daily Post – will be opened between Kineton and Fenny Compton station of the GW on and after this day (June 5); confirmed by Aris (10th).

1 July 1873: Leamington Spa Courier (5th) confirmed opening. Also said that line had been very accommodating: trains had stopped for passengers whenever they appeared, each train carrying its own booking office (the guard?); specifically mentioned North End and presumably involved Warwick Road also, or did it mean stopped anywhere?

23 July 1877: Leamington Spa Courier (28th) said closed since had made hundreds of journeys with less than half-a-dozen passengers. Northampton Mercury (28th) said had closed ‘Saturday last’ (21st), presumably last day, and had done so because Government Inspector had pronounced it unif. Perhaps some truth in both – expensive repairs needed and not felt worthwhile? Goods traffic continued.

2 March 1885: reopening. Stratford 27 February included company notice of reopening; paper of 6 March carried report; supported by re-appearance in Brad March and LNW Officers 26924.

1887 Llanelly & Mynydd Mawr ran a ‘workmen’s service’ from about 1887 with a very liberal interpretation of ‘workman’: teachers at Pontyeates School near Pontyberem who lived in Llanelly were allowed to use (Weekly Mail 29 July 1905, described attack on one as she was walking to station at Cynheidre). Passengers joined at Sandy (near Llanelly) and trains then called at Furnace; Felin Foel; Horeb; Cynheidre; Cwm Blawd; Tumble; S & R Colliery; Cross Hands. Also specific miners’ services. Service ceased 1928 or later (U).

1888 March 19 South Shields, Marsden & Whitburn Colliery. Originally ‘Marsden Railway’, name changed about 1890s. Miners’ service began May 1879. Public service began, detached from main system, 20 March 1885 (co n Shields Daily Gazette 21th), without BoT sanction; fare-paying passengers signed that they were travelling at their own risk; stopped when BoT found out (report dated 20 June 1887) (Mountford). Properly approved service began 19 March 1888 from South Shields Westoe Lane to Marsden; miners were taken on to Whitburn Colliery. Early notices were headed ‘Marsden Rock’; press evidence is that they hoped for tourists to use line to visit the ‘famous rock and grotto’ but this did not happen. Miners’ platform was re-sited on a line further inland by 1915 (S Bragg, map evidence).

Further deviation line first used 9 April 1929 (WJ Hatcher, The South Shields, Whitburn & Marsden Colliery Railway, Oakwood 2002). This bypassed Marsden, which was not replaced, passengers being taken on to second miners’ Whitburn Colliery station, now renamed Marsden. Returns first included line 1926 with note that return was from 5 August; elsewhere in that year’s issue it was explained that powers for re-construction and working line as a light railway had been granted to the Harton Coal Company, Limited.

Aot (tt) one Saturdays only ran ‘as required’, another only ran on ‘Baff Saturdays’; miners paid alternate Saturdays and Baff Saturdays were non-pay days.

1889 July 20 FYN: Freshwater to Newport IoW. To celebrate Golden Jubilee of Queen Victoria, Mr W Jackson, contractor for the line provided free service between Yarmouth and Freshwater for locals, several trains running on the day (IoW CP 25th, quoted in ‘75 years ago’ column, 1963) – actual Jubilee was 20 June 1887, first engine had arrived 14 June (DL Bradley, A Locomotive History of Railways on the Isle of Wight, Railway Correspondence & Travel Society, 1982).

Opening notice and tt given in FYN; date confirmed by Hants Teleg 27th. FYN mentions free excursion 9 October 1888, from Ryde to Yarmouth and Freshwater (but not other FYN stations) via Sandown, which carried over 700 people. Also used for IoW Rifles, Easter Monday, 1889.

1890 May 1 Driffield to Market Weighton [NE]. Date given comes from Driffield Times (21 April), Brad Share new openings list and NE errata. RCG gives 21 April for goods and passengers (except Enthorpe ‘G’ but this in earliest tts with the others). It seems most likely that ‘G’ should have been applied to all; would local paper have used future tense if line already open? York Herald (2 April) had said inspected day before. Yorkshire Post (4 April) said had received permission to open provided ‘one or two minor’ matters resolved and expected would open in a fortnight at most. Did a succession of delays cause confusion?.

1893 March 6 Liverpool Overhead Railway (Manchester 7th). Huskisson Dock; Langton Dock; and Nelson Dock were added later: at half-yearly meeting in February 1894 it was said that these had been ‘contracted for’ (Liverpool 14th); at meeting on 14 August said that Nelson and Huskisson (a ‘removal’ of one at Sandon Graving Dock) had been opened and Langton would be opened next day (ibid 15th; 16th confirmed opening).

In 1900s it usually omitted ‘Dock’ from name; it was later added and though it continued to show most stops as ‘X Dock’, after about 1927, when printing was transferred to LNE printers at York, tickets omitted ‘Dock’ (T David, The Tickets of the Liverpool Overhead Railway Company, TTS, 2000).

1895 June 1. Cal: Forfar to Brechin. Date from Cal, supported by RCG. Confirmed by items in Forfar Herald 31 May and 7 June, which mentions all stations. According to Cal, 7 January, given by some books, was goods opening.

1895 July 13. Rye & Camber Tramway, 3 ft gauge. This is formal date; public opening was expected in the course of a few days (press announcement quoted in Rye & C).

1896 April 6. Snowdon Mountain Railway: Llanberis to Snowdon Summit, 2 ft 7 in rack railway. It was closed this same day because of a accident. Reopened Llanberis to Clogwyn on 19 April 1897 (T 20th) rest of the way before / on 16 July 1897 (co n Liverpool ‘s now open to the summit’). Tt carried note that trains would not run with less than seven return passengers or the equivalent in single faires. Summer only. See K Turner, The Snowdon Mountain Railway, D&C, 1973.

In 2003 bookings only taken between Llanberis and Summit, passengers normally back in same train after half-hour at top; singles, space permitting, for those wishing to walk back. In bad weather trains turn back at Rocky Valley, Hebron; Halfway; and Clogwyn reduced to passing-places, no alighting or joining. This had begun? (A Brackenbury, Chron).

1896 December 14. Glasgow Subway/ Underground. Opening date confirmed by T 15th; other material from GU and D&C 6. 4 ft line, at first cable-hauled. There were two accidents on the opening day: early afternoon there was a minor one which closed the outer circle, leaving all traffic to be carried by the inner; late in the evening a far more serious one occurred on the inner circle, causing service to be suspended. Line reopened 21 January 1897. It closed 26 March 1922 owing to financial difficulties; was reopened 3 July 1922 by Glasgow Corporation. Electric haulage introduced 1935. Closed by a bomb 18 September 1940; reopened 27 January 1941. Closed for repairs 21 May 1977; reopened 16 April 1980 (RM June).

1897 March 8. Lancashire, Derbyshire and East coast opened throughout. Derbyshire Times (Saturday 6th) said that it would open for passenger traffic on Monday next; first train would leave Chesterfield for Lincoln at 7.47; a special train would leave at 12.45. Evening Star (9th); through passenger traffic yesterday. special only from Chesterfield to Edwinstowe and back; Times (10th) carried report of co ½ on 9th at which it was reported that the previous day line opened along its whole length for passengers. Some papers (e.g. Lincoln Echo and Sheffield Echo (both 9th) only referred to special, thus perhaps misleading others; Derby Mercury (10th) said ‘today’, thus adding to the confusion.

1897 August 27. Chichester to Selsey. Account in Portsmouth Evening News (28th) only mentions one train and looks like a formal opening. No public date seen. Paper said that Selsey terminus (Beach) was not yet constructed and there would be stations at Hunston; Chaldar (Sidlesham); Sidlesham Mill. First in Brad July 1898.

1898 January 17. GW: Yealmpton branch (for stations beyond Plymstock). Originally from Millbay; opening date (W Morn News 17th, 18th); all stations included in co n Exeter Flying Post 15th; closed 7 July 1930 (GM’s report); reopened 21 July 1941 for workmen, from Friary (U); reopened to public 3 November 1941 (GM’s report); closed 30 May to 24 June 1944 for removal of unstable rock (GM’s report); closed 6 October 1947 (RM January 1948).

1898 November 8. Closure: West Somerset Mineral. Last day of use was a Monday (W Som FP 8 October and 12 November; supported by Brad November – service will not run after 7 November). Likeliest answer for odd date is that company had to give a calendar month’s notice and that starting point of notice was fixed by publication day of local paper (Saturday). The line was briefly reopened for minerals 1907-10; on 4 July 1907 there was a celebratory excursion Wachtet to Combe Row and back; this involved four open trucks and seems to have been given a great welcome all along the line, far more notice being taken of this occasion than was apparently ever bestowed on the line during its earlier life. One had a stand for a band, in a second members of the Urban District Council and some of their officers and the others were comfortably seated and the other two were crammed with passengers, including most of the leading tradesmen of the town. (W Som FP, 6 July 1907).

1901 May 18. BWA: Bideford to Northam. Line consisted of part tramway (along the Quay at Bideford) and part railway (rest); there had been much local opposition to the Quay section. The inspection report, published 18 May, passed railway section but failed that along the Quay (see S Jenkins, The Bideford, Westward Ho! and Appledore Railway, Oakwood, 1993 – useful in general, but wrong over opening). Opening details based on N Devon 23rd; Evening Post (Exeter) 20th; Bideford 21 May and 16 July (last was report of prosecution of company for running trains along the Quay which did not meet BoT requirements).

Opening advertised for 20 May but actually occurred 18th. First train ran, with passengers, from the Quay terminus and company said it would continue to run one per day along this stretch in order to preserve legal right to do so (not known whether it actually did since very little evidence was presented in court; a deal had been done behind the scenes, the Company agreeing to pay a 10/- fine on each of five counts). Otherwise, trains used a temporary ‘terminus’ near the Art School, at northern end of the Quay, between Quay station and Strand Road. Council fought company every step of the way over the reopening of line on Quay. Col. Yorke re-inspected 27 February 1903 and passed it (N Devon 28th); Light Railway Order issued late July (ibid 28th); service resumed before / on 9 August when councillor told meeting that he had seen it in use that day (ibid 13th).

Not certain that all Halts opened with line, though all in first detailed tt found (Bideford 5 July 1902). S Jenkins says that there were perhaps extra untimetabled stops – e.g. at level crossings at Puse Hill and Mudcott, both near Abbotsham Road.

(Correct opening date is given in Minor, though no detail or explanation is provided.)

1901 June 29. Corringham Light: Corringham to Coryton. Legally this was a public service but it was detached from main system so only of use to workmen. Grays & Tilbury Gazette 8 June said had already been well tested by transport of Kynoch’s workers (free?).
Mostly used by Kynoch’s explosives factory workers but a few others (e.g. Shell workers) also used. Returns support opening date given and show that some ordinary tickets were sold, though only a small fraction of the total. See RM June 1913; Thames Haven, pp 42 – 44.

During Second War, reduced to limited to service of two trains each way per day, ‘as required’; motor-bus hired to cater for needs of others who had previously relied on train. Regular service began again 8 October 1945 (Railway Bylines, November 2001). First in Brad 1948.

1901 October 14, Gifford & Garvald Light, leased to NB. Formal opening 12 October; public intended for noon that day, but delayed (Haddington). Co n Scotsman 14th confirms 14 October and lists all stations.

1902 December 22. Vale of Rheidol: Aberystwyth to Devils Bridge (ng). See NGMW.

Opened 22 December 1902 (Welsh Gazette 25th).

Closed in winter from 1 January 1931 (T 13 December 1930 – ‘clo until further notice’).

Timetables suggest some pruning of stops hereabouts, though perhaps not this exact date. Glanrafon; Nantyronen; Rheidol Falls; Rhifwfon: were in Brad 22 September 1930 tt but omitted from tables before/with August 1931 tt (indexed, initially with a blank as page number, later noted as ‘closed’). These plus Llanbadarn also omitted GW co tt 18 July 1932. Contrarily all shown as having passenger facilities in hb 1938 (but in 1956 all on line, including those always in Brad, shown parcels or goods or omitted). Thus likely that did remain in use. Possible explanations are that became halts and so omitted from Brad – difficult to believe Rheidol Falls not available to tourists, or space saving move, thus difference from GW tt. No significant change in timings. Balance of probability is that now and after 1945 they were still in use. Closed fully 31 August 1939.

23 July 1945 reopened, summers only (CI). Missing stations still omitted when line reopened after Second War; back, after October 1949 tt (when line noted as ‘not after 7 October’), before/with 5 June 1950 tt, now Halts.

1989. Transfer: British Railways had owned it; now sold to Brecon Mountain Railway, who operated from start of 1989 season, maintaining continuity of summer use. Later events not recorded since it operates as a preserved line.

1903. Branch to Seafield, Leith Docks [Cal]. A suburban service from Edinburgh was intended and some station provision was started but never completed. At Newhaven platforms were added on this branch; stations were also begun at Bonnington (Ferry Road) and Leith Walk (Manderston Street). Also on this line, between the last two, was Pilrig, a temporary halt for military reviews – both 1905 and 1908 quoted in different sources – perhaps used several times. See Edin., pp 58-9; AJ Mullay, Rail Centres, Edinburgh, Ian Allan, 1971, p 76; DLG Hunter, Edinburgh’s Transport, The Early Years, Mercat Press, 1992.

1903 April 6. Welshpool to Llanfair (ng). According to Montgomeryshire Echo (11th) a number of trains ran on formal opening day, Saturday 4th, regular service 6th. Paper omitted Seven Stars but this was in Brad April with rest of line.

1903 July 22. Invergarry & Fort Augustus: Spean Bridge to Fort Augustus. Opening date usually quoted is supported by RCG and T 22nd and 23rd; latter’s description of events of 22nd looks like formal opening but article in RM September 1903; makes it clear that ordinary passengers were carried – ‘at each station passengers came and went’. It was initially worked by the Highland, detached from its own system.

NB took over line from 1 May 1907 but its services did not begin until 4th (J Thomas, The West Highland Railway, D&C, 1984 edition, pp 118-20); did Highland continue to provide until then or was there short gap (Wednesday, Thursday, Friday)? Return has NB working line from 1 May, probably based on legal arrangement. Poor returns caused it to close 1 November 1911 (Globe 2nd) but NB reopened it 1 August 1913 (Dundee Courier 2nd) and took it over the following year. Also see High Pumph.

1903 August 23. Caledonian branch to Ballachulish. Public opening from co n Scotsman 22nd; station detail from Dundee Courier 22nd (description of formal opening on 21st). No paper seen gave separate mention of Ballachulish Ferry.

1904. Taff Vale stops.

TAFF VALE STOPS. According to Clinker all of the following started existence as PLATFORMS. Those that still survived in the early 1920s became HALTS. Bradshaw’s version was more complex and probably resulted from someone’s clerical confusion following this new type of stop. No note is made below of other name changes, the last form being generally used. The aim of the table is to give the fullest version possible in the most compact way. The information against each entry is: opening date, letters in square brackets. When they returned to/first appeared in the index (July 1909/April 1910) all were shown as Halts and remained thus (e.g July 1922 and April 1923) in defiance of the changes in the tables.

(a) October 1904 tt to February 1905 tt or later: were Platforms, in relevant tables and indexed as Platforms.

(b) By June 1905 tt most previously included were removed from the index, though, presumably by oversight, Berw Road at least lingered briefly, and in the tables were relegated to notes, where for them and additions it said ‘Motor Cars halt at X Platform, Y ….’.

(c) By February 1906 notes had become: “Halts” at X Platform, Y ...

(d) July 1909/February 1910 became: Halts at X, Y.

(e) April/July 1922 became: Platforms at X, Y.

(f) July 1922/April 1923 some reverted to halt.

(g) July 1923/14 July 1924 all became: Halts at X, Y.

ABERCWMOBI: 26 December 1904, first seen June 1905 as Duffryn Cross – motor cars halt at D C; c, d, e, [2 October 1922], g.

ABERTHIN: 1 May 1905; b, c, d, 1920.

ALBERTA PLACE: 19 September 1904, a, b, c, d, e, f [1 October 1923] (indexed at first as A PLATFORM).

GYFEilon: 5 June 1905, always Halt, 1918.
LLANBETHERY: 1 May 1905, b, c, d, 1920.
LLANDOUGH: 13 June 1904, a, b, c, d, 1918.
LLANFABON ROAD: 10 October 1904, first seen June 1905 Motor Cars halt at L R, e, g.
MAINDY: May 1907, always Halt.
MATTHEWSTOWN: 1 October 1914, first seen February 1915 Halt, e, [2 October 1922], g.
MILL STREET: 26 November 1904, since this was terminus in tables as Platform pre-1910, b, c, 1912.
OLD VYNYSYBWYL: 17 October 1904, first seen June 1905 as O Y, same June 1906, March 1907 Halt but in table as terminus, absent August 1921 owing to brief closure, July 1922 Platform, [2 October 1922], April 1923 Halt.
PENTRE: October 1906, always Halt, 1912.
PONTCYNON: 26 December 1904, b, c, d, e, [2 October 1922], g.
PONTYGWAITH: 5 June 1905, always Halt, 1914.
ROBERTSTOWN: 17 October 1904, first seen June 1905 as R, c, d, e, [2 October 1922], g.
ST HILARY: 1 May 1905, b, c, d, 1920.
SWANBRIDGE: July 1906, c, d, e, f, [just Halt, Clinkers Register].
TONTEG: 1 May 1905, b, c, d, e, g, [1 October 1923 st].
TREHYNGELL & MAENUDY: opened 1 May 1905; appeared in the list of halts in platforms in February 1906, but without ‘Platform’ after its name, suggesting that it was a station at which only motor cars stopped; 1909/10 it became listed as though one of the Halts; April/July 1922 moved to the table as though of full station status. Clinker seems to have regarded it as always a station.
TYLACOCH: October 1906, always Halt, 1912.
WOODVILLE ROAD: July 1906, always Halt.
YNYSYBWYL NEW ROAD: 6 July 1910, first seen March 1911 as Halt, July 1912 in table as station.
1904 June 1. Opening of non-tt miners’ stops on line from Aberdare [TV, later GW]: original stops were Town Crossing; Glan Leek & Manifold Light (NS): Waterhouses to Hulme End, 2 ft 6 in. Date is taken from the opening notice, reproduced in Ox & Camb Moorland, 1972, reproduce, from local source, notice showing Barry Railway motor service stops. St-y-Nyll and Tonteg platforms first served 1 May 1905; Tonteg closed 1 June 1905. This was certainly the formal opening (RM September); the description given there of the day’s events makes no reference to ordinary passengers.
R Keys & L Porter, The Manifold Valley and its Light Railway, Moorland, 1972, reproduce, from local source, notice showing service Wednesday and Saturday only for winter 1904-5. Text says North Staffs made cut but Manifold Company then got guarantee of minimum of two trains per day; Brad October 1904 shows two each way, extras on Wednesday and Saturday, presumably after cut had been rescinded. Their book also reproduces LMS notice of closure on and from 13 March 1934.
Beeston Tor; Butterton; halts in Brad until April/August 1923. They might well have continued to be treated as such. See 1905 below for more information on vagaries of this kind.
1904 September 1. ANSW: start of steam motor-car service, with the opening of extra stops. Date given by ANSW is confirmed by Company’s Minutes (RAIL 7/13) although service was not shown in Brad until January 1909 and none of the stations and halts is shown on RCH map of South Wales, 1908. Evening Express, 24 August, described a trial run on the previous day and listed all the ‘stations’ given this date (including ‘Rhydfelen’), though it did not explicitly refer to terminus at Pontypridd; same paper, Tuesday 30 August, said line would open on Thursday. An earlier item ibid 15 April had looked forward to opening on 1 June; this included an intended stop at Watford Crossing (junction shown in Cobb Atlas) and said new siding would be provided at Pontypridd, with an extra exit to the Tram Road. Was Watford Crossing an intended stop not provided or some sort of journalistic error?
1905. This covers some erratic uses of ‘Halt’. Applies to some of lines used by the following as well as their own – e.g. NSWJ. All were shown as (HALT) in LMS list 1933.
a) LNW. Co tts did not use term but company had equivalent of others’ halts, served by rail-motors. Brad did call them halts until after July 1925, before/with April 1926 issue. CI listed as ‘motor stations’. Those closed before 1925 were Halds in Brad, list of closures in The Times (22 December 1918), and RCH list of 1921, which confirmed permanent closure of some ‘temporarily’ closed during the war years, but not halts in co tts.
b) LY. No co tts have been seen. Brad usage was as for LNW, above. CI listed as ‘Halts’, suggesting official usage. Disappearance of ‘Halt’ from name perhaps result of LNW influence on newly-formed LMS (LY had been amalgamated with LNW shortly before full grouping). LY/LNW: Burn Naze and Poulton Curve were briefly shown as Halds in LNW co tts: certainly July 1909 but not March 1908 or October 1909.
c) Knott End. Same as LY.

says service originally been planned for 1 November but was delayed at the last moment and is supported by Luton Times (10th) which says service began Monday 4 November. Ox & Camb says 1 December; LNW Officers 41635 shows revision of service from 1 December. Ox & Cam is only source of Brickyard Halt, ¼ mile from Wootton Pillinge on way towards Wootton Broadmead (a workmen’s stop?). Also see 1905, above.

1906 January 1. (public opening date); GW. Cwmaman branch.
Miners’ use began about 1903 (U) and continued through public closures.
Miners’ use ceased about 1932 (U).
Away refers to through excursion to Porthcawl, citing paper of 30 July 1932; involved stretch of line from Black Lion Crossing to Gelly Tarw junction which never had regular passenger service.

1906 August 17. Campbeltown & Machrihanish, 2 ft 3 in gauge; at Campbeltown end it was a street tramway. Conflicting evidence: this date was given by Return, supported by Edinburgh Evening News 17th – inspected yesterday, opened today and Greenock Telegraph 17th also gave 16th as date of inspection; Camp says inspected 17th, opened 18th, apparently supported by Scotsman 18th – inspected yesterday, passenger traffic will begin immediately. Likelihood is that Scotsman failed to adjust its ‘yesterday’. In December 1906 the intermediate stations originally listed were removed to the footnotes as Halts and a note was added that trains stopped at any crossroads (= level crossing?) by request; in September 1907 a full list of stops was again given and note omitted.
Railway service was replaced by buses 27 December 1930; trains again 1 June 1931; last in Brad November 1931; some use again early 1932 but finally closed before May (Camp). Last passengers shown in Return for 1931; no return included 1932; 1933 report said it had been wound up.

1907 June 22. London Electric: Strand (later Charing Cross) to Golders Green and Camden Town to Archway, Formal opening in the morning; opened to public at 1.30 p.m. with free travel for rest of the day (T. Items 1 and 24 June, and co n 21 June). Thus there is a case for quoting 23rd as opening date.

1908 August 3. Knott End, opening of extension from Pilling to Knott End. Although both The Times (31 July) and Preston Guardian (1 August) reported this as opening on 30 July without any qualification, this would have been only the formal opening, Preston Herald (Saturday, 1 August) said that it ‘will be opened for public use next Monday’. Paper says only two stations on line, Preesall presumably the other.

1908 October. BM: Machen to Caerphilly. Stations opened now were first intermediate stations on a line that had been in passenger use for some years. BM had intended passenger service from the outset and line had been passed for passenger use on 1 April 1873 but problems with Rhymney Company caused delays. Specials were run on 3 June 1873 for a rehearsal at Caerphilly Castle by the South Wales Choral Union but regular service, non-stop between Caerphilly and Machen, only began 28 September 1887, operated by Pontypridd, Caerphilly & Newport Railway (later part of ANSW). See C Chapman, article, The Caerphilly Branch of the Brecon & Merthyr Railway, Welsh Railways Archive vol 3/2.

1908 November 21. Cleobury Mortimer & Ditton Priors, Company had intended to open on 20th but delayed (letter to BoT quoted in CMDP) and Return gives this date.
July 1915 reduced to one train each way Mondays and Fridays, two each way Wednesdays and Saturdays. By January 1917* Aston Botterell and Prestow Wednesdays only, other footnote stops no trains. October 1921 all served again. By April 1923 all week-days. Originally Aston Botterell; Chilton; Detton Ford; Prestow were Siding Halts. Cleobury North Crossing Halt. About 1916 ‘Halt’ omitted from names in notes to table but still indexed as Halts. Stottesdon and Burwarton were in body of table prior to becoming halts which suggests were regarded as superior to Chilton & co.

* = January 1917 notes not clear-cut. One says that trains will call at two mentioned above; another lists all the halts. At that time Brad frequently left halts in the footnotes (and stations in tables, without trains) when other sources clearly show they were closed. April 1917/October 1917 tt the others were omitted completely.

1908 December 1. Closure: Ravenglass & Eskdale. Return says closed 30 November, but normal practice of BoT was to quote last day of use in such cases.

1909 August 2. BPGV: public opening; date confirmed RAIL 1057/433; also says miners’ service had run from March 1898 and includes minute of 21 March 1899 complaining that miners’ wives had been using brake vans on market days. According to H Morgan, HMRS April 1985, wives went free but charged 6d per shopping basket (likely to be very large) or parcel carried; also one monthly excursion during summer, using swept-out coal trucks. Further confirmed by Llanelly Mercury 5 August, which referred to special earlier use on Saturday 31 July to bring Kidwelly cricket team and supporters to Pontyberem; stop at Tycoch mentioned (see D. Geldard, Chron January 2019 for more detail).

1910 December 1. South Yorkshire Joint: opening Shireoaks to Doncaster via Maltby; details given by Leeds Mercury 1st. Reduced to Saturdays only 1 June 1917; full service (two each way plus extra on Saturday) restored Thursday 1 April 1920, but no service Good Friday; ‘entirely suspended’ by weekly notice 25 October 1920 (miners’ strike); resumed? (handbills and notices RAIL 931/12, 17, 20). Whole line last in Brad April 1926. Lord Scarborough claimed right to permanent service so reopened 25 July 1927. Matter settled: Doncaster to Maltby closed 8 July 1929; Maltby to Shireoaks 2 December 1929. Evening excursions and seaside trips throughout 1930s; at least one excursion served Dinnington and Maltby in 1960s (S Yorks Joint).

1910 December 5. GC: Killingholme to Immingham Western Jetty. Opening date given by notices page of Brad, January 1911, GC dates and RCG. On the face of it, this appears to be a pointless service, detached from system. Essentially workmen’s service.
1911 October 1. LNW ‘Halts’: date from LNW Cl. 1 October was a Sunday. RM October did not specifically say they were opened on 2nd but it did mention them immediately after Pont Lawrence, which was so dated. Impossible to tell from Brad if these did have a Sunday service since they only appeared in footnotes (line did have Sunday trains).

1912 June 3. Dearne Valley. Opening date originally from LY, confirmed by RCH distance amendment 858/5 and York Herald 24th. At opening all stops beyond Wakefield shown as HALTS. ‘Halt’ dropped from all in tt 1925/6 but still shown in hb 1938; possibly result of LNW influence on newly-formed LMS – see 1905, above.

1912 July 13. Some South Wales Halts. Opening date from GW Halts. Until April 1923, or just after, there was only a joint GW/LMS table in Brad; these were HALTS. First separate tables seen, July 1923: Halts in both GW and LMS tables (in notes); same July 1925. April 1926 Halts in GW, not LMS (where now in body of table); same August 1927. By July 1928 omitted from GW table (still present April 1928), not halts LMS table (nor LMS co tt 1930). Same August 1931. By August 1932 had become halts in LMS table and listed in ‘notices’ panel as having been renamed to halts.

1915 February 1. GW: closure Acton & Wycombe line rail motor car service. GM’s report 12 January 1917 said done to free lines for military and other [war-related?] traffic.

1916 May 22. Closures: GE system. Original aim had been to close the selected stations on May 1. However, on 29 April a postponement to 22 May was announced and on 12 May a reprieve was granted to some stations originally listed for closure – Bethnal Green; Bradfield; Buckenham; Mardock; Stanhoe; West Mill – but Norwich Victoria added to list. (GE directors’ minutes 2 March, 6 April and 4 May; also T 5 April and 2 May; RM May and June).

1917 March 28. Closure: Bideford, Westward Ho! & Appledore. This came suddenly. Bideford, Tuesday 27 March, contained timetable for October 1st 1917 to May 31st 1917, or until further notice. Paper of 3 April had: railway will be closed and the train service suspended on and after Wednesday, March 28th, 1917 – notice dated 26 March. Later usage would mean last train on Tuesday; other items of this time sometimes used this phrasing in way that would have meant Wednesday was last day. No news item found to decide the issue.

1918 March: (public opening date): South Wales Mineral; from 1908 worked by Port Talbot. Note that 1880 ‘service’ shown in some books derives from error in RM September 1939.

Early unofficial services. See articles by PR Reynolds, RCHS Journal, November 1981 and Welsh Railway Archive, May 2000, further material from M Hale and RA Cooke. By September 1865 passengers were carried on e.g. trucks attached to coal trains. By May 1868 a passenger carriage was attached. By the mid-1870s there is some indication that they were running to a timetable of sorts. Route: Glyncorrwg – Crathyn/Cryddan – Tonmawr – Incline Top/Top of Incline/Hill Top (top of incline just short of Briton Ferry). Crathyn/Cryddan would have been most convenient alighting point for those walking down to Neath; platform certainly existed here later, perhaps added later for handling farm produce; no facilities elsewhere. In last week of 1886 550 ‘passengers’ travelled on up trains, 503 on down; certainly passengers still using in October 1895 when RSB records indicate disapproval ‘Passenger service’ probably ended when PT took over line: letter from Glyncorrwg UDC to BoT asking, unsuccessfully, for passenger service said travel in the van had been allowed as a courtesy until PT days. Wording of this raises questions about nature of ‘carriage’ used. Inspection, following accident in 1902, revealed no BoT authority for any passenger use, but no charge was made for passenger service, so technically no passengers.

Also specific miners’ services and excursions.

Official miners’ service, sanctioned by BoT, began 5 March 1917 (internal GW memo).

Official public service, over Cymmer to Glyncorrwg section. Contradictory official information about public opening: minutes (RAIL 1057/1545) showed a date from LNW influence on newly-formed LMS – see 1905, above.

Miners’ use continued to 2 November 1964.

1919 July 1. Closure: Edmonton to Cheshunt (GE). According to T 4th, which did not give exact date, it had been reopened for the convenience of workers travelling to the Enfield small arms and Waltham gunpowder factories. RM June 1915 had said that reopening expected to be temporary. Closure date a Tuesday. Reopened briefly in February 1947 when snow caused diversion south of Cheshunt. Passengers had to wait on platforms because waiting-rooms in use for housing (AJ Mulloy, article in BackTrack February 2007, p 14).

1920. Miners’ service from Port Talbot to Corrwg Merthyr. Agreement for this signed 18 May 1920; line and Halts had been officially inspected (M Hale); service actually began? Engineer’s reports (RAIL 1057/1528) refer to workmen’s service they hoped to start 1 August 1920 and was certainly in operation by 9 September; also shown “commenced 17 March 1924” in wt supp – a reopening? Reports refer to ‘four platforms’ (Corrwg Merthyr; Cwmavon Yard; Tommawr Junction; Efail Fach). Collieries underwent various closures, reopenings and renamings, so Halts would have had intermittent use. Agreement referred to Tanygroes Junction (Ton-y-groes on RCH Junction Diagram); service would have required reversal there.
1921 April/May. Temporary closures owing to coal strike. A number of services were suspended and many others reduced to save coal. Full details have not been seen. Bradshaw is no help. It carried a general notice saying that suspensions and alterations would result but travellers were told to see local notices for these; services continued to be shown in detail, presumably in expectation of early resumption. References in The Times suggest that there were closures whose details have not been found; page of 7 May said that some Scottish services had been suspended. Some GW notices have been seen. Suspensions, with starting dates and stations involved, in square brackets, were:

11 April: Black Lion Crossing to Cwmaman Colliery [those two, plus Ton Llwyd; Godreman; Cwmneol; Cwmaman Crossing].
12 April: Garnet Halt to Gwaun-cae-Gurwen [plus Gors-y-Garnant; Red Lion Crossing].
19 April: Port Carlisle (reop ? – trains shown again can be derived from company’s notice in of 1 and 8 October referred to ‘8 stations converging on Charing Cross – presumably Carlisle Journal, 20 May) says will be closed ‘tonight’, presumably result of printing on Thursday); while same date In 1939 there were further closures to enable measures to be taken to prevent flooding of underground stations if they were bombed.
2 May: Birmingham to Dudley via Great Bridge [Great Bridge only station affected].
9 May: rail-motor service Westbourne Park to Greenford [Old Oak Lane; Park Royal; Brentham; Perivale].

(Briefet branch [Brentford; Trumpers Crossing].

Swansea to Morriston [Landore LL; Plas Marl; Copper Pit; Morriston].

(Sirnotet was dated from 8 May, a Sunday, but none of these had a Sunday service). 20 June: Booklet was headed ‘Restoration of Passenger Trains’ and was supported by the company’s notice in The Times of that date, which said ‘numerous local trains will … be restored’. However, only the Swansea to Morriston service was shown with trains; the others were still shown as suspended. Indeed, they were only one by one more suspension, Lostwithiel to Fowey [Golant only – Fowey still served from Par].

It may be that the rest were restored on 1 July; certainly all were shown as normal in Bradshaw for August, by when some affected stations were shown without trains, which would suggest the rest had had their services restored. Also see 1918 March above (paragraph beginning ‘line closed ….’).

NB: Some details but most unlikely complete. Changes made almost daily. Complete closures found:

27 April: (Scotsman Tuesday 26 April ‘Wednesday first’, Dundee Evening Telegraph same date ‘tomorrow’) Bangour, Dechmont (reop ?); Dalkeith (reop 1 September, Edinburgh Edinburgh News 31 August); Port Carlisle (reop ? – trains shown again Brad September).

9 May: (Sunday Post 8th service from Thornton to Methil (reop 4 July, Leven Advertiser 7th).

Some temporary closures on the Caledonian can be derived from company’s notice in Annandale Observer of this date. It is headed ‘Miners’ Strike’ and says that on and from Friday 20 May its passenger services would be further reduced and stations listed would be closed to passengers (B Wilson). Reopened ? Only where resumption took longer – e.g. Loch Tay – did the suspension show in Bradshaw.

Closure: Solway Junction. According to CI, the whole Solway Junction line was closed 1917 to 1919. However, sample of tses (January and October 1917, October 1918 and February 1919) shows trains continued to run. No evidence supporting closure has been found in e.g. RCH sources. Company notice in West Cumberland Times 31 January 1917 said would be closed from 1 February but notice in same paper 3 February said had been reprieved.

Line south of Annan closed 20 May 1921: note in Brayton signal box copied by JNMC says closed to all traffic Thursday 19 May (presumably last day); (Carlisle Journal, 20 May), says will be closed ‘tonight’, presumably result of printing on Thursday); while goods traffic did resume, no evidence found to support any later passenger use, confirming results of earlier extensive search by Bryan Wilson in the Annandale Observer, who found entries which seem safely to show otherwise. There were references to difficulties in getting scholars from England to Annan Academy (not in itself complete refutation of a twice-a-week service, but if latter had existed it would surely have been mentioned as useless for this purpose); a reply to the local MP from the Minister of Transport on 18 July (paper of 22nd clearly indicates that line was then closed and that it had been known for several years that expensive repairs were necessary and would now only be considered when the price of iron fell from its then high level; NB co notice (dated 31 August) of formal closure of line by Cal on 1 September refers to continuance of re-routing arrangements explained in 3 July circular. Brad August 1921 shows only a service Kirtlebridge to Annan – given that it continued to show trains for lines temporarily closed in May, that would seem to be extra evidence for the complete closure of this one. RCG gives 1 September as passenger closure date for Whirrigg, though other 1 September closures on this line are shown as goods closures; all of these would have been formal dates, following decision not to reopen.

1922. Temporary closures on the London Underground 1922 – 1944; it seems convenient to put all of these together. Based on Clay; Times; RM December 1939. Closure dates given are last days of full use (sometimes last train will have been in early hours of next day).

- Work to speed construction of Northern Line Extension and enlarge tunnels on existing stretch meant that Euston – Kings Cross – Angel – Old Street – Moorgate closed after traffic on 8 August 1922. The line south of Moorgate was kept open, but, within this stretch, Borough closed on 16 July 1922. Early in May 1923 the line south of Oval was closed; it reopened on 15 May 1923, but Kennington closed again on 31 May 1923. The intention was to keep services going, as far as possible, through the partly completed works. A tunnel collapse on 27 November 1923 caused the line to be reduced to separate shuttle services Moorgate to London Bridge and Elephant & Castle to Clapham Common; even this was regarded as too risky and the whole line closed completely after traffic on 28 November 1923. Moorgate to Euston reopened 20 April 1924, rest of line 1 December 1924. However Borough did not reopen until 23 February 1925 and Kennington until 6 July 1925.

- Worries about effects of bombing on tunnels (especially under Thames) and stations caused further short-term closures. Trafalgar Square; Charing Cross (later Embankment); Waterloo; Lambeth North; Elephant & Castle; Kennington (Charing Cross line) closed after traffic on 27 September 1938 so that tunnels could be plugged with concrete; reopened 8 October when immediate war scare had passed for the time being. The Times of 1 and 8 October referred to ‘8 stations converging on Charing Cross – presumably double counting of Charing Cross and Waterloo. Result was installation of proper floodgates which could be closed if tunnels hit by bombs.

In 1939 there were further closures to enable measures to be taken to prevent flooding of underground stations if they were bombed. Piccadilly to Elephant & Castle closed 27 August 1939 only. Kennington to Strand and 19 other stations closed 1 September 1939. Moorgate to London Bridge closed 7 September 1939. Reopening dates of stations:
Sand Hutton Light. Opened to public now. Had opened privately 1910, 15 in gauge, when stops were Village; 1939 September 18 for rest of Festiniog history.

Wingham and stop at intermediate stations [not named but presumably Poison Cross & co] by signal, same on return journey; changes for next month

EK-F&G See K Elks these cases but, being Saturday perhaps they were ignored; their first service would therefore have been 13 March or 18 April.

Beginning 13 April 1925 in Col Stephens Museum at Tenterden. Amendment Leaflet 64 these opened on Wednesday 11 March 1925 – the line had been inspected and found satisfactory on 3 March.

1921 July 31 Welsh Highland. 1 ft 11½ in gauge. This was a reopening on 31 July 1922 of North Wales Narrow Gauge line, closed 1916.

Unless otherwise stated services ran Monday – Saturday (inclusive) from Dinas Junction. Date is start of service or alteration; Monday unless otherwise stated. Dates after Portmadoc apply to station / platform involved.

One way trains included below used it as part of circular tour.

31 July 1922: reopened to South Snowdon.

14 January 1924: cut back to Portmadoc (1923)

21 March 1924: extended to Portmadoc (1865).

22 September 1924: cut back to Portmadoc (1923); last train Saturday 13 December 1924.

15 December 1924: no service.

30 January 1925 (Friday): Beddgelert – Portmadoc (1923) Fridays only.

7 March 1925 Saturday: Dinas to South Snowdon added, Saturdays only.

1 June 1925: all weekdays to Portmadoc (1865).

[Tuesday 4 May 1926 to Saturday 17 June 1926 (inclusive) extended closure: General Strike and coal shortage]

20 September 1926: reduced to one down train, all days, using Portmadoc (1923).

1 March 1927 (Tuesday): full service to Portmadoc (1865).

26 September 1927: reduced one up train, using Portmadoc (1923).

14 November 1927: Dinas – Beddgelert reduced to Tuesdays, Thursdays, Saturday.

28 May 1928: all days to Portmadoc (1965).

1 October 1928: to reduced to Dinas – Beddgelert, Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

20 May 1929: full length service Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays except that new north platform at Portmadoc and no trains ran between this and 1923 one, passengers on foot escorted by railwaymen between two.

8 July 1929: altered to Mondays to Fridays.

23 September 1929: Mondays to Saturdays trains both ways Dinas and Beddgelert; rest of route up train only, by request only, 7 October 1929: as above but Monday, Wednesday and Friday; last Friday 19 September 1930. No winter service hereafter.

20 July 1931: all days to Portmadoc (1929); last Friday 2 October.

17 July 1933: same, last Friday 29 September.

9 July 1934: now leased to Festiniog; Monday to Saturdays, through to Portmadoc (1865); last Saturday 13 October 1934.

8 July 1935: service resumed as above; last Saturday 14 September.

6 July 1936: resumed as before. Perhaps from 14 September trains terminated at Portmadoc (1929). Last train Saturday 26 September.

No further passenger service prior to preservation reopening.

Stations:

During Festiniog company’s operation, timetables seem to have been abbreviated. Tryfan, Waenfawr, Salem, Plas-y-Nant: on local handbills but only appeared in Brad September 1936, last month trains ran. Bettws Garmon*, Quellyn Lake*, Pits Head, Hafod Ruffydd, Hafod-y-Llyn, Hafod Garregog, Croesor Junction, Ynysfor, Pont Croesor: no evidence for use, though two marked ‘*’ were issued with printed tickets – perhaps unofficial local use of some/all? For consideration of certain detailed doubts, see article cited (e.g. evidence for circular tour connections running right through to Festiniog station even when link otherwise out of use; ticket evidence for use / non-use of stations.) Also see 1939 September 18 for rest of Festiniog history.

1924 June 2. Scottish items confirmed for this date by notice issued by LMS (copy included Chron July 2009; RAIL 393/151, cutting from March)

1924 October 4. Sand Hutton Light. Opened to public now. Had opened privately 1910, 15 in gauge, when stops were Village: Gardens; Fishpond. Now converted to 18 in and extended. Essentially served Sand Hutton Hall and farms on its estates but did provide brief service included in Brad. Service varied: originally Saturdays only (York market day); in July 1925 tt shown as Wednesdays and Saturdays; April 1926 tt Saturdays only; August 1926 tt all weekdays; July 1928 tt Saturdays only. See RM December 1924.

1925 March/April: East Kent Light Railway, extensions to Wingham Canterbury Road and Sandwich Road. According to RCH Amendment Leaflet 64 these opened on Wednesday 11 March 1925 – the line had been inspected and found satisfactory on 3 March. The first clear evidence for Poison Cross, Roman Road Woodnesborough and Wingham Town is a poster timetable for service beginning 13 April 1925 in Col Stephens Museum at Tenterden. Thanet Advertiser (28 March) only referred to goods stations in these cases but, being Saturday perhaps they were ignored; their first service would therefore have been 13 March or 18 April. See K Elks Chron July 2013 and R Maund Chron April 2019.

EK-F&G (pp 109-10, 127, 130) says W TOWN in use, illegally, by 1920, though not separately shown in tt; item on timetable changes for next month (Dover Express 22 September 1922) said that 1.17 from Shepherdswell would on Saturdays continue to Wingham and stop at intermediate stations [not named but presumably Poison Cross & co] by signal, same on return journey;
1926 May 4. Closures. May 4 was a Tuesday, the first day of the ‘General Strike’. Most stations given this closure date were not planned for closure prior to the strike but did not reopen after it. Line to North Greenwich was due for closure 1 July (last 30 June) and should have reopened briefly after strike but did not.

1926 September 1. Closure: Derwent Valley. Although the regular service closed on this date, there was later passenger use. No passenger return provided 1927, but all Returns from 1928 to 1938 (last year of issue prior to suspension of issues owing to war) show receipts for some ordinary passengers. In 1938, 474 passengers were carried, total receipts £11. These were almost certainly excursionists: one for blackberrying – stated by company as first trains since 1926 - ran on Bank Holiday Monday 6 August 1928 calling at all stations between Laytherope and Skipwith (Yorkshire Post 14th). Another that year ran Thursday 20 September (Leeds Mercury 21st). In 1929 excursion ran in conjunction with Royal Show at Harrogate – passengers taken between Laytherope and York by bus (DSM Barrie, The Derwent Valley Railway, Oakwood, 1978 edition).

Seasonal timetabled service ran 4 May 1977 to 31 August 1979; designed as tourist service (line still in use by BR for goods); final charter ran 27 September 1981, using Dunnington goods yard because platform line had been lifted (T Cooper).

Line opened 16 July 1927; mainly ceremonial day but some revenue-earning services; regular traffic 17th. Return and T 18th confirmed 16th opening; latter said, ‘The stations are well built …’ These would have been Hythe; Dymchurch; New Romney.

First tt included in Bred September 1927; this also includes Burmarsh Road and Holiday Camp; perhaps overlooked by T as only halts, perhaps added a little after line. One note said that Halts at Romney Warren; Botolphs Bridge; and Prince of Wales would open as request stops ‘when completed’. Another note said a couple of evening trains would run once the Minister of Transport was satisfied with the lighting arrangements.

November 1927 tt: stops at Botolphs Bridge and Prince of Wales, without qualification; no Romney Warren.

24 May 1928 extended to Pilot.

Early August extended to Dungeness (during Bank Holiday week-end, RHD); Monday of this was 6 August).

Later station history mostly covered in Section 4. However, when a number of Halts were added in December 1929 tt, there was also a note that trains would pick up or set down at any convenient point.

7 July 1930 tt: purge of Halts and omission of ‘anywhere’ note.

November 1930 tt: service cut back to Hythe – Greatstone only.

June 1931 tt: all-line service to run from Whitstable to September.

Pattern repeated but from December 1933 all-line winter service, Saturdays only.

October 1939 tt: all-day service kept but tables often included note that service was subject to revision.

March to July 1940, it showed service beyond New Romney Saturday only; August 1940 tt – service suspended.

22 May 1940: order given to evacuate civilians from the area (fear of invasion); if line not already closed, this would have put an end to its civil use. About 1933-7 1/2 mile branch had been built for the army near Maddisson’s Camp and carried workmen’s service.

15 June 1940: requisitioned for military use. Some use during war – RHD Military Railway passenger ticket (JB) from Burmarsh Road (Dymchurch) to Dymchurch (Marsh); additions in brackets also appear on peace-time tickets. World War II usage confirmed by The Line That Jack Built.

Handed back to RHD company 1945 (Wolfe).

August and September 1945: some sort of unadvertised service, Hythe to New Romney.

Formal reop Hythe to New Romney 1 March 1946 by Mayor of New Romney;

2 March 1946: service resumed over Hythe to New Romney stretch, at first Saturdays only (RM May). 1 June 1946 Warren Halt added request. By 1 August 1946: extended to Maddisesons Camp (had been added June 1932 tt). Stretch to Dungeness perhaps reop 3 November 1946 (OS Nock, Railways, February 1947, quoted by Wolfe). In theory Saturday service continued through winter but probably suspended for maintenance at some stage.

21 March 1947: formal reopening to Dungeness by Laurel and Hardy; public 29 March (T 22nd). Thereafter no winter service in tt but some use was made in winter of 1947: T 15 December has photograph with caption that the RHD was being used at weekends to relieve pressure on road traffic caused by petrol rationing; powerful headlights were fitted to the train at night; in the photograph passengers are shown hailing a train, apparently between stations.

Another odd use was described in T 31 May 1948: a train stopped outside the front door of a bride’s house and took the family party 5 miles to New Romney. After the ceremony it took them to Dungeness for the reception.

By 1957 Burmarsh Road and Warren Halt closed.

14 February 1972: taken over by a consortium to be run as a preservation line. There has since been some other use: from 7 September 1977 a schools’ special run throughout the school year from Burmarsh Road (reopened for this purpose) via Dymchurch and Jefferstone Lane (renamed from St Marys Bay 1981) to New Romney in the morning, with a return journey after school (T 10 August and 8 September; photograph in latter shows pupils waiting for first train, no station platform visible).

1929 April 12. Closure: Southwold. 12th was a Friday. RM June: last train ran on the evening of the 11th. However, RCH Distance Book Amendment 33/1 said closed 11 April – last day of use. Date given confirmed by A. Barrett Jenkins, Memories of the Southwold Railway, Jenkins of Southwold, 1978, who included description of last run taken from ‘a paper’ of 12 April. Western Daily Press (9th) said that following the closure of the line on the evening of Thursday 11th, LNE had made arrangements for a replacement bus service. No local paper references seen.

1930 March 1. Closure: Sand Hutton Light. Date from Return. Note in 1930 return says no passengers were carried after 1 March 1930 (a Saturday, which fits known service). This seems a more believable date than the 5 July 1930 usually quoted because return shows that only 65 passengers were carried during the year, total revenue £1 (had been 791 for £15 in 1929). However, there was some later passenger use – return for 1931 shows 61 passengers for £2.

1930 September 22: closure Bourne to Sleaford (ex-GN). Later special use; last 1951 for trip to Festival of Britain (S Squires, Lincolnshire Railways, Lincs County Council, 1998 – mentions Rippingale; other stations?).

1930 September 22: closure of intermediate stations between York and Scarborough except Malton and Seamer (ex-NE). Date from T 10 July. Continued to be used for parcels traffic and, certainly at one stage the one non-tt parcels train in each direction had passenger accommodation, which public were allowed to use. (Personal memory of Tony Kirby, travelling from Malton to Huttons Ambo with mother about 1952/1953.)

1930 September 22: closure Alnwick to Coldstream (ex-NE). After closure passenger coaches attached to parcels trains to take people to/from camping coaches sited ‘at most stations’; Whittingham explicitly mentioned. (JA Wells, Railways of Northumberland and Newcastle upon Tyne, Powdene, 1998).

For Akeld, 5 October 1942 wtt shows one train Tuesday only to Tweedmouth (none in previous wtt) and one Tuesday & Thursday from Berwick; not present 3 May 1943 wtt.

1931 January 1: closure of Dinas Mawddwy branch (ex-Cam). Annual later use for Dovey Valley Sunday Schools’ trip to Aberystwyth; last 26 June 1939. (Mawddwy).

1931 February 2: Closure: Ely to St Ives (ex-GE). There were later excursions, though not known if all stations involved. RM October 1932 referred to one on 27 August. RM November 1953 said that there had been half-day excursions until the outbreak of war in 1939 and ‘in recent years’ two annual excursions, one to Hunstanton, the other to Yarmouth Races. U refers to use of Wibburton. GE Journal January 2002 refers to use of Earith Bridge, where one called 1 August 1955 (B Wilson, own photographic evidence).

1932 September 19. London Electric: Finsbury Park to Arnos Grove. Opening date from T 20th. This also states that 30,000 free tickets for the opening day were distributed through the neighbourhood involved and that the booking offices were opened on the Sunday (18th) for the sale of season tickets.

1933 March 13. London Electric: Arnos Grove to Enfield West (later Oakwood) and Northfields to Harrow West. Opening date given by T 19th which also says that 30,000 free tickets for opening day were distributed in the Enfield area and 40,000 in the Harrow area – ‘these tickets were extensively used’. Booking offices again open previous day.

1933 April 6. Closure: co notice reproduced in Rails to Glyn Ceirio – Part 2 (Milner & Williams, 2015) says service would be discontinued ‘on and from’ Thursday 6th.

1933 July 17. MGN: Halts. Date of opening from Yarmouth Independent, item 8th, co notice 15th. Inspection report (MT 29/88/345) shows that all were used in the summer of 1933 but were not inspected, and approved, until November of that year. They were for summer-only use and were served by a Sentinel railcar, with a seating capacity of 48, which ran Mondays to Fridays only because pressure of holiday traffic on the single line made it impossible to fit in halts’ service on Saturdays. They were set up to give extra scope for travel by people staying at the holiday camps most of the halts served, not to take holiday-makers to/from camps at start/end of holidays. Report says that Sutton Staith and Little Ormesby attracted so little traffic that they were unlikely to be used again. This would seem to have been the case – the other five first appeared in Brad 9 July 1934. According to MGN there were through trains between Liverpool Street and Caister Camp, via Antingham Road junction (in 1958 via special link north of North Walsham instead); the halt at Caister Camp had by then been enlarged to take ordinary trains.

MGN also implies that they closed during the Second World War and reopened in 1948. No trains shown June 1941 tt. Brad August 1950 shows that a Sunday service, running from 2 July to 10 September inclusive, was run especially for section on which halts were situated. They were last served at the end of the summer season 1958. Their last trains ran 12 September (wtt). Caister Camp’s last Saturday specials to camp were 20 September (from camp last 27 September) (signalling notices, BR Eastern Region).

1935 January 12. Closure: West Sussex, Chichester to Selsey. Cl said clo 20th and is apparently supported by RM April 1935 article on the line which begins: ‘Following notice to the staff a week earlier, the train service … was abandoned on January 19’. However, RCH distance amendment 62/3, dated 26 February 1937, says line was closed 12 January 1935 (RCH had only first included line in October 1927). Explanation is provided by Portsmouth Evening News (17th): line will be closing at end of week; staff had been given a week’s notice; inquiries had revealed that no passengers had been carried that week and no goods other than those for which invoices had already been received. Thus for passenger use 12th was relevant date; it was a Saturday (last day? Or did last train run on the Friday?).

In its early years, at least, trains stopped between stations. RM April 1898 includes description of trip along line when a farmer used his own red flag to hail train at spot convenient for him.

1935 September 30. Closure: Lynton & Barnstaple (gauge 1 ft 11½ in). This would make a good case study for the problem of deciding what closure date should be quoted.

What actually happened: no regular Sunday service, so last train shown in Brad ran on the Saturday (28th). However, working tt (reproduced in Lynton) shows that Sunday excursions, one per week, were run in turn from Ilfracombe and Torrington, Yeovil, and Plymouth (obviously requiring change of trains at Barnstaple) from July to September and that one such was scheduled for September 29. W Som FP 5 October confirms that this ran and describes it as an ‘excursion’; according to working tt, this would not have stopped at Caffyns, Chelham or Snapper.

But – notice in N Devon J 22 August: ‘The Lynton & Barnstaple Line … will be closed on Sunday, 29 September’. Notice in same paper, 26 September: ‘On and from the 30th September 1935, the service of trains over [this line] will be withdrawn’. Was first supposed to be last day, second official closure? – but Sunday use not in Brad. At last moment, did someone realise there was a Sunday excursion and amend accordingly? To add to the complexity, normal SR practice then was to give Sunday closure dates; given that the Sunday service was an excursion, the 29th would have fitted. 30th used here because it was last date given by SR.
1936 September 14. Closure of Ashover Light. Line had been reduced to summer only after 3 October 1931 (Ashover). Derbyshire Times 18 September: was suspended on 14th; ibid 21 May 1937 – usually resumes Whitsun but engines fully occupied with quarry traffic.

Known later use: three specials 11 August 1937 for Ashover Show and one on 8 June 1940 to FORD LANE. a crossing place south of Stretton for Garden Fete in grounds of Ogston Hall (Gratton & Brand, The Ashover Light Railway, Wild Swan 1989); not known which stops used by these. 14 August 1943; choir and Sunday School pupils of St. John’s Church Clay Cross taken to Ashover (Derbyshire Times 20th).

1937 October 25. Closure Clynderwen – Fishguard via Maenclochog (GW). Closure was originally planned for 27 September 1937, with the end of the summer timetable, and a notice was issued to that effect. However, protests by the County Council and others resulted in one month’s delay, so that last train ran on 23 October (Maenclochog, which also reproduces premature closure notice; also GW letter 25 October 1945 Cl pap).

1939, date of convenience used to cover information from carbon copy in Cl pap ‘Closing of Unremunerative Branch Lines, LMS Northern Division’, produced later than September 1939. Said that an occasional passenger is worked over the following branches: Fochabers; Hopeman; Edzell; Bankfoot; Denny; Bonnybridge.

Also over line between Alloway Junction and Turnberry.

Full details not known about intermediate stations.

1939 September. Closure: Caernarvon to Llanberis (ex-LNW).

All-the-year-round service ceased with effect from 22 September 1930. LMS tt for that date says service has been withdrawn, but ‘Excursion Trains will be run to and from Llanberis during the summer months. See separate announcements’.

Summer services began 25 May 1931 but not shown in Brad until 1932, when noted as ‘excursion trains’ but otherwise looking identical to a normal service. No Sunday trains. Last train for season ran on October 1.

1933 – 1936: summer services shown, ‘excursion’ note omitted.

1934/5: winter: limited Christmas and Easter services added.

29 December 1934 all-year Saturday service added; since Saturday was Caernarvon market day, this service was clearly for the benefit of locals, not for any stray tourists who might still have been in the area. It would have been for this service that Padarn was opened, 21 November 1936 (exact date RM January 1937; T 23 November–’is now open’).

Pattern was the same until tt ending 24 September 1939: this said Monday to Friday service would not run after the 8th, Sunday service not after the 10th, but Saturday one would continue throughout the month.

Other excursions throughout year (e.g. to Liverpool for football) also ran, serving Llanberis, Cwm-y-Glo and Pontrhytallt. All services ceased when emergency tt into use 11 September and excursion fares withdrawn nationwide.

Table remained in Brad, with a war-time break, until its last issue, May/June 1961: always either no trains shown or ‘service suspended’.

All 1930 no intermediate stations were shown in public tt. Pont Rug closed September 1930; The others remained in use: Pontrhythallt, Cwm-y-Glo and Padarn in summer 1939 w.t.

Excursion trains ran after War: according to RM January 1949, first ran 6 July 1948. Wits and BR publicity material showed summer services, usually Mondays to Fridays, last running 7 September 1962, no intermediate stops on Llanberis line. Sunday School excursions on line in 1950s called at Cwm-y-Glo.

1939 September 11. Closure: Louth to Bardney (ex-GN), Rly Gaz 15 November 1940 (CW), supported by Brad, which shows ‘service suspended’ in October and November issues, and by LNE Emergency tt 2 October 1939 (same).

1939 September 18. Festiniog, 1 ft 11½ in gauge. During the last years the service appears from tt to have been very ragged. Stations were often shown for a few months without trains, then for a few months with and so on. A general idea is given under individual station headings; whether service was actually what tt showed is not known.

Trains for line last shown October 1931 tt.

Trains shown again June 1932 tt.

During the winters of 1932-3 and 1933-4 the service was cut back to one train each way. Thereafter no winter service was shown: trains last shown October 1934; in 1934 the service actually ran from 9 July to 29 September, inclusive (pocket tt, which called it the ‘Festiniog Toy Railway’).

Trains back May 1935; September 1935 – will not run after 15th inst.

April 1936 – commences 13th, last trains September 1936 tt.

3 May 1937 tt – commences 17th inst; last trains in tt ending 26 September 1937.

Trains again June 1938; last trains in tt ending 25 September 1938.

Trains again June 1939; line finally closed in September 1939; last public trains Friday 15th, for quarrymen 16th.

(Much from R Maund, from relevant co and working tts and local press.)

1940 June 10. Temporary closure of line Wrexham to Ellesmere: full capacity needed to serve Royal Ordnance Factory Wrexham, served by branch from west-facing junction about a mile from Marchwiel. Item by ‘D.F.’ in Clwyd Historian, Clwyd Local History Council, No 23, October 1989 deals with this. Map shows ‘stations’ at PARKEY, FIVE FORDS, BROOKFIELD; BRYN. Author believed from map evidence and physical remains that these were for passenger use. However, he had received letter from engine driver on line who stated that passengers were only carried to platform at BEDWELL SOUTH YARD, on branch but only just beyond junction, and taken on to work places by bus. Workman’s ticket from Cefn-y-Bedd to MARCHWIEL FACTORY LINE JUNCTION (JB) perhaps refers to platform mentioned by driver (see entry Section 4) – or to point at which line entered the factory – travel inside was free (J. Ferguson).
GM’s report 28 June 1940 shows that workers’ services continued directly after public closure. These ended 6 May 1942 (perhaps last day) and after that were only occasional hospital trains to Otteron-on-Dee for hospital at Penley Hall (GW letter 6 April 1945 Cl papers).

1942 August 4. Closure (temporary): Didcot – Newbury – Southampton line (GW). This resulted from need to improve it for military traffic. Reopened 8 March 1943. According to GW notice in Cl papers 11.30 Winchester to Sutton Scotney continued (presumably for servicemen) but was subject cancellation at short notice; also according to Cl papers there was an unadvertised service Whitchurch to Winchester (throughout period?)

1944 April 3. Closure: Lyster branch (ex-High). LMS handbill dated April 1944. ‘On and from Monday 3rd April passengers will not be booked for rail conveyance …’. Notice to staff: ‘branch will be closed … after the finish of work on Saturday 1st.

1944 June 19: closure of Thornbury branch (ex-Mid). Monday 19 June was last day of public use. Later ambulance trains took wounded to Thornbury for US Army Hospital at Leyhill; last 1 February 1945.

Tethering Quarry excursions ran annually, 1974 to 1986, inclusive.

Occasional stray passenger carried on goods, including one lady sold ticket from Oswestry by booking-clerk unaware of closure (‘about 1958’). (All from CG Maggs, Gate to Thornbury Branch, Oakwood, 2002.

1945 June 4. Closure: Carstairs to Dolphinton (ex-Cal). Date from G&SR since this was the Monday (Cl gives 2nd, a Saturday, which looks more like last day of use). Without further evidence, the possibility also exists that it was really a ‘first of the month closure’ which has caused confusion. Hba May 1945 said service would be withdrawn on 2 June – probably last day of use date. This occasionally seems to have happened – hba May 1950 said that Ebberston, Forge Valley, Sawdon, Snainton and Wykeham would close on 3 June (1950).

1947 June 15. Closure: Park Royal; Brentham; Perivale (GW). These had their last train on 14 June though the service to Old Oak Lane and Acton continued to the end of the month. The three closures made on the 15th were necessary so that trials of Central Line trains could take place (Rly Obs 1947, p 137; AA Jackson, Chron).

1947 June 16. Closure of a number of stations as a ‘temporary’ measure owing to a fuel crisis. They never reopened. RM January 1945 gave 14th as closure date (really last day of use) but in September 1949 and later issues, which recorded the making permanent of some of these, 16th was quoted.

1948 August 13 (Friday). Widespread flooding in south-east Scotland on 12th. Closure of Jedburgh to Roxburgh, and Duns to St Boswells (ex-NB), planned for later made now as result of flood damage on main line (Cl).

Scotsman (14 August): yesterday landslides at Grantshouse, Gorebridge, Tynehead, Heriot, Stow and Carham plus flooding at Chathill, Burnmouth and Berwick. Many bridges damaged; viaduct between Ayton and Eyemouth lost a central pier. Main Line services to Edinburgh from London diverted via Newcastle, Carlisle and Carstairs. No services on Eskbank and Polton line, Penicuik and Eyemouth branches, between Reston and St Boswells, Berwickshire line, Kelso to Tweedmouth, Selkirk and Peebles lines. Tweedmouth to St Boswells reopened 16 August and main line trains were diverted over this single line. Locals cancelled, resulting in temporary closure of Roxburgh Junction, Maxton and Rutherford (NE Express, September 2003).

Scotsman (18 August): announced yesterday: Galashiels to Peebles and Edinburgh to Polton reopened but Peebles to Leadburn not. Scotsman (Saturday 21 August): good progress on Edinburgh to Galashiels line, hoped to reopen early next week. Did it?

Scotsman (22 October): east coast main line and Kelso branch to reopen on 1 November. Reston to Duns reopened to passenger traffic 23 May 1949 (BR notice Scotsman 20th).

Eyemouth branch reopened 29 June 1949 (Scotsman 20th – today).

Also closed Lauder branch, reop? (reop to goods 20 November 1950 (BR notice Scotsman 18th) but 27 November (Berwickshire News 21st).

Gifford branch closed; reop? At Haddington damage to station meant trains had to stop short of station; until?

Full station detail not known: e.g. no reopening date found for Roxburgh, Maxton and Rutherford.

(Includes material from two articles in North British Study Journal, March and July 2013 by B. Farish, which see for fuller details of damage.)

1948 November 1: East Kent Light matters. According to EK-F&G practices erratic. Stops made between stations for favoured passengers but those waiting at request stops might be ignored by drivers. Speeds so slow that ‘delinquent’ passengers (without tickets) could alight between stations (p 459). Line closure date from RM January 1949.

Service to Poisson Cross; Roman Road; Sandwich Road (on short branch from Eastry) was even more erratic. At first Saturdays only. By April 1926 trains all days; August/November 1926 back to Saturdays; from December 1926/August 1927 served Wednesdays also. According to EK-F&G trains did not normally serve these for a while before they were removed from tt. According to closure date given (from Cl), last train should have run Wednesday 31 October 1928.

1949: floods cut Peebles line.

RM July/August 1949 says line from Galashiels clo by floods 7 January 1949; reop 19 March 1949.

Scotsman 8 January: Edinburgh to Peebles cut last night by floods at Eddleston; bus Leadburn to Peebles. Reop? Edinburgh to Peebles again: Ibid 27 October: line out of action yesterday, bus again. Reop?
1951. Coal crisis closures. Need to save coal early in 1951 led to cuts in passenger services, introduced in instalments. Many reductions in frequency on nearly all lines; some lost Sunday services; a few closed completely, but ‘temporarily’ – as in 1947, some never reopened. First batch started on 15 January (T 12th); paper gave examples of cuts, not complete list; included Brightlingsea branch. More cuts 21/22 January (T 19th, 20th), 28/29 January (T 27th), February 12 (T 1st, 2nd, 8th). All excursions suspended except those for fixed events (e.g. football, racing).

5 February closures (note from DSM Barrie, Cl papers): Salisbury to Buryford – one daily trip each way restored 19 March; involved [Salisbury]; Newton Tony, Amersbury; Buryford. Fareham to Gosport – restored 19 March. Also Scotswood to Blackhill (but for bridge works) involved [Newcastle; Scotswood]; Swalwell; Rowlands Gill; Lintz Green; Ebchester; Shotley Bridge; [Blackhill]; restored 19 March.

Services mostly soon restored. Euston to Heysel shaw boats trains (cut to three days per week) restored to daily mid-March (T 12th); Temporary full service over Easter; full restoration 2 April, except for ‘the poorly patronised trains which were already being considered for withdrawal when the cuts were made’ (T 20 March, 30 March).

Secondary sources seen (e.g. RM) did not give much coverage to this, so it may be that some temporary closures occurred that have not been recorded in the book. Note that some lines reopened after 2 April.

These shown ‘temporarily withdrawn’ (exact date unknown) March tt, restored in April tt/supplement: [Salisbury]; Newton Tony; Amersbury, Buryford – clo date unknown; only one train each way April. [Newcastle; Scotswood]; Swalwell; Rowlands Gill; Lintz Green; Ebchester; Shotley Bridge; [Blackhill]

Kirriemuir branch: 15 January 1951 reduced to one from Kirriemuir all days, one to Kirriemuir Saturdays only (True Line 85); same April 1951 tt; before/with August 1951 tt one each way daily.

Note has been applied to all stations closed 15 January to end February 1951 (inclusive), though some were perhaps already scheduled for closure. Oswestry to Llangynog and Dunstall to Perth via Lindores both in April tt as ‘service withdrawn’ whilst others were ‘temporarily withdrawn’. Suggests these two already marked for closure.

Auchendinny and Otterspool closed 5 March, so were possible victims. Also a fair crop 2 April but these were presumably closed in orthodox way.

Whilst some did reopen, most soon closed again. Presumably, earlier users had found alternatives and stayed with these so that services previously poorly patronised were now even worse so.

Ex-GW/Rhy line Quakers Yard to Merthyr suffered immediate closure when viaduct found to be unsafe – last train ran 3 February (Merthyr Express 10th).

1952 June 9. Closure. West Hartlepool to Ferryhill (ex-NE). RM August confirms closure date and adds that excursions will run on certain days until August 16; not certain whether all stations meant or just some of them.

1952 September 15: closure Morpeth to Rothbury (ex-NB). BR (NE Region) public notice said that advertised excursion trains would be run from time to time when customers justified it, but no details of those run, if any, have been seen. A private use was described in Rly Gaz 25 September 1953: train of four buffet cars pulled by two engines had been chartered for cocktail party; stopped at seven points to pick up guests until over 100 on board; date?

1953. Brief re-use of Malton to Driffield line (ex-NE). This had closed in 1950. Temporarily reopened 12 to 16 February 1953 owing to bad weather; not certain that all stations used; custom gained by advertising on previous evening’s news (RM April 1953). Used again winter of 1957/8; no exact date, but probably in February 1958 when snow at worst (W Burton, Malton & Driffield Junction Railway, M Bairstow, 1997).

1954 April 26: closure of Hawes branch (ex-NE). Occasional later specials to Jervaulx for Aysgarth school. At passenger closure promise had been given that line would be reopened for emergency passenger use if necessary. At the beginning of 1962 Wensleydale was badly affected by snowdrifts and, in accordance with promise, a skeleton service was run initially from Leyburn, calling at Wensley, Redmire. Aysgarth and Askrigg; later trains ran from Hawes. Service certainly ran on Monday 1 January and Tuesday 2nd (important market at Hawes). See SC Jenkins, The Wensleydale Branch, Oakwood, 1993).

1955 May 23: clo Bradford to Keighley (ex-GN); BR closure notice reproduced in article by JF Oxley & DR Smith in GN Society Journal 151; this also says excursions ran throughout summer 1955.

1955 May 30. Closure: Pontypool Road to Monmouth Troy (ex-GW) and East Grinstead to Lewes (ex-LBSC). Had been planned for later but a strike began then and continued beyond planned date. Last trains actually ran Saturday 28 May (RM May 1955), 1956 January 9: Ann Glenn, article On the Right Lines, The Scots Magazine, August 2011, says that Sunday School trains and other excursions continued to call at stations on the Airdrie to Edinburgh line, closed to ordinary passengers on this date. No specific details given but implication is that all / most of the stations were so used.

Later excursions: 7 September 1958 rambles’ from Newcastle (BR notice, Nth Phys Young); part, at least, continued to be used until 1963 or later by annual excursions each September to Bellingham Show (By Rail to Catcleugh, SLS Journal, October 1963), believed to have run via Morpeth and Redsham.

1957. ‘Provision Trains’ [High/LMS/BR]. This year is given because some exact information is available. Much earlier evidence is given in an article by D. Stirling in BackTrack, January 2003. This refers to trains, usually fortnightly, between Blair Atholl and Kingsussie calling at all stations and isolated railwaymen’s cottages and cites a Highland weekly circular of 20 January 1917. Ordinary fare-paying passengers were allowed to use this service, which was not in the public timetable, but would any of these have wanted to use other than the normal stations? The services concerned ran for many years but it cannot be guaranteed that the stops would always have been the same. These trains were run so that railwaymen and their families could buy essential supplies. Those using them needed a 'Provision Pass'. Rly Obs July 1966 said these had ceased about eight years previously. Details of two are known from BR Scottish Region Special Traffic Notices:

(a) Helmsdale to Wick and back, run monthly Saturdays, certainly shown for 22 June 1957. The extra stops were at Killmaran; Carbuie; Old Kinbrace; Limeside; Balloch; Clashaid. Their exact locations are not known since they were only shown in the footnotes, but presumably that was the order in which they called from Helmsdale.

(b) Blair Atholl to Aviemore and back, run fortnightly Saturdays. Again, exact locations not known, but in this case a full timetable was given and the extra stops can thus be approximately placed. They were Black Tank, Dalnacroeth, Garry Bridge, Alltnageourach (all Struan/Dalnaspald), County March (no road access so if doctor needed special engine took him there and back*), Balsporrnan, Bachan (all Dalnaspald/Dalwhinnie); Inchelea, Etteridge (both Dalwhinnie/Newtonmore). [most of information from G Borthwick.]

(c) a train once a month (the 'wifies' train') stopped on request at any little house on the far northern line; e.g. steps provided by a linesman for his house between Bower and Georgemas; implication is that this one ceased with withdrawal of local service in 1960*.

Also see MILPOST items in Section 4.

1960 January 6: Closure; Swansea and Mumbles. Last public service, followed, unusually, by a ceremonial closing run, occurred in the middle of the day on Tuesday 5th (SIT; T 6th).

1960 October 26: Closure: line between Sharpness and Lydney over Severn Bridge (ex-SW Jt). Two spans of bridge destroyed when bridge hit by two ships (Report of Court of Enquiry, Bristol 9-11 May 1961 – M Hale) late on 25th, after traffic had finished for the day. It was never repaired.

1960 November 5, 6 & 7. Replacement of Crow Road (ex-Cal) and Hyndland terminus (ex-NB) by new Hyndland on through line (ex-NB). This occurred when the Glasgow electric Blue Trains were introduced. Sequence of events:

- Hyndland terminus was last served on Friday 4th, giving closure date of 5th.
- Saturday 5th – formal opening of new service and skeleton service of steam trains.
- Sunday 6th – free public service.
- Monday 7th – normal public service (T 7 November; RM December).

Crow Road had not previously had a Sunday service so by normal standards its closure date should be 7th.

1962 August 1: Closure: Tenbury Wells to Bewdley (ex-GW). This was full public closure date (BR WR notice). It had been reduced to a calendar year’s experimental or trial service (one each way per day); essentially for schoolchildren but actually for all after last train on Saturday 29 July 1961 – ironically the first experimental train ran at the beginning of the school holidays and during the holidays trains often ran empty (Tenbury).

1962 August 5. Ashbourne to Parsley Hay (ex-LNW, Dovedale line); stations noted were still in excursion use at 5 August 1962 (BR handbill). It was last used by ramblers’ and sightseers’ special of Parsley Hay and Thorpe Cloud; on return train stopped for water at Hindlow – if any left/joined here, would have been unsanctioned use. Some of these specials were scheduled for Well Dressing Days: e.g. 7 excursions from various parts of country on Sunday, 14 May 1961, 4 on Sunday 26 May 1963. 1963 one called at Hartington, Tissington and Thorpe Cloud, the last use of these stations (AB). Last excursion on line through them (part [ex-NS]) 26 May 1963 (SLS Jour, June 1963) – station calls unknown.

1962 December 31: Closure: Plymouth to Launceston (ex-GW). Last trains supposed to run on Saturday 29th. Heavy snow meant that what was supposed to be last but one train from Plymouth stuck at Tavistock early on Sunday morning. The intended last trains never ran. Stranded passengers eventually finished journey by road (Cornish & D P 5 January 1963).

1964 June 15: Closure; Aberdare line (ex-GW). After closure service of ‘Merrymaker’ publically advertised excursions were run, generally in summer months, calling at surviving platforms at Mountain Ash (Oxford Street) and Penrhicwiber (LL); first was 6 June 1971 excursion to Paighton. At first ran from Aberdare HL, reversing towards Hirwaun then used old TV line. Excursion to Brighton on 29 July 1973 ran out via this route, back via new chord at Cwmbach, allowing direct running to Aberdare HL. In December 1984 specials to Cardif for shoppers; also specials for sporting events; daily trains during two peak holiday weeks. Experimental trains early 1988 were “shoppers special”. (P Jeffries, late Service Planning Manager, Arriva Trains Wales; JF Mear, Aberdare, The Railways and Tramroads, privately, 1999).

1964 December 14)

1965 January 18 : Closure: Ruabon to Barmouth (ex-GW). Planned for 18 January 1965 (last train 16th) but on Saturday 12 December 1964 severe flooding damaged line, services suspended late morning. No scheduled Sunday service. Monday 14th line from Barmouth to Dolgeluau again usable for passengers; buses took on to Ruabon. Thursday 17th Ruabon to Llangollen section reopened; service was also provided from Bala to Dolgeluau, reversal at Bala Junction; buses linked Llangollen and Bala (not reopened). Damage near Llandderfel so great that there was no justification for repairing it, given approaching closure of line. Closure Aberyswyth to Carmarthen (ex-GW) planned for 22 February 1965 but flooding had damaged line north of Strata Florida at the same time so that section remained closed (SLS Journal March 1965).

1965 September 28 (Tuesday). Closures: Balhiddier to Callander and Killin branch (ex-Cal). These were already planned but occurred prematurely as a result of a landslide blocking the main line on the 27th (Rly Obs November). Technically Kingshouse clo 27th since the only train that ran before line closed was not booked to call there.

1965 October 18. Closures: Aviemore to Forres (ex-High) and Boat of Garten to Craigellachie (ex-GNS). These were originally scheduled for 1 November; brought forward to 11 October; finally postponed to 18th. (Rly Obs November and December).

1966. Auchencastle; Beattock Summit; Greskine. Rly Obs July 1966, p 232, said that Saturdays only, engine and one coach (kept in siding at Beattock Summit) would provide service for railwaymen and families living alongside line. Main intermediate stops at Greskine and Auchencastle, but would stop at any lineside cottages on request; passengers joined/alighted via portable ladder. Last known service ran 24 September 1966 (Rly Obs January 1967 p 29). 30 June 1952 wtt showed stops at Beattock Summit only. Perhaps other stops ‘understood’? – train only for railway employees and wives and generous allowance of time in wtt – 30 minutes and more for journey.

1967 June 5: matters relating to Renfrew Wharf and Govan branches. In December 1904 Brad ‘workmen’s trains’ added to heading. Line last in Brad May 1906; back February 1911 (as was Govan branch), still ‘workmen’s trains’; service virtually same as that shown in February 1906. This raises suspicion that trains had still run but line omitted because it was only workmen’s service. However, no workmen’s or other passenger services shown in wtt for July–September 1907, suggesting it was fully closed. Between October 1918 and January 1919 a subtle change was made in heading – now ‘workers’ trains’; this was still included August 1927 but omitted before/with July 1928.

The Govan branch was then included in this table, so from December 1904 Brad its service was for workmen only.

1968 January. Brief reopening: Bideford to Torrington (ex-LSW). From Bideford 12, 19 and 26 January and Express & E over the period and R. Maund (Chron July 2016). Bideford is on west bank of the Torridge; then depended on the town bridge to provide link with East-the-Water, through which ran main road and disused railway. Anxiety had already been expressed about condition of bridge – old age and heavy traffic had taken its toll. There had been heavy rainfall and parts of Devon were flooded. Evening of Tuesday 9 January large pieces of masonry fell from bridge into river. Bridge immediately closed to vehicles but pedestrians allowed to continue using for that evening. Next day, it was completely closed. This meant all traffic into and out of Bideford had to go along narrow lanes via Torrington, next crossing point of river. From the 10th BR ran shuttle service between Torrington and Bideford to give some relief. Anyone wishing to cross river at Bideford had to catch bus to Torrington, then come back to the other side by train – service was free. On the evening of 11th the rail service was withdrawn but following local representations resumed Saturday 13th. Temporary footbridge opened on the 19th. Rail service operated January 10, 11, 13 and 15-20 (inclusive).

1969 January 1. Ex-LTS line to Upminster. On this date legally transferred to LT; staffing and management changed 26 April 1970. See B. Pask Chron 95/11.

1971 March: stations concerned were renamed before 8 March 1971. Western Region General Instruction Circular no. 314 of that date said had been advised by Eastern Region that they ‘have been renamed’. However, another notice, dated 20 April 1974 said Prudhoe was to lose its ‘for Ovingham’ tag with the start of the 6 May 1974 timetable.

1972 November 1. Transfer: line Paignton to Kingswear from BR (ex-GW) to Dart Valley. Last BR services Saturday 28 October. From Monday 30 October the Western Region provided a basic service on behalf of Dart Valley, last train 28 December 1972, when Britannia Crossing Halt closed. Latter began its independent service 1 January 1973, using separate station at Paignton. Original intention had been all-the-year-round service but in from 8 October 1973 they had to cut back to summer-only running. Dart Valley initially ran out-of-season (schools?) service, including stop at Britannia Crossing Halt (R Maund, Chron April 2011).

1975 May 3: Dalesrail reopening of certain stations on summer weekends starting in 1975, described as pilot project: reopening that year was for 3 week-ends only: May 3, 4; May 31, June 1; July 5, 6 (Yorkshire Dales National Park Dales Rail 1975 public pamphlet). Just ‘HORTON’ in that pamphlet.

1982 September 27. Withdrawal of Bakerloo service. This is official date; in reality service was withdrawn after morning peak on 24 September. Public protests led to restoration of a peak-hour service between Stonebridge Park and Harrow & Wealdstone. Section from Harrow & Wealdstone to Watford Junction remained closed to Bakerloo trains – it had been peak hours only prior to withdrawal. (Harrow).

1985 October 4: reopenings. ‘Dress-rehearsal’ of revised service for Valley Lines, including these stations and available to public was run on Sunday 4th, ready for operation of new tt from Monday 5th (P Jeffries, late Service Planning Manager, Arriva Trains Wales).

1993 October 4. Reopening of line from Glasgow Central to Whifflet via Mount Vernon. Free rides available to public on Friday 1st (formal opening day) and, especially, Saturday 2nd, using ‘some very ancient diesel rolling stock’. (Wishaw Motherwell and County of Lanark Legacy Journal, December 1993).

1994 March 28. Docklands Light: Beckton branch. Date from page 131 of BLN 729. Clear from this item that public used on this date, although it was also formal opening day. Since, according to this source, free travel was available for the first four days, there would be some justification for quoting a later date – though not 31 March, which appears on the front page of the same issue of BLN.
Severe flooding 30 July 2002 closed line again; various diversions from next day; reopened 20 August 2002 (D Lindsay).

1997 June 1. Closure of Mitcham area lines (ex-SR) for conversion to Croydon Tramlink. Last trains ran Saturday 31 May 1997. No Sunday service so by conventional standards these would be considered ‘closed 2 June’; replacement bus service began on that date. However, a new timetable came into force on 1 June and described these as closed. Therefore that date has been used here; there would seem to be equal grounds for using either. See BLN 794, RM August, Railway World August, Rly Obs August p 327. For reopening see Section 7.

2002 March 31 (Easter Sunday). Transfer of Newcastle to Sunderland service to TWM; and (re)opening of South Hylton to Sunderland line by TWM. Newcastle to Sunderland train services replaced by buses on following dates to enable work on line (all 2002): 12-27 January; Saturdays and Sundays 2 February-24 March; all days 25-30 March; also evenings only 28 January-1 February and 18-22 March; also Sunderland tunnel 18-19 February. Ex-BR trains continue to call at Heworth, otherwise intermediate stations now TWM only (NE Express, November 2002, p 164).

2003 May 18: line via Stoke-on-Trent closed for route modernisation (buses replaced); reopened 22 August 2003 (WestCoast Improving your Railway leaflet).

2004 May 23: local services Coventry – Nuneaton – Stafford – Stoke-on-Trent: stations noted were temporarily closed from that date, with replacement services by buses; doubts were expressed about their ever reopening to rail services. Some have reopened: Atherstone (12 December 2005); Bedworth (13 June 2005); Polesworth (12 December 2005) – but one journey, one way only, rest still by bus but this since withdrawn. Stone reop 14 December 2008. Barlaston; Norton Bridge; Wedgwood remain road served and are not expected to regain their rail service.

2005 December 12: opening of Larkhall branch, with stations at Chatelherault, Merryton and Larkhall; ceremonial 0th (The Herald, Glasgow, 10th). National Rail 11 December 2005 it said would open on 13th – clearly misprint.

2007 April 6: North Yorkshire Moors Railway. Company’s t shows that it began 6 April 2007 to run service through to Whitby (BLN 1035.105, 1036.149); this was included in the national timetable from 20 May 2007. Seasonal, not all days of week (these have varied). Trains call at Goathland, Levisham, Newton Dale and Pickering.

2007 July 20. Taunton to Minehead branch, ex-GW. This line was reopened in instalments by a preservation company (during which time Doniford Halt was opened and Crowcombe reverted to Crowcombe Heathfield). Normally operated between Bishops Lydeard and Minehead but occasional specials worked through from the main system. From Friday 20 July 2007 to Monday 27 August 2007 train ran Mondays, Fridays and Saturdays (one each way per day). They started from Bristol Temple Meads and ran non-stop to Taunton, then called at all stations to Minehead. Connections at Bristol for Midlands and North and at Taunton for London. It was an experimental service which needed to have to paid its way to be repeated. (Somerset County Gazette 28 June 2007 gave advance notice). [Train left Minehead at 1110, reaching Bristol at 1346; returned from Bristol at 1406, reaching Minehead at 1625. Thus really only of use only for those starting/ending a holiday at ex-Butlins – thus chances of repetition slight? – did not run 2008.] For the company’s steam gala in 2006 a shuttle service was run by First Great Western between Taunton and Bishops Lydeard on 7 and 8 October (RM December). A Virgin Trains Voyager provided a similar service from on 6 and 7 October 2007 for people attending a steam gala (Somerset County Gazette 11th).
Through train from stations (except Doniford Halt) on line to Bristol and Bath 2 December 2012, 102 seats available (Somerset County Gazette, 18 October).

GW to run connecting shuttle service Taunton to Bishops Lydeard on fortnightly Saturdays July 27 to October 5 (inclusive) 2019. Trial to see if worth it – but significant financial problems beset line, which needs repairs following recent safety inspection (Somerset County Gazette 11th). First train ran as planned (ibid 1 August).

2007 December 23. Closure of East London Line. Last train ran Saturday 22 December (RM January 2008). Line closed for reconstruction as part of London Overground Network; due to reopen in 2010. Note that line has had a varied history. It opened as the East London Company, using Marc Brunel’s tunnel under the Thames, to provide a link between the GE and LBSC. From 1870 it was worked and managed by the LBSC; from 1892 a Joint Committee took over; the last steam train ran on 30 March 1913 and then the Met took over as sole user; it became SR property in 1925 and was transferred to London Transport in 1948. For a long time Underground maps showed it simply as ‘Met’; about 1970 this became ‘Met (East London Section)’; more recently just East London (Line).

2010 May 23. Full reopening of East London line from Dalston Junction, now operated by London Overground. Limited public ‘preview’ service from 27 April 2010. Preview service ran only as far as New Cross and New Cross Gate; From 23 May service was extended to Crystal Palace and West Croydon (RM July).

2010 June 1. (Tuesday). Reopening of North London line from Gospel Oak to Stratford (platforms 1 and 2). Had closed Saturday20 February (TfL.gov.uk webpage) for work in connection with item above (2010 May 23) and replaced temporarily by a bus service.

2010 July 24: HC line west of Edgware Road due to close to allow work in conjunction with Crossrail at Paddington. Due to reopen 15 August 2010 (RM August).

2013 May Monday 25 – Wednesday 29 inclusive: Glasgow Central to Edinburgh via Shotts: closed for engineering work, bus substitute (Scotrail pamphlet); also several Saturdays and Sundays. Stations: Addiewell; Breich; Carfin; Cleland; Curriehill; Fauldhouse; Hartwood; Holytown; Kingsknowe; Kirknewton; Shotts; Livingston South; Slateford; West Calder; Wester Hailes.

2013 November 3. All stations from Tywyn to Pwllheli (inclusive) clo 3 Nov 2013 (Pont Briwet bridge damaged). Although official reop was 1 September 2014, fare-paying passenger trains used the line earlier but exact stopping arrangements unknown; Llandecwyn on a new site at reopening.

2015 September 6 (Sunday): Edinburgh Waverley to Tweedbank: public opening. Line made up of new stretch between Newcraighall and Eskbank, to serve planned new housing estate, and reopening of part of old ‘Waverley’ route, closed 6 January 1969. On 5th 1,600 chosen winners had ‘golden tickets’ to travel line prior to public opening.

2015/16: casualties of winter storms (all RAIL 795): Llandudno Junction to Blaenau Ffestiniog clo on 27 December 2015 by flood damage at more than 100 locations; reop 22 February 2016. Carlisle to Glasgow direct route clo on 31 December 2015 by damage to viaduct at Lamington; reop 22 February 2016; services diverted but no stations closed. Carlisle to Appleby clo on February 9 2016 as a result of embankment slip 8 miles south of Carlisle; yet to reopen, replacement buses still operating.

2017 August 13. Bescot Stadium to Rugeley Town (inclusive) closed for electrification; Bescot and Walsall closure lasted to 21st (last day), remainder to 28th (last day) (London Midland website and leaflet).

METRO LINES and BLACKPOOL TRAMWAYS

This section is used to cover lines which run partly on dedicated track and partly on public roads shared with other types of traffic. Where these use the sites of previous ‘normal’ railway stations, cross-references are provided in Section 4. These services are put here and treated in outline only because the close spacing of their stops means that they would occupy far greater relative space than their importance warrants, especially considering that there might well be a considerable increase in this sort of service in the next few years. Furthermore, they are all recently opened services which have received considerable coverage in the railway press so that it should be far easier for anyone wanting more detail to find it.

Tyne & Wear not included – fully covered in Section 4 (wholly on dedicated track).

Lengths of line listed in order of opening, with intermediate stops in order.

BLOCK CAPITALS used for termini of sections; [...] for stop already in existence; (...) for stops opened after their sections and renaming information; *= see entry in Section 4 – Tramlink stop might be in existing station, re-use of old standard station or alongside one of either of these; names shown .../... are as on maps in tt. Much derived from A. Brackenbury (Chron – June 1997, March 2003, April 2006, April 2011). See diagrams included in current timetables.

SOME MARGINAL ITEMS

The aim is to give an outline idea of some of the great variety of services that have carried passengers but do not qualify for inclusion in the earlier parts of this book. Sometimes the difference could be described as a minor technicality. Catterick Camp’s service, included in Section 4, only differed from that of RAF Cranwell, listed below, in that it appeared briefly in Bradshaw; the miners’ services shown below were similar to many listed in Section 4, but were provided by companies that did not run ‘normal’ passenger services. Others were far removed in kind from services listed earlier. In these matters one should try to think in terms of an infinity of shadings rather than clear-cut definitions. Lines and stations just used by the occasional excursion or works outing are omitted, as are the many instances where contractors building lines provided services of a sort for their workmen once some portions of the line were in place. In most cases details are either not known or known only in very general terms and the complications involved in attempting to list them would fill a lot of space, much of which would be taken up with variants of ‘not known’. More can be found out about many of them from U, which should be regarded as the source if nothing else is shown; for some, books containing much fuller information are cited, though inevitably only small portions of these works deal with passengers. It can be safely assumed that many lines not listed here carried comparable services.

1: Lines used by the general public

ALFORD & SUTTON Tramway. 2 ft 6 in line. Op 2 April 1884; clo at/near start of December 1889 (that it had closed, officially for winter, but probably in reality for ever, announced in paper of 7 December, G Dow, The Alford & Sutton Tramway, Oakwood, 1947).

BLACKPOOL & FLEETWOOD Tramway. Now in Section VI.

BRIGHTON & ROTTINGDEAN Seashore Electric Tramway, Included in Returns. That for 1896 says: ‘Only open 30 November to 4 December 1896 and was closed in consequence of damage caused by a gale’. Reop 20 July 1897. In both 1898 and 1899 more than 100,000 passengers were carried. Numbers then fell drastically, perhaps because service was not continuous: 1900 – 42,000; 1901 – 9,000; 1902 – 18,000. In 1903 return, the entry was ‘line not working’. Cars on stilts so that they could run when line covered by the sea. For fuller details see chapter in book on Volk’s Railways, below.

BURTON & ASHBY Light Railway, 3 ft 6 in line. Op Burton to Swadlincote 13 June 1906; on to Ashby 2 July 1906; Swadlincote to Gresley 24 September 1906; Woodville to Gresley 15 October 1906. Gresley arm clo November 1912; passenger cars last ran on rest 19 February 1927. Owned by Midland Railway. (C T Goode, The Burton & Ashby Light Railway, Burstwick Print & Publicity Services, Hull, 1994).

CAIRNGORM MOUNTAIN RAILWAY: owned by Highlands & Islands Enterprise, ‘government-sponsored development agency’, leased to CairnGorm Mountain Ltd and operated as ‘CairnGorm Mountain Railway’. 2 km (1¼ mile) funicular, 2 metre gauge; base station at Coire Cas (6 miles south-east of Aviemore) to top at Ptarmigan. Opened 23 December 2001. December to April inclusive is high-speed ski-lift. May to November runs slower so tourists can enjoy views; during this period passengers are restricted to top station (has viewing and other facilities) – fears that mountain paths would suffer excessive wear if let passengers walk down. Operates weather permitting (wind up to 85 m.p.h.). (Rail 20 March 2002 plus internet items via G Boyes).

CHATHAM & DISTRICT Light Railway. Incorporated 1899 under Light Railways Act. Street tramway but in Brad Sh by 1913.

CRUDEN BAY: hotel op 1 March 1899, railway about mid-June 1899; latter free for residents, others 3d. Passenger used ceased with closure of Boddam branch (K Jones, The Cruden Bay Hotel and its Tramway, Grampian Transport Museum/GNS Railway Society, 2004).

FAIRBOURNE Railway, Narrow gauge line Fairbourne to Barmouth Ferry. Opened 1890; still open.

HYTHE & SANDGATE Tramway. Op 18 May 1891 from Sandgate to Seabrook Hotel; on to Hythe 1 June 1892; extended at other end to Sandgate Hill 1 August 1892. SE was driving force behind line. Last worked in summer of 1921. (SE, SEC).
ISLE OF THANET LIGHT RAILWAYS. Light Railway Order granted 1898, extended 1900, amended 1901 (CR Clinker, Light Railway Orders, AvonAnglia, 1977). Appeared in railway Return 1901, for period 4 April (opening date?) to 5 October 1901 (end of its financial year?); 11 miles long; nearly 3 million passengers carried, only one class of ticket. In 1902 return, for year ended 30 September 1902, 4½ million passengers carried. No further entries; no railway book seen makes any reference; tramway entered in wrong Return for a couple of years?

JAYWICK. 18 inch gauge (about 1 mile); genuine passenger service between Jaywick Sands seafront and Crossways for an inland housing estate; op 31 July 1936; clo September 1939 (L. Banks, Rails to Jaywick Sands).

KINVER Tramway near Stourbridge. 3’ 6” electric; from Fish Inn on northern side of Stourbridge to Kinver via Stewpony; part at Coalbournbrook along public road. Operated under Light Railway Order; op Good Friday 1 April 1901; prob clo 1 February 1930. (K & SL Turner, The Kinver Light Railway, Oakwood, 1974; RM January and February 1910)

MULL & WEST HIGHLAND NARROW GAUGE: Craignure (ferry terminal) to Torosay Castle estate. Opened 1981; last run: Operated under Light Railway Order of 1898, by Portsmouth Corporation Tramway. Wantage Road (where it connected with GW services) to Wantage; standard gauge: intermediate stops at Oakwood, 1993; Back Track February 2013

PLYNLMON & HAFAN Tramway. 2 ft 3 in line. Service Talybont to Llanvihangel, Mondays only, 28 March 1898 to 15 August 1898 (inclusive), to connect with market train to Aberystwyth. No BoT sanction. (see N. J. Hill, Chron April 2015). According to L. Cozens’s booklet on line passenger excursions occasionally ran beyond Talybont to Pontcyngeirf and Foot of Incline.

PORTSDOWN & HORNDEAN LIGHT RAILWAY. Operated under Light Railway Order of 1898, by Portsmouth Corporation Tramways, via Cowplain, Waterlooville, Purbrook. 4 ft 7½ inch gauge; electric but did possess one steam car; opened 2 March 1903; last ran 9 January 1935; part own track, part road verge, part road. (RM April 1936).

PWLLLHELI TO LLANBEDROG: 3’ 6”; mainly to serve art gallery and pleasure gardens at Llanbedrog. In two sections, needing to change from West End tramway at point south of Pwllheli. Severe gale in October 1927 destroyed main section. West End section closed 1928 (RM September 1949; D&C 11).

RAMSGATE tunnel Railway. After 1926 rationalisation tunnel to the Harbour was abandoned. 2 foot electric tramway later laid by an amusement company to link main line to its seafront attractions from station at Hereson Road Dumpton Park. This opened Friday 31 July 1936; temporarily closed during War (tunnel used as air-raid shelter); finally closed end of 1965 season. (RM September 1938 and March 1941; Daily Mail, 11 March 2010, page 74).

SOLOMON ANDREWS TRAMWAY: horse-drawn service in summer 1899/1900 to 1906 (some use to 1911) from end of spur to Barmouth Viaduct to Gfn Fforrod on what is now A493 (CC Green, Coast Lines of the Cambrian Railways, Wild Swan, 1966).

VOLK’S Electric Railway. At Brighton. Op 4 August 1883 on; stops – Aquarium (originally adjacent to present Palace Pier, replaced to east June 1930), Haliway (originally Paston Place*, later Peter Pan’s Playground), Black Rock; still open. (AA Jackson, Volk’s Railways, Brighton, Plateaway Press, 1993; Back Track February 2013).

WANTAGE Tramway. Wantage Road (where it connected with GW services) to Wantage; standard gauge: intermediate stops at Grove Bridge and Oxford Lane. Op 11 October 1875; last passenger use 31 July 1925. (R Wilkinson, The Wantage Tramway, Oakwood, 1995).

2: Military lines

Some were linked to the main system and could provide through services; others were self- contained, sometimes narrow gauge, lines, designed to take workers from a ‘station’ near a main line one to their place of work or to take personnel from one part of the site to another. Some ran to regular timetables, others provided occasional services.

Also see 6: Hospitals.

Letter (120/Home/6082/Q(Maint)1c, 31 January 1968) Ministry of defence said passenger carrying stock was maintained at following Army establishments, but not all operated scheduled service: Bicester, Bramley (Hants.), Kinneton, Long Marston, Longmoor, Ludgershall (Central Vehicle Depot), Marchwood, Shoeburyness. No details known for Kinneton.
There was a complex systems of lines for munitions workers in the DORNOCK – GRETNA GREEN area, linked at several points to the main system; map in U shows Dornoch Depot, Gretna Township, Wylies Platform; also connection to main system at Longtown. Terminus from Broombills at Cotton Store Platform; used 1910s. Also in this area was the ng line providing the Broombills Ordnance Depot with an internal service.

There were many lines on and around SALISBURY PLAIN.

Branches from Dinton to Chilmark (ng) and Fovant (standard, opened 15 October 1915 – see RM June 1919). Heaviest use of Fovant was for demobilisation (ceased 16 January 1920) (LSW).

Larkhill Camp (branch from near Amesbury). Porton Down. Main station linked by 2 ft gauge.

Winterbourne Gunner (ng): used c 1916 – c 1928.

BETWEEN SALISBURY PLAIN AND LONDON were lines at/to:

Blackdown Camp: branch from Brookwood via BISLEY CAMP (which see in Section 4), camps at Pirbright and Deepcut (to which military passenger services began 1 August 1917) to Blackdown Camp (December 1917); LSW worked from 8 August 1918; passenger services ceased 22 December 1918 (LSW). After 1939 extended again for troops to new station at Pirbright Camp, just east of earlier one; dates ?; (P Harding, Branch Lines from Brookwood, Middleton Press).

Bramley, near Reading: internal Ordnance Depot service; 1922 – 1960; full details of network not known. However a service was still running June 1978: Main Gate via B line, 4 Post, D line and return to Yard (morning); reverse in afternoon (R. Maud).

Calshot (RAF): 2 foot gauge; Eaglehurst (terminus plus stop at Officers’ Mess) to Calshot Spit; 1919 – 1945. (FW Cooper, The Calshot and Fawley Narrow Gauge Railways, Plateway 1989).

Longmoor Military (Bordon to Liss, mainly a line for training army personnel to run railways) (Melbourne). opened 1905 as Longmoor Military, renamed Woolmer Instructional 1906, extended to Liss 1933, reverted to Longmoor Military 1935. Free travel at own risk; winter tt 1932* shows Longmoor, No 2 Range, Whitehill, Oakhanger, Bordon as stops; tt about 1945* has Oakhanger, Whitehill, Longmoor, Weaver Down, Liss Forest Road, Liss as stops; map of system in RM June 1938 shows ‘stations’ at Bordon, Oakhanger. Whitehill, Two Range Halt, Woolmer, Longmoor Downs, Weaver Down Junction, Liss Forest Road, Liss. U also mentions Apple Pie, Martineque, Tank Crossing, Weaver Down (shown on branches in map in RM August 1933 when it was Woolmer Instructional); presumably there were changes, especially with occasional stops, as the camp changed in size and purpose; were passengers always put down at junction for Weaver Down? Ran regular passenger service Longmoor to Liss, last 31 October 1962.

Marchwood Military (near Fawley, Southampton). Stops: Mulberry Halt – Port Gate Platform – Model Room Platform – Jetty Halt; last train Tuesday, 27 August 2013 (BLN).

Winnall Down (near Winchester).

KENT had:

Chatham Dockyard (branch from Gillingham); line opened February 1877 but passenger use only confirmed from 1940s.

Chattenden & Upnor. Lodge Hill – Lutnor – Chattenden – Upnor; 2’ 6”; 1942 to last train 19 May 1961 (but perhaps not still passenger then).

Davington Light (Davington – Oare – Uplees, near Faversham); November 1916 to 1918; 3’ 3”; munitions workers – see M Minter Taylor, The Davington Light Railway, Oakwood, 1986 reprint; RM May 2004, p 21).

Lydd Camp (branch from Lydd). 1883 – 1927.

See RM Lyne, Military Railways in Kent, North Kent Books, 1983 (especially helpful for sketch-maps of lines).

Royal Arsenal Woolwich: branch from Plumstead op about 1875; 18 inch gauge provided passenger services from Dial Square to Berber Junction with 10 intermediate stops including Central Stores and Mugby Junction; began? (certainly by late 1890s) to 1923. Standard gauge services: from about 1914 Third Gate – Mugby Junction – Berber Gate – berber Junction, with branch to Tripcock Pier; 1941 Fourth Gate – CF6(F109) – Wood Yard (Q.F.C.F4). Cl? (R Maund).

The Royal Arsenal, Its Background, 1963 and The Royal Arsenal Railways, M. Smithers, 2016. Also see WOOLWICH entry in Section 4.

Trench Warfare (see Section 4).

ELSEWHERE, well scattered, were lines at/serveing:

Through trains to Oxford May 1943 to winter 1959/60 and to Euston October 1944 to February 1945, calling at Bicester. * = no platforms.

Bishopton. Royal Ordnance Factory; internal passenger service (narrow gauge) from Fullwood, near Georgetown station; 1940 - ?; stations were Netherfield; South Crook; Rockbank; North Brue (RN Forsyth, Back Track, April 2005, p 248-9).

Callnryan (naval base near Stranraer); trains ran from London Road Bridge at Stranraer to Cairn Main use by passengers, who had to pay for travel, was to enable personnel working at the camps along the line to go to Stranraer at weekends; service began May 1942; perhaps closed 1945 (D Pedley). A Bell, Stranraer in World War II and Bill Gill, The Cairnryan Military Railway, both published by Stranraer & District Local History Trust, give details of stations at Transit (i.e. for military transit camp), terminus at London Road Bridge, and YMCA, about half-way along line. Also mention of stations (stops?) at Innermessan, Leffnoll North, Rubble Bank (northern terminus); see RM January 1971.

Cannock Chase (hodnesford area); Hednesford – Brocton Camp – Milford & Brocton; 1910s.

Catterick (see Section 4).

Clipstone Camp (see Section 4).

Draycott Camp (branch from Chiseldon; op September 1914; clo by 1932).

Faslane Bay Military Port No. 1 (Army) was WW2 installation, first passenger train 5 August 1943, then 60+ others until August 1945; clo as military port 31 March 1946 (British Railway Journal 43, 44). Platform for troop trains at western extremity was over 300 yards long (S. Noble, The Vanished Lines of Western Dumbartonshire, History Press, 201 p. 115).

Fauld (RAF narrow gauge line, near Tisbury).

Lenabo Airship Station: (2½ mile line from Longside, GNS), built by Royal Naval Air Service during First World War; provided passenger service for personnel c 1916 to 1920 (Tales of the Buchan line).

Long Marston (internal service at Ordnance Depot).

Melbourne Military (Melbourne); military service operated from Smisby Road, north of Ashby-de-la-Zouch to Melbourne(?); see CHELLASTON EAST JUNCTION (Section 4).

Portsmouth Dockyard: were internal services to carry men to various sites: 23 April 1880 workman jumped off ‘truck train’ taking men between ‘ticket station’ and Inflexible in the docks, seriously hurt (Hants Telegraph 24th). This ‘ticket station’ was at entrance to docks, where men signed in.

RAF Cranwell (branch from Sleaford, sometimes using nearby Slea River Platform); original contractor’s line replaced by permanent 1919. Built for Navy, later to RAF. At first used by workmen, later regular trains for servicemen, ended November 1926 (answer to Parliamentary Question, Hansard 23 March 1927). Later occasional through trains from main system, last 1953 for Coronation (most from D Love, RM October 2003, p 32; AJ Ludlam, The RAF Cranwell Railway, Oakwood, 1988).

Rosyth Dockyard – see entry in Section 4.

