

JOURNAL of the RAILWAY and CANAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY

DECENNIAL INDEX No. 1

Volumes I to X

INTRODUCTION

The first volume of the Journal of the Railway and Canal Historical Society was published in 1955; it consisted of four issues of duplicated typescript in quarto format. Commencing with the second volume, six issues were published each year until the end of the tenth volume, after which the Journal was published as a printed quarterly. A slight change in the method of reproduction was introduced with volume IX; this and the succeeding volume were produced by offset-litho process.

The first four volumes included not only original articles, compilations, book reviews and correspondence, but also material concerned with the day-to-day running of the Society, such as announcements of forthcoming events, accounts of meetings and visits, lists of new members and the like. Commencing with volume V, all such material was transferred to a new and separate monthly publication, the R. & C. H. S. Bulletin, a practice which has continued to the present time.

The purpose of the present publication is to provide a comprehensive and detailed Index to all the original material in the first ten volumes of the Society's Journal likely to be of interest to the canal or railway historian or student. To this end, the normal practice of learned journals has been followed by providing both author index and subject index, entries in the latter being made in multiple where justified. It is hoped that this index will be of value, not only to those possessing a complete set of those early Journals, but to all members of the Society.

In compiling this index some degree of selection has been made in order not to depart appreciably from the foregoing terms of reference. Thus all original articles, compilations of historical data (e.g. lists of Acts of Parliament, Opening of Railways, etc.) and book reviews have been indexed, as have almost all the contributed notes and correspondence.

Certain sections of the Journal have been indexed selectively, or have been omitted entirely, as noted below:

Editorials	...	... These dealing with matters of transient interest have been omitted.
"News from the Society"		... Most of the domestic affairs of the Society and its Groups have been omitted, but the more significant events in the history and development of the Society have been indexed.
"One Hundred Years Ago"		... Only those items having a factual content (e.g. accidents, openings, traffic returns, etc.) have been indexed.
Queries	...	... Omitted, unless the context of the query itself provides material of interest.
"Recent Literature"	...	... Omitted.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

1. The volume numbers on the original issues of the Journal were printed in arabic numerals for the first ten volumes. In this index, volume numbers are given in roman and page numbers in arabic. This is consistent with present Journal practice (Volume XI onwards).

2. The author index provides an entry for all articles, compilations, contributed notes and letters, the last being indicated by (L). Each author's contributions, entered in full original title, are arranged chronologically, except for the grouping of several items sharing a common title. In the earlier volumes of the Journal, many short contributions, notes and correspondence, appeared without headings. These have been given a short descriptive title to provide entries for the Index.

3. In the subject index, reference is given to as many aspects of each contribution as appears justified by its content, consistent with keeping the index to a reasonable size. Many entries also appear additionally under certain group headings such as Maps, Personalities, Stations, etc.

4. Books reviewed are all listed in a special section in the subject index, arranged alphabetically according to the author of the book. Correspondence resulting from book reviews is indexed in this same section and is entered immediately following the entry for the relevant book.

5. The more significant events in the history and development of the Society have been entered in the subject index under the heading Railway and Canal Historical Society.

DECENNIAL INDEX No. 2

Volumes XI to XX

INTRODUCTION

Decennial Index No. 1 to the Journal of the Railway and Canal Historical Society, published in 1973, covered the first ten volumes and included notes on the form and content of these earlier Journals. The project of providing a detailed index to all the original material published in the Society's Journal is continued and brought up to date in the present publication which covers Volume XI (1965) to Volume XX (1974).

A significant change was made commencing with Volume XI of the Journal. A printed publication replaced the earlier duplicated typescript and appeared quarterly in January, April, July and October each year until the completion of Volume XVIII (1972). Volume XIX (1973) also contained four issues, but these were published in March, July, September and December. The final volume of the decade (Volume XX, 1974) consisted of three issues (March, July and November).

Although the Journal has not been on general sale outside the membership of the Society, an exception has been made in the case of public and university libraries. It is a reflection of the growing interest in our subject of study that by 1974 well over forty such libraries were regularly subscribing to the Journal.

These brief notes on the Journal should not be concluded without paying tribute to the work of our Honorary Editor, Jeffery Spence, who has occupied the editorial chair for virtually the whole lifetime of the Journal, his appointment being recorded on page 15 of Volume I.

This index follows the same general plan as its predecessor. The first section is the author index, which gives a single entry for each article, compilation, note and letter, grouped under the appropriate author. This is followed by the subject index, where multiple entries have been made if justified by the subject matter. Group headings are also employed in this section to facilitate reference. Three appendices complete the index and these list, respectively:

1. Supplements to the Journal.
2. Books reviewed in supplements to the Journal.
3. Other Society publications in the period 1965-1974.

As in the earlier index, some sections of the Journal have been indexed selectively, or omitted entirely, as noted below:

Editorial announcements Omitted.

