1920 - Tercentenary Handlist of English & Welsh newspapers, magazines & reviews

<https://ia601308.us.archive.org/23/items/tercentenaryhand00mudduoft/tercentenaryhand00mudduoft.pdf>

1920 Document published by The Times Newspaper listing "all" the English & Welsh newspapers, Magazines, and Reviews to date, together with start and end dates + brief history of the newspaper

It is entirely possible that the gaps in newspaper series are on Google, but the site is coy about releasing them. It has taken many attempts over several years to acquire this list and gaps get filled in when spotted. If you find a missing volume please share it with me for this master list

Full of interesting data, but challenging to locate. They understandably do not use standard names for English railway companies. The best way to locate items of potential interest is to put "England" into the search to refine the time taken.

The ASCE researched items in huge detail, and there are valuable insights to be gained of US view of UK practices at the time.

Directories & Gazetteers

Leicester University's Historical Directories Archive

This is a useful archive resource for tracking population numbers, station master and other senior staff at some principle stations as well as other traders in and around stations. Most counties have several, Lincolnshire is particularly well served. Remember they will be old boundary lines and relevant to the the dates of each directory so some numbers in particular may change if the area they are counting in changes between census dates which happened in year one of each decade.

Government Papers - Parliamentary Matters

House of commons/Lords Reports, Board of Trade, Royal Commissions Etc

UK Parliamentary Acts - including railway acts - the archive probably contains less than 50% of the acts passed - not sure if they have just not been scanned in, or if they are missing. Many critical acts are missing - but they are a good place to start.

Railways Archive - Accident Reports & multiple documents - This is a vast collection of railway matters that have been fragmented from larger compound docs - eg Biggs book of railway acts has been dissected into individual acts rather than keep the document whole - Board of Trade Accident Reports were often bound in annual or bi-annual books and each accident has been separated out. Nevertheless, this is still a really useful source website

<https://www.railwaysarchive.co.uk/>

Railways Archive <https://www.railwaysarchive.co.uk/> is a fantastic research website where there are details and scanned copies of over 9000 rail-related accidents and thousands of other documents.

Rail Maps online - This is an incredible resource that should be of interest to members who have call on where lines were located. It is possible to use the overlay setting to see where lines used to be and what is there now. Hours of fun!

A major source of information from a vast number of OS maps that are merged to provide a seamless coverage of what they have available. A crucial source of information for understanding how the railways developed

Perpetual Calendar - You can easily identify the day of the week of an historical event. Many of the railway-related publications were issued on a Saturday, but not all. The non-railway publications also tended to be weekly and Friday or Saturday were often chosen - must have been a headache for the distribution systems!