Royal Arsenal Woolwich: branch from Plumstead op about 1875; 18 inch gauge provided passenger services from Dial Square to Berber Junction with 10 intermediate stops including Central Stores and Mugby Junction; began? (certainly by late 1890s) to 1923. Standard gauge services: from about 1914 Third Gate – Mugby Junction – Berber Gate – berber Junction, with branch to Tripcock Pier; 1941 Fourth Gate – CF6(F109) – Wood Yard (Q.F.C.F.). Clo? See O. F. G. Hogg, The Royal Arsenal, Its Background, 1963 and The Royal Arsenal Railways, M. Smithers, 2016. Also see WOOLWICH entry, Section 4.

Shoeburyness (army firing ranges). Passenger service begun by 1890; Old Ranges (alias Engine Shed) – Magazine – Chapel Road – Camp Field shown in 1922 tt; withdrawn before / with lasted printed tt June 1929 and replaced by service from new Camp Field (just north of original) – Village Crossing (beside Shoeburyness station) – New Ranges; at one time trains for schoolchildren as well as government employees; ended 1 September 1958 (last day?) (RM April 1959; Bylines September 2005).

Spurn Head (coastguard and military). 1916 to March 1951; Spurn Head – Kilnsea Fort; lifeboat crew and lighthouse staff (RM December 1940). The southern part of the Strabathie Light Railway (see under 5, below), from Murcar Golf Club to the Bridge of Don was used during the First World War. The Admiralty took over the clubhouse for wireless use and railway was used to carry its personnel (until September 1920).

3: Lines used in dam construction

These, many narrow gauge, were built primarily to transport materials to sites. However, men building dams were often housed in huddled camps far from towns and villages so services were also run to carry workmen from camps to sites; in some cases there were also services to take children to school and wives to shops and markets. HD Bowtell wrote much on this topic and is main source for entries below: Reservoir Railways of Manchester & the Peak, Oakwood, 1977; Lesser Railways of Bowland Forest, Plateway, 1988; Lesser Railways of the Yorkshire Dales, Plateway, 1991; Dam Builders’ Railways from Durham’s Dales to the Border, Plateway, 1994; article, Railways to Cowgill, Culter Waterhead and Camps, Journal of Stephenson Locomotive Society, March 1971; Reservoir Builders of South Wales, Industrial Locomotive Society, 2006 (enlarged and prepared for publication by G Hill). By their very nature these services were subject to changes of route as the work progressed and were short-lived. Services are known for:

SCOTLAND

Camps: line from siding at Crawford [Cal]; no regular service for workmen (originally prisoners of war) since most lived at site; operated within period 1917-30. Letter from late Tom Jackson, who lived at Moffat, to Bryan Wilson, recounts how he met a couple of elderly ladies then living in Moffat who told him that they had travelled by train (sometimes on the engine) to yard at Crawford and then on to school. One’s father had been a shepherd in the valley and the other’s had worked on reservoir (her grandfather drove the engine).

Culter Waterhead (Motherwell & Wishaw Corporation Waterworks); pupils taken daily from here to Coulter school, service terminating at Causewayend Siding Biggar. Also AK McCosh (later a director of LNE) lived at Culterallers House near Coulter; he had use of engine and a wagon or two with seats installed to take shooting parties (usually Saturdays) up to Waterhead, whence they walked into the hills; line active within period 1903 – 1907 (when line lifted – Peebles).

Talla (Edinburgh Waterworks); line from Broughton [Cal]; platforms for workmen at Victoria Lodge at proposed reservoir edge and Crook Inn; locals also allowed to use; work began on line 1895; passenger service withdrawn 28 September 1905 (date dam came into use); locals asked for line to be kept for their use – refused (G Stansfield, Lost Railways of the Scottish Borders, Stenlake, 1999). Special train for about 200 invited guests ran from Edinburgh Caledonian to Broughton and thence by private line for stone laying ceremony on dam site 29 September 1897 (Glasgow Herald 30th, Steam Days, December 2002). Another trip 16 September 1898 (Edinburgh Evening News 18th).
NORTHERN ENGLAND

Angram Dam site (a continuation of the Nidd Valley Light Railway); 14 July 1904 – c 1919; Lofthouse-in-Nidderdale – Scar Village (site unknown). Ticket exists for Scar Village, site unknown.

Blakedean (for Halifax Corporation; line from Hebden Bridge); 3 foot gauge; from Dawson City (workmen’s camp), 1½ miles from Hebden Bridge, to reservoir with a Halt half-way where many navvies lived; 24 May 1901 to 1908 (RM January 1967) – but Bowtell mentions three dam sites at Walshaw Dean (Bottom, Top and Middle Dam) and does not give any intermediate stop.

Brearley Banks (2 ft gauge; c 1909 – c 1925; War Department operated 1915 – 1922) and Roundhill (lines from Masham, for Leeds Corporation).

Cattleugh (Newcastle & Gateshead Water Company); 3 ft gauge; about 1896 to 1904.

Derwent & Howden (from sidings at Bamford [Mid]). In May 1903 it was agreed that occasional trains would run from Birchenlee to Bamford for workmen and families; worker’s trains from Bamford Sidings (for men living at Hope and Bamford) – Derwent Dam – Birchenlee – Howden Dam 1903-1912; Saturday trips became a regular feature. Still taking passengers April 1912; line ‘died slowly’ in 1914 (SLS Jour, September / October 2007, pages 189-90).

Geltsdale (Carlisle Water); 3 ft gauge; c 1904 – c 1906.

Gorgle: 3 foot gauge; workmen from Lower to Upper Gorgle; 1927 – 1934.

Kinder Dam site: workers’ trains Hayfield – Bowden Bridge (where many lived) – Kinder Dam; June 1908 – 1912.

Langsett and Stocksbridge Railways (Sheffield Water): 1898 – 1903.

Longendale (Manchester Corporation); normally carried workmen and equipment between Bottom Yard at Tintwistle and Woodhead Dam at Crowden; 3 foot gauge; workers’ trains Tintwistle – Hollins – Woodhead; op 1871; electrified 1905; closed by 1968. Sunday School trips and special outings to 1939.

Royd Moor Reservoir (Barnsley Water): 3 ft gauge to Scout Head.

Stocks Reservoir (Fylde Water Board): c 1922 – c 1932; from Tosside.

WALES

Beacons site (from Cefn Coed, for Cardiff’s water supply): work on building railway began about April 1886. Notice given September 1885 that workmen’s train would be withdrawn, though work not finished until September 1897. Southern part of route used again for Llwynon Reservoir. Party to celebrate start of work travelled on line 28 June 1911; reservoir inaugurated 23 June 1926.

Elan Valley (for Birmingham’s water supply). 1890s to 1900s; trains for workmen and schoolchildren normally line ran from Noyadd Siding (for benefit of workmen living in Rhayader, who had to walk to the siding) to Elan Village (main encampment), Caban Coch, Pen-y-Gareg, and Craig Goch; on occasion of opening of dam Royal Train taking King Edward VII and Queen Alexandra ran through from main line to a special platform at Craig Goch at the reservoir itself (21 July 1904); other visitors were taken through, including excursions next day, by goods waggons with planks fitted as seats Passenger services ran to carry workmen to various sites and children to school at Caban Coch (see RM August 1907, p 121; CW Judge, The Elan Valley Railway, Oakwood, 1987).

Grywne Fawr Reservoir Railway, running from Abergavenny; line laid February-September 1913. At first workers used road transport between Llanfihangel and Cwmoyoy, about 1½ miles north; later rail through. Trains from Blaenycwm Village ran Tuesdays (wives on shopping trips to Abergavenny market), Thursdays (cashier to Newport) and Saturdays (men’s recreation) (RAC). Dam inaugurated 23 March 1928. Booklet history mentions Pont Escob (same as Cwmoyoy?); 3 foot gauge; workmen’s trains ran beyond Blaen-y-Cwm to dam site at Grywne Fawr.

Ystradfellte: line from Hirwain (Neath Reservoir). Work began October 1907; contract completed end 1914. Workmen’s train from Hirwain to Penderyn taken on to site by contractors’ engine – at least 6 second-hand carriages bought for this.

4: Colliery lines

Most of those listed below only provided services to take miners to and from work; some also provided services for children, whole families on Saturdays and even the occasional excursion.

C. E. Mountford, Rope & Chain Haulage ..., Industrial Railway Society, 2013, includes information on coal and iron mine workers’ services.

SCOTLAND

Broomfield Colliery: miners’ service from here to Canderside Sidings (connection to [Cal] between Stonehouse and Dalserf).

Callendar Coal Co: south of Falkirk (High). Advert in Falkirk Herald 14 December 1876 said that had formed private railway to Canal and to main line of NB at Falkirk. At one time provided passenger service (probably very primitive) from Glen village to pits. Fatal accident (31 July 1914) to miner at No 14 Pit who had fallen off buffer of wagon in which he was travelling while standing on it ready to jump off (Scotsman 1 August).

Variously privately-owned lines in area between Thornton Junction and Methil (see Wemyss, especially for detailed maps):

From near brickworks in Cowley Street Denbeath, north of Methil where new houses had been built, to isolated Earlseat Colliery, some distance east of West Wemyss station; service began late 1903? (work on line began July, finished in four months); ended May 1926 when outcome of General Strike was decision not to reopen colliery.

From Denbeath to Scott’s Road, just north-west of Wemyss Castle station; dates?

From Cowley Street Depot, Denbeath to Michael Colliery and Lochhead Colliery, both west of Wemyss Castle station (at earlier time reached from Scott’s Road?); March 1937 to ? for miners when bus strike deprived them of usual transport to work – timetable issued.
NORTHERN ENGLAND

Ashington Coal Company: miners 1895 to 1964; (Linton – New Moor – Ashington). Regular passenger services available to all from Hirst (Ashington) to Linton Colliery and Ellington Colliery, last ran 15 May 1966.

Backworth Colliery: line to Percy Main carried miners and wives 1914 to 1918.

Brampton Railway: network of services on line from Brampton to Lambley; line originally to Midgeholme, extended to join Alston branch near Haltonlee Gate 5 January 1852 (for goods). Kirkhouse was one of the places served. There were connections with the NE at Milton/Brampton Junction at the western end, and the Alston branch at the eastern. (JN Charters, The Brampton Railway, Oakwood, 1971; B Webb & DA Gordon, Lord Carlisle’s Railway, Railway Correspondence & Travel Society, 1978). Described as ‘private railway, wrought by horse-power’ (PP 1); paid passenger duty 1834 to 1842 (at least) (PP 2); sometimes shown as Hartleyburn & Brampton. (Also see RM May 1942).

Broomhill Colliery: branch from separate station beside Amble [NE]; perhaps intermediate stop at Radcliffe Colliery; about 1894 to 1927 (see B. Rippon, The Amble Branch, Kestrel, 2007).

Low Laithes Colliery: colliery at Gawthorpe near Ossett, connecting line to Flushdyke; colliery dates 1892-1928; ‘it is said that’; paid passenger duty 1834 to 1842 (at least)

Dalton Main (near Rotherham) (Minor).

North Walbottle Colliery: line to Lemington; ? to 1968.

Seaton Burn Waggonway (alias Brunton & Shields Railway): Gosforth to Hazlerigg Colliery (variant spellings seen); op ?: included stop at Jubilee Road, Coxlodge (A. Young, from Subterranean Britannica: Disused Stations website, including information from locals, referring to use certainly in late 1950s).

Sheffield Coal Co: Brighton to Birley Vale, Birley East and Birley West Collieries.

Wallridge: Kirkheaton Colliery Co built 7 mile line from colliery (north of Hexham) to Darras Hall in 1927. Used for 1 mile passenger service (using old NB coach) from Kirkheaton to short platform serving miners’ cottages at Wallridge. Colliery closed 1929 (NE Express August 2006, p 102).

Waterloo Main Colliery near Leeds: Cross Green to Temple Pit (op 1860; clo 22 August 1959). intermediate stops at Park Pits and Pontefract Lane.

Mountford mentions these in Durham:

Bowes Railway, for employees (p 62);

Chopwell & Garesfield – in November 1899 agreed would buy passenger carriage; not known if did (p 68).

Rainton to Seaham – ‘according to one local source’ Saturday only service along branch of Londonderry from 1831 to ? (line closed altogether 1896) (p 226).

Whittonstall – service ended 1961 (p 98).

Miners’ passenger services operated on the Bridgewater or Central Railways of the Manchester Coalfield until the 1920s, using ex-North London carriages (G Hayes, Collieries & their Railways in the Manchester Coalfield, Landmark, 2004); on p 164 there is a photo of one at Ashton Field’s Colliery, north of Walkden.

MIDLANDS

Apedale Colliery – see APEDALE in Section 4.

Brereton Colliery near Rugeley.

Cannock and Rugeley Colliery Company: Hednesford to Cannock Wood Colliery; 1908 – 1955 and 1958 – 1963; an agreement of 6 October 1908 between LNW and Colliert Company allowed latter to run trains over stretch of its line.

North Staffs Coal & Iron Company: branches from Chatterley to Bradwell Wood Sidings and Talk o’ th’ Hill; ? to c 1900.

Whitfield Colliery Company: Greenhead Wharf at Burslem – Chatterley – Chell – Whifield; this also carried ordinary passengers in open wagons from 1887 to 1923 (NS;U); also stops at Pinnox Crossing and Pittshill Halt; see CHELL JUNCTION (Section 4).

Apedale and last three were all linked to the NS system.

Plumley Colliery in Moss Valley, near Eckington, was connected to Mid just north of Eckington & Renishaw by ‘the penny engine line’ – named after charge for passenger use (in coal trucks); closed by 1909 (K Grainger, Scenes from the Past No 43, Sheffield Victoria to Chesterfield Central, Foxline, 2002, p 89).

Nailstone Colliery: used for Freemasons’ Party from Bagworth to Nailstone Colliery 10 June 1909 (first-class ticket shown p 41 of MI Bray’s Railway Tickets, Moorland, 1986).

SOUTH WALES

Blaenavon / Blaenscaen: to Talywain Navigation Colliery until at least January 1967.

Graig Merthyr Colliery: ran regular service between platform at level crossing over A48 at Pontardulais (over ½ mile east of main station where there was a small platform) and colliery from ?; still running 3 July 1970 but ceased soon after; intermediate platform at Banc-y-Bo. (See Railway Bylines April/ May 2007; internet item on South Wales paddy-trains).

Powell Duffy (Minor); details?

Tredgar Iron Company: Tredgar Yard to Ty Trist Colliery. Intermediate platform at Whitworth Colliery. Colliery ceased production in 1922 but shafts retained for ventilation of Ty Trist, which ceased production 31 January 1959 so service would have ended then or earlier (S Berry).

Minor also lists Shirley: site, details?
5: Other lines that carried workmen

AVIEMORE. Forestry workers taken to work sites from a yard near the south end of Aviemore station, 1917 to 1919.

BROMBOROUGH PORT. Branch from Port Sunlight operated by Lever Brothers when public station op 4 May 1941; ceased 1959 (Birkenhead); also used for centenary celebrations in 1988. (M Lister, The Industrial Railways of Port Sunlight, Oakwood, 1988).

BURTON-ON-TRENT: extensive system of lines serving breweries; Bass (others too?) owned passenger coach used for taking visitors around their sites (RM February 1927).

DOLGARROG LIGHT RAILWAY: linked station to aluminium works; by February 1917 operated free workmen’s service along 1½ mile line; operated until about 1932 (see Industrial Railway Society’s North Wales, p 241).

FAWLEY oil refinery. Passenger service from Jetty to Workshops; began before 1926; after 1945 ran only as required (source as Croshalt, Military section).

GUEST, KEEN & NETTLEFOLD – from Minor, no details.

HENDRE-DDU TRAMWAY: 1890s to 1939; quarrymen to/from Aberangell (Mawddwy, especially photograph p 96).

IRLAM soapworks. Branch from Irlam operated by Manchester Ship Canal Company, 9 January 1893 to Friday 26 June 1959 (last train) (RM October 1959).

KINLOCHLEVEN: ‘Pig Express’ transported workers around site – Blackwater Reservoir, for aluminium smelting plant; photo suggests also used for showing guests around. Dates? (B Fairweather, A Short History of Kinlochleven, Glencoe & North Lorn Folk Museum, late 1970s?).

LINCOLNSHIRE Potato Railways. Many short lines in the Boston, Spalding and Epworth areas provided potato pickers with transport to the fields (SS Squires, The Lincolnshire Potato Railways, Oakwood, 1987).

MANCHESTER Ship Canal (Trafford Park Estate). Extensive internal system for moving goods about dock system; passenger coach took dockers from one site to another. (D Thorpe, Railways of The Manchester Ship Canal, OPC, 1984).

OXFORDSHIRE ironstone quarries near Banbury; workmen’s service, Banbury Penhill – Wroxton, ceased from 2 October 1967.

PADARN Slate railways. Two 1 foot 10¼ inch gauge lines arranged so that 4 ft wide trucks could be employed on them; velocipedes (hand- or foot-powered) from opening, 3 March 1843. A regular workmen’s all days, at own risk, service started in August 1895 (1892 just talk of one) with stops at Penscoins; Bethel; Pontrythall; Staba/ Craig Dinas; Penllyn; Gilfach Ddu. Map also has Cefn Gwyn Crossing Halt {Penscoins – Bethel}; Pensarn Halt and Crawia Halt {both Bethel – Pontrythall}, but not Craig Dinas; Gilfach Ddu also known as Dinorwic Quarry; U says Crawia perhaps alias for one of Halts at Pontrythall Mill East and P M West; likely that there were changes over time? Temporary platforms in use at Gilfach Ddu 10 May 1902 for visit of Prince and Princess of Wales; Assheton-Smith (quarry owner) brought his guests along his ‘private’ line from Port Dinorwic (Wellingdon Journal 17th). Service ceased 8 November 1947. (S Turner, The Padarn and Penrhyn Railways, D&C, 1975; also see RM August and September 1974).

PENARTH Railway & Dock Company ran trains from No 4 Tip at Penarth to ‘The Grange’ for workmen and others connected with dock business. Service started before 26 January 1866, when there was a mention in The Cardiff Times (RAC).

PENRHYN Railway. Slate quarries: Workers’ service began 2 February 1879; ended 9 February 1951; stops were Port Penrhyn, Llandegai, Felin Hen, Tyn-y-Lon, Tregarth, Corrig-Llwydion, Penrhyn Quarries; (Source as Padarn). However J I C Boyd, Narrow Gauge Railways of North Caernarvonshire (Mawddwy, especially photograph p 96). 1½ mile line; operated until about 1932. (see Industrial Railway Society’s North Wales, p 241).

PETERHEAD ADMIRALTAL 2½ mile line from Peterhead Admiralty station to Stirling Hill; about 1884 to 1920. Government-owned line used for carrying granite to make breakwater at Peterhead Harbour. Work done by inmates of Peterhead prison, who travelled to/from work, with warders, on regular service of two trains each way daily (Aberdeenshire).

REDLAKE Tramway from near Ivybridge into central Dartmoor for china clay. Took men to and from work; 3 foot gauge; opened 11 September 1911 for goods; firm operating in 1932 failed and stock then sold. (M Smith, The Railways of Devon, Ian Allan, 1983; RM June 1952).

ROSEDALE branch. 27 March 1861 to 13 June 1929. As well as iron miners, carried railwaymen, families, schoolchildren, some local residents by goods train in brake van. Passengers on shopping trips were carried from Blakey Junction to Incline Top, walked the incline, train again to Battersby, then joined ordinary passenger trains. Children of workers at Incline Top taken to Blakey Junction and walked down to Farndale East where they went to school; they lodged the week with locals. (See Routhwiate; RH Hayes and J G Rutter, Rosedale Mines and Railway, Scarborough Archaeological and History Society, Research Report No 9, 1977 reprint.)
SCOLES: built standard gauge from Diss by W Betts, owner of local estate, mainly for farm produce. Passenger use by parties of visiting students – temporary wooden seats in square wagons. In use about 1850-85. (Article by NA Brundell & KA Whittaker, RM April 1955).

STEWARTS & LLOYDS (Corby) – from Minor, no details.

STOCKBRIDGE Railway. Line opened 14 February 1887 (Return) and passenger service provided from start. Workmen’s service from Deepcar, bay platform at main station (but track not connected to main line) to Stockbridge Lower Yard, mostly used by Fox’s steelworkers and pupils of Penistone Grammar School; these travelled free but others charged. Service ended 1931. (No passengers shown in Returns and, despite evidence, Brad Sh, e.g. 1916, said ‘does not carry passengers’). See article by Martin Connop Price, Railway Bylines, April 2007.

STRABATHIE (alias Blackdog) Light Railway. 3 ft gauge. Aberdeen area. Seaton Brick & Tile Co workmen from about 1900 to 1924 (U); also see end of 3 (Military) for Admiralty and for golfers see Murcar Railway, under ‘miscellaneous’.

TORRINGTON & MARLAND Light Railway. Description of formal opening, 5 February 1881 (Trewman 9th), hinted at full public use in future, but in the event used only by workmen at Marland clay pits and brickworks. Part of route was later used for the Torrington to Halwill line. Visitors were sometimes allowed to travel on the line, free and at their own risk. One such journey was described in Bideford, 1 June 1909. On the way from Torrington, sacks on the floor of an empty wagon provided the seating; on the way back, boards on top of the load of clay. Item in the paper gives impression that permission for such trips was readily granted. Regular workmen’s service Torrington – Dunsbear works and pit from January 1881 (before formal opening). From 27 July 1925 (opening of ‘regular’ line) cut back to service from Dunsbear Halt, connecting with trains between Torrington and Halwill. Narrow gauge system closed entirely 6 November 1971, but not known if passenger use survived closure of line to Halwill, 1 March 1965. Also see R Garner, The Torrington & Marland Light Railway, Kestrel, 2006.

WINCHBURGH Railway: built for carrying oil-shale mined by Oakbank Oil company; had passenger coaches for carrying workmen. Dates of opening of various parts of works: Duddingston No. 1 to Mine Niddry Castle refinery, 2 ft 6 in, electrically powered, 1902-1904; Duddingston No. 3 Mine, on short branch off this, 1907; Totleywells Mine, also on short branch, 1938; Philpston (later Whitecraigs) 1 and 6 at Whitequarries opened 1938, cable-hauled. Closures: Duddingston No. 1 during WW II; Duddingston No 3 about 1956, Totleywells 1960; remainder Friday 17 February 1961 [last day?]. See articles in Railway Bylines February 2004 and January 2012.

6: Miscellaneous lines

HOSPITALS (see Hosp):

a) Cheddleton – see LEEK BROOK section 4.

b) Whittingham Hospital Railway to Grimsargh: op about 1889 (Hosp) to 29 June 1957 (last) (Rly Obs Nov. 1958 p 359). See RM April 1934 and May 1957: passengers free; 12 trains daily each way in 1934, mostly workers. Ran from Whittingham. Hospital as Lancashire County Mental Asylum, County Asylum Whittingham and County Mental Hospital over time.

c) from Hellingly to Hellingley Asylum Hospital, July 1903 to 1931;

d) Haslar Royal Naval Hospital Portsmouth: standard gauge tramway from jetty to hospital opened in 1877; carried patients and senior visiting officers. Propelled by naval personnel. Removed after 1918 (Hosp);

e) Joyce Green and Orchard: 4 ft horse-tramway from LONG REACH, on Thames near Dartford, opened 1897 on. Patients brought by boat, then trams to wards. Originally all for smallpox sufferers, later Long Reach kept for these, others used for general infectious diseases. Orchard used for Australian troops during First War. Converted to petrol-powered haulage 1925; decision taken to move patients by road 1930 (Hosp);

f) Newcastle City Lunatic Asylum at Coxbridge was taken over by the military on 14 February 1915 as a military hospital (previous patients dispersed to other places). Some patients taken along line from West Gosforth directly into hospital grounds, others taken from West Gosforth station by ambulance. Site handed back to city 15 February 1921. (M. Walker, St Nicholas Hospital at Coxbridge, The Bulletin of the Fawdon and Coxbridge Local History Group, 10th Anniversary edition, 1997, via A. Young).

g) Hellingley Hospital / East Sussex County Asylum: patients, visitors, staff; op about 1900; clo 1931; [tramway branch from main station] (Course).

h) also see Hosp for information about ambulance trains and maps of Bulford, Codford and Larkhill (Fargo) in section on English Temporary Military Hospitals.

HYTHE PIER: (2 ft gauge) line opened July 1922 for passengers on ferry to Southampton (RM October 1929 and June 1980). Still open, primarily for ferry passengers, but visitors to pier (who have to pay toll) can use. No separate pier toll for ferry passengers. (E Vaughan).

MARKETS:

a) occasional enterprising locals allegedly used Gorseaddau Mineral Tramway (Portmadoc to Tremadoc) to carry produce part of the way to and from market (NGSC 1);

b) Wissington to West Dereham Abbey Sidings, 1905 to 1919 ?, for Tuesday and Friday market trips to Kings Lynn and Dereham.
PRIVATE ESTATES: to connect these to main lines:
a) Balderton to the Duke of Westminster’s estate at Eaton Hall – item in GW Mag July 1910 includes specific reference to passenger use by visitors to the Hall; 15 inch; see RM November 1898.
b) Blakesley to Blakesley Hall; 15 inch gauge; 1903 – 1943.
d) Carstairs House Tramway – electric, built late 1880s by Joseph Montieith to link his house to Carstairs station; included six-seater passenger carriage; became horse-drawn, goods only about 1895 (see K Turner’s Tramway Directory).

SCHOOLS: Newton/Fayles/Goathorn Tramway (built to carry china clay) took schoolchildren to Norden, for school at Corfe, 1920 – 1936 (RW Kidner, Railways of Purbeck, Oakwood, 3rd edition, 2000). One of clay wagons was adapted with seats and corrugated iron roof; local education authority paid 7/6 per day for this ‘school train’. Stop at Newton Village. Also see T Fairclough and E Shepherd, Mineral Railways of the West Country, D Bradford Barton, 1975, which contains photograph (p 90) of train being made ready in August 1935 for use of local scout troop.

SPORT and RECREATION:
a) Murcar Railway (previously Strabathie, which see under ‘Workmen’) for golfers; near Aberdeen; golfers carried on southern part of Strabathie, from their course at Berryhill (northern terminus) to Bridge of Don, by arrangement with Seaton Brick & Tile Co, from 5 June 1909; at first Saturdays only, but all week-days by April 1910. Original Murcar Links Golf Club officially wound up 27 December 1917; reborn (temporarily without ‘Links’) March 1918. Seaton Company went into voluntary liquidation June 1924 and golf club bought the southern part of the railway. Railcar withdrawn 31 January 1950, replaced by WG Pirie’s taxi from 1 February. He sold taxi on 15 June 1950 so railcar back, last run 30 June 1950. (See article by A Gordon Pirie, Railway Archive 17).
b) line from Dalmunzie Lodge, in the Highlands of Scotland, for deer hunting; 2’ 6” line laid out 1920 for Sir Archilbald Birkmyre; by time of RM January 1934 was in hotel use for guests. Ran to Glenochsie Lodge; closed April 1978 (via D. Lindsay).
c) Pensnett Railway (west of Dudley): Earliest uses: on opening day 2 June 1829, when called Kingswinford Railway, many official passengers were carried in ‘carriages’ and unofficial ones in coal wagons. In the summer of 1912 those attending meeting of The Iron & Steel Institute at Round Oak Steel Works were taken to newly-opened Baggeridge Colliery in wasted-out coal wagons with clean straw on floor; Earl of Dudley and guests made occasional pleasure [sic] trips over parts of system. (WKV Gale, The Pensnett Railway, Goose & Son, 1975). Later, service for a few days over August Bank Holiday every year 1928 to 1937 for Himley Fetes held for Earl of Dudley’s Estate work-people; joined train by temporary platform at ‘The Wallows’, then went via Barrow Hill incline, Askew Bridge and Baggeridge Colliery line to temporary platform at High Arcal, where line passed through corner of Himley Estate; intermediate stop on top of Barrow Hill. First year used mineral wagons fitted with benches; later South Wales colliery workmen’s sets borrowed from GW. Carried free, at own risk but had to have tickets (headed Round Oak Steel Works, Ltd) so that numbers could be controlled; numbers varied from 4,050 to 8,968.
d) shooting parties on Nocton Fen.
e) Kerry Tramway: 2 ft line built by J Naylor to carry timber cut on his estates to Kerry [Cam]; about 1887-91 one wagon fitted so that family and visitors could be taken on picnics to New Pool or nearby hills (D Cox & C Krupa, The Kerry Tramway and other Timber Light Railways, Plateway, 1992).
f) also see Camps, under dam construction.
g) Stanhope and Rookdale (old Weatherhill & Rookhope): from 1924 used for grouse shooting; ticket (souvenir?) lists Weatherhill Terminus, Whitley Rigg, Meadows Wall, Bells Hill, Bolts Law Terminus (@JF).
h) Duchal Moor Grouse Shooting Railway: 2 ft. Gauge; 1922 – 1970s; built by Sir James Lithgow on Duchal Moor near Kilmacolm; train could carry 20; began at Hardridge Farm with branches to Laverock Stone, Laird’s Seat and Smeath Hill. (BLN 13 April 2016, Wikipedia).
i) Prize fights – now under ‘P’ in Section 4.
NON-RAIL ITEMS

The Clearing House Hand-books included a number of places shown ‘P’ which were not directly served by rail but took passengers in close connection with rail services. Below is a list of those so shown; since it merely provides information from the Hand-books it cannot make any claims to comprehensive treatment. The place-names, with counties (sometimes abbreviated), are followed by the names of the companies listed as connecting with them, the overall dates they appeared and the points from which the connections were provided. The earliest possible date is 1877, when the Clearing House first provided such information; unless otherwise stated dates are inclusive (i.e. 1912 – 1929 would mean that it was included 1929 but omitted from the next book, 1938); ‘on’ means that the service was still shown when the Clearing House ceased to provide it (last amendment leaflet was issued in November 1964); xxxxx means that the information was provided in an appendix or amendment leaflet. The dates are those of appearance in the Hand-books, not the actual dates of use. The aim is to give a general idea of what was available so the listing of a particular company or connecting rail point does not mean that it was shown for the whole period shown for the destination. However, in one set of cases ‘/’ is inserted; these places were originally shown as served by the Highland Railway from Strome Ferry and from 1904 on were served by three companies from Oban [Caledonian], Kyle of Lochalsh [Highland] and Mallaig [North British]. Some of the September 1957a items were summer only. The list is divided into STEAMER, FERRY and ROAD services; the road (very occasional) items were probably the result of someone misunderstanding what sort of information should be sent to the Clearing House.

Since a complete and adequate collection of maps would require a major volume on its own, the aim here is to supplement basic information readily available elsewhere.

Route diagrams lettered A to G give a general idea of how selected main routes developed. The later, numbered, maps are intended to be used in conjunction with the text and Ian Allan’s Pre-Grouping Atlas. Bear in mind that all are designed to show particular passenger routes and others lines are omitted. A flexible approach has been used, varied to meet the needs of particular items. Some maps show all the stations which ever existed in a particular area, even though all were not open together; some all that existed at a particular date; some illustrate changes over time. Please note that in some cases the names shown do not exactly correspond with those in use at the time: the aim has been to make them as readily-identifiable as possible to the modern reader.

Different scales have been used to suit individual locations; north is generally at or near the top; a limited amount of distortion has been used for clarity. Most space is devoted to relatively early periods.

On the route diagrams thick lines show the original routes, thinner ones additions which provided shorter routes (‘cut-off’ lines). It should be noted that the dates provided for the latter are for when the section as a whole became available as a through route; parts were often in use earlier.

Services closed prior to the date given, or at a very early stage, are indicated by broken lines for routes and black infill for stations.

Airey and Clearing House maps have been used as the main basic source.

Much advice in the preliminary drafting was given by Stephen Bragg.

-----------------

Please note that the text contains revisions that were made after the sketch maps had been revised; as a result, maps 16g (for Morningside and Newarthill (1st); 20g (1840 fourth paragraph); 25 (Brockley Whins); 43 (Cleveland Port, South Bank, Eston, Warrenby); 131 (Margate) should be used in connection with the information in Section 4.

are reproduced on the following pages.

Route diagram A

A: to INVERNESS

Through journey from Aberdeen first possible 1858. No change of route has occurred north of Inverness.
B: to ABERDEEN

North British ran from Dundee to Aberdeen via F ri c k h e im from 1878 to 1883.

 Note that G l a s t e r l a w to F r i c k h e im absent from IA since it had been closed by 1922.

This part of an alternative route was available from 1878 to 1883 in conjunction with  apart from period when first Tay Bridge was in use.

All the thick-lined routes were available in 1848 except for the last two short stretches to Aberdeen itself, completed in 1850, and the direct route from Edinburgh to Larbert, also opened 1850. Travel from Edinburgh was possible earlier by using the Edinburgh & Glasgow (opened 1842) and changing in the Greenhill area.

(a) The Granton line originally used a separate station at Greenhill area.

(b) Initially Stirling – Perth – Dundee – Arbroath travel required road transport between stations at both Perth and Dundee.

A through service at Perth was first shown in Bradshaw October 1862. The link at Dundee was provided at the same time as the Tay Bridge was opened in 1878.

(c) See supplementary map below main area.

No diagram provided for southern Scotland since no material changes have occurred in the original Caledonian, Glasgow & South Western and North British main lines.
Map C

Through travel London to Gateshead first possible 1844.

E: Midland to LONDON

Original route available 1840

At first, passengers from London to Sheffield went via Masborough. From 2 February 1849, a more direct route was possible, using a stretch of the MS&I, from Beighton Junction to the latter's station at Sheffield. In 1870 the Midland opened their own direct route to Sheffield.

Detailed changes in Trent area omitted.

34: lines to PELTON

Early junction arrangements at Washington are not fully known.

The original service, which terminated at Durham Turnpike, ran via line opened in 1835. When service reappeared in 1862, it ran to Pelton, using line opened in 1850.

35a: HASWELL

Diagram based on Pasley's sketch map in 1844 inspection report; various minor railways, waggonways lines and extensions carrying only minerals omitted. Line from Sunderland (using cable haulage) passed under that from Hartlepool a little east of Hartlepool company's station; passenger carriages ran further on, just beyond points, to join a siding which ran back beside the running line, ending in turntable (A), just east of station (HASWELL a). Trains for Sunderland were assembled at (B). Line from C to points was steeply uphill; when carriages were released beyond the points they had sufficient momentum to climb gentle slope to turntable; then gravity could take them back past the points to rejoin the running line.

Third-class carriages were transferred between the lines but first and second-class passengers had to change trains - Hartlepool's carriages for these were too high for bridge (C), which also precluded the use of locomotives. Later through curve shown dotted with new station HASWELL b. Earliest 6-inch OS map also shows The Railway Coach approximately where the final station would be; was this the inn where passengers from Hartlepool were original dropped?

Some early points not established beyond doubt
In 1853 a 'circular' service was run from Victoria Dock to Manor House Street (reopened). In 1854 this was diverted to Paragon and Manor House Street closed again. By the end of 1854 Victoria Dock's service to Paragon had ended, but it was still in use as terminus of line from Withernsea opened earlier that year.