"One Hundred Years Ago" Indexed only if there is factual content (e.g. accidents, openings).

Queries Omitted unless the context of the query provides material of interest.

"Recent Literature" Omitted.

"Publications Received" Omitted.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

1. In this index volume numbers are given in roman and page numbers in arabic numerals.

2. Volume XI. Each of the four issues forming Volume XI was paginated individually. Indexing of this particular volume thus requires entries which will indicate the issue number in addition to the page number. The issue number is given in brackets after XI; thus XI(3) 16 indicates page 16 of the July issue (No. 3) of Volume XI (1965).

A further point to be noted about Volume XI is that issues 1, 2 and 3 showed the volume number in arabic (11), whereas for issue 4 (October 1965) the roman numeral (XI) was adopted, and this style was continued for all subsequent issues.

3. The author index provides an entry for all articles, compilations, contributed notes and letters to the editor, the last being indicated by (L). Each author's contributions, entered in full original title, are arranged chronologically, except for the grouping of several items sharing a common title. A brief descriptive title has been provided for untitled contributions.

4. In the subject index, reference is given to as many aspects of each contribution as appears justified by its scope, consistent with keeping the index to a reasonable size. Many entries also appear additionally under certain group headings such as Personalities, Stations and the like.

5. Books reviewed are all listed in a special section of the subject index, arranged alphabetically according to the author of the book, general and anonymous works being found at the end of the list. Correspondence resulting from book reviews is indexed in this same section and is entered immediately following the entry for the relevant book.

6. Books reviewed in supplements to the Journal are listed in Appendix 2.

7. A few entries in this index relate to Volume X and earlier. These have been inserted to provide reference to an earlier contribution which initiated discussion of some particular topic, or to remedy an omission from Decennial Index No. 1.

JOURNAL of the RAILWAY and CANAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY

CUMULATIVE INDEX No.3 Volumes XXI to XXVI

INTRODUCTION

Two cumulative indexes to the Journal of the Railway and Canal Historical Society, covering the first twenty annual volumes of the Journal, have already been published. Volumes I (1955) to X (1964) were indexed in Decennial Index No.1 (published in 1973); Volumes XI (1965) to XX (1974) were indexed in Decennial Index No.2 (published in 1975). In addition to the indexed material each of these publications included some general notes on the Journal; separate Society publications were listed in an Appendix to Decennial Index No.2.

It was originally intended to continue with this plan and deal with the succeeding ten annual volumes in a third similar index. It has now been decided, however, that each future volume of the Journal will span a three year period, giving nine issues per volume in place of the earlier three issues, the first of these enlarged volumes being Vol.XXVII (1981/1982/1983). The new volumes should thus be of sufficient size for each to be provided with a detailed index of the type used, hitherto, only in the cumulative indexes.

Cumulative Index No.3 has therefore been prepared to fill the gap between Decennial Index No.2 and the first of the enlarged volumes; it deals with Vol.XXI (1975) to Vol.XXVI (1980) inclusive and has been compiled on the same lines as its two predecessors.

Commencing with Vol.XXI the Journal was produced in the new international standard A5 size in place of the earlier octavo format and, from the second issue of this volume, photo-lithography was employed in place of the earlier letterpress printing. As a result of this change it became possible to include photographic illustrations in addition to maps and diagrams, thus considerably enhancing the value of the published material.

Volume XXV (1979) consisted of four issues in place of the normal three. The Society was a beneficiary under the Will of Maurice Greville, a founder member of the Society who died in 1977, and a Greville Memorial Issue (Vol.XXV, No.3) was compiled as a tribute to his memory.

In order to provide more space for original articles, book reviews were excluded from the Journal during the period under review and transferred to a series of Book Review Supplements which were published separately. A list of all books reviewed in these supplements appears as Appendix 1. Finally, other separate Society publications issued during the period are listed in Appendix 2.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

1. In this index, volume numbers are given in roman and page numbers in arabic numerals.

2. The author index provides an entry for all articles, compilations, contributed notes and letters to the editor, the last being indicated by (L). Each author's contributions, entered in full original title, are arranged chronologically, except for the grouping of several items sharing a common title.

3. In the subject index, reference is given to as many aspects of each contribution as appears justified by its scope, consistent with keeping the index to a reasonable size. Many entries appear additionally under certain group headings such as Personalities, Stations, Maps, and the like.

4. Appendix 1 gives the dates of issue of Book Review Supplements during 1975-1980 and lists all reviewed books under author's name alphabetically.

5. Appendix 2 lists in order of issue all official Society publications for the period 1975 to 1980. Bulletins, Tour Notes and publications of the Regional Groups of the Society are not included.

BOOK REVIEW INDEX

At the outset of Vol. XXVII of the Hournal book reviews were being published separately in Book Review Supplements. From the beginning of 1981 there were seven of these Supplements, viz:
